PAUL WINS RECOGNITION FOR GENTILE CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:23-29; Galatians 2:1, 2, 9, 10.

GOLDEN TEXT—A man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ.—Galatians 2:16.

Persecution from outside was soon followed by what was even more serious—difficulty within the Church. If Satan cannot destroy God's work in one way, he cunningly tries another plan. Although the first council at Jerusalem (Acts 11) had decided that "to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life," the question did not stay settled, for there were persistent Judaizing teachers who now contended that even though the Gentiles could be saved, they had to come into the Church by way of Judaism and first fullfill the Jewish rite of circumcision.

I. A Serious Difference of Opinion—Grace Versus Law

The story of how this vital and fundamental question came up is found in the early verses of Acts 15. The entire future of the gospel ministry was in a sense dependent on the solution of this problem. Christianity is the only religious faith in the world that presents justification by grace as the way of redemption; all others follow (more or less) the path of salvation by works. The question now was: Shall works of the law be mingled with grace—can Jesus Christ alone save men, or is salvation through Jesus Christ plus something else? How was such a serious question to be settled? Should argument and strife be permitted to go on until the stronger party prevailed? Better judgment indicated the desirability of

II. A Christian Method of Settlement—Council not Controversy

There may be times when it becomes the duty of the Christian worker to take an uncompromising stand for the truth of God and refuse to be moved, come what may. But certainly there should be no such spirit in dealing with differing interpretations of Scripture on the part of sincere and earnest Christian brethren. How much would be gained in the Church today if, instead of magnifying differences and permitting personal desires and ambitions to intervene, men were willing to sit down in the spirit of Christ around the tables of Christian council and brotherhood, presided over and directed by the Holy Spirit (see Acts 15:28).

The whole question was honestly and carefully considered by the second council at Jerusalem, with the result that there was a vindication of the preachers of God's grace. After presenting a plain disavowal of those who had troubled them and subverted their souls (what a serious thing it is to teach error concerning God's Word!), the council being of one accord, gave recognition to Paul and Barnabas as men who had "hazarded their lives for the name of the Lord Jesus" and were worthy of confidence and support.

No man should think more highly of himself than he ought. Humility is a Christian grace which well befits a sinner saved by grace. But the Bible abounds with admonitions to honor one another, to recognize the laborer as being worthy of his hire, to give recognition to those who are over us in the Lord. The brethren at Jerusalem were thoughtful and courteous enough to so honor and encourage Paul and Barnabas. We could well follow their example in recognition of faithful servants of Christ in our own church or Community.

III. A Momentous Decision—Salvation by Grace

The final decision of the council is sent not only by Paul and Barnabas, but also by a committee from Jerusalem, a gracious gesture of fellowship. Courtesy is not out of place in dealing with even such difficult things as controversies on Christian doctrine—in fact it should be most in place in such a situation.

As a matter of record (a wise procedure in such a case), a letter was sent which, after addressing the Gentiles as "brethren," reviewed the history of the matter and then, without mentioning circumcision at all, puts upon the Gentiles "no greater burden than the necessary things." And what were these? Those things which relate to purity of life as those who were enjoying Christian liberty. The law of Moses need not be kept as a ground of salvation. They were saved by grace. But grace can never be the cloak of careless living, nor can liberty in Christ be interpreted as license to live in sin. We are set free in Christ, not that we may sin, but that we may "go and sin no more."

Blessed Day

Blessed is the day whose morning is sanctified! Successful is the day whose first victory is won by prayer! Holy is the day whose dawn finds thee on the top of the mount!—Joseph Parker.

TIPS to Gardeners

Fertilizer Usage

GARDENS can't go on producing excellent flowers and vegetables year after year without an application of fertilizer now and then. Because stable manure is difficult to obtain, a complete commercial fertilizer recommended by your dealer will prove most satisfactory. Before applying fertilizer, however, give consideration to a few simple, practical hints.

First, be cautious! Never apply fertilizer recklessly or over-abundantly. Don't be like the man who saw a neighbor get good results from a sparing use of fertilizer. He proceeded to apply 10 times as much, but expecting 10 times as good results—but his garden proved worthless.

Broadcast the complete fertilizer over the soil 10 days before planting, using about three pounds per square rod. Three or four weeks after planting, if the garden seems a bit backward, apply a side dressing. Sprinkle fertilizer lightly alongside the rows, about six inches from the plants; then cultivate. Apply only from one to two pounds per square rod of garden.

PREPONDERANT SENTIMENT

"AFTER one hundred and fifty years, notwithstanding expansion of territory, enormous increase in population and profound economic changes; despite direct attack and subversive influences; there is every indication that the vastly preponderant sentiment of the American people is that our form of government shall be preserved." —Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT

SEWING CIRCLE

A SMART button-front dress that you'll want in street materials like wool crepe, flat crepe and silk prints, as well as in house-keeping cottons, is No. 1723. Simplicity itself, it has lines that are very flattering to the figure. The princess skirt makes your waist and hips look slim; the tucked and gathered bodice gives a nice rounded bust line. It's just absurdly simple to make—a pattern you'll use time and again.

A Stock of Aprons.

With a busy summer coming on, you'll need a fresh supply of pretty and protective aprons, and here's a new pattern (1622) that gives you three different ways to make them. Two pinafore styles, and a dainty tie-around, they are all full and flaring, so that they look smart as your frocks. Gingham, percale, broadcloth and linen are nice materials for aprons like these.

The Patterns.

No. 1723 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 35-inch material and ½ yard for contrasting collar, if desired.

No. 1622 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 takes, for apron No. 1, 2⅞ yards of 35-inch material and 6 yards of braid. For No. 2, 2⅞ yards, and ¾ yard contrasting; for No. 3, 2⅞ yards, and 1 yard pleating or ruffling.

Spring and Summer Pattern Book.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book, which is now ready. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

ASK ME ANOTHER

A Quiz With Answers Offering Information on Various Subjects

The Questions

1. How does electricity produce light in an incandescent lamp?
2. What is the derivation of the word nihilist?
3. How high above sea level is Lake Champlain?
4. How many telephone calls a day are made in the national capital?
5. Who was called the "Expounder of the Constitution"?
6. What causes "the noise of the sea" in conch shells when held to the ear?
7. How much does it cost to telephone from a ship at sea?
8. How did the insect called praying mantis get its name?
9. How much is spent annually for public education in the United States?

The Answers

1. By heating the filament of the lamp. As soon as the filament becomes hot enough it becomes luminous.
2. It is from the Latin nihil, meaning nothing: one who denies real existence.
3. Ninety-six feet.
4. Telephone calls originating in Washington, D. C., now reach an average of 1,000,000 per day.
5. Daniel Webster.
6. The circulation of the blood of the listener.
7. The rate is $9.00 for a three-minute call when the ship is within 1,500 nautical miles of New York and $18.00 when it is over 1,500 nautical miles away.
8. When the praying mantis is stealthily waiting to seize another and smaller insect, he balances himself on his hind legs, and holds his front legs in the peaceful, folden attitude of prayer. He looks as if he were praying, and this is how he got the name praying mantis.
9. The latest figures available are $2,232,235,236 in continental United States for the fiscal year 1935-1936. In addition, $1,317,383 was spent for federal and territorial schools in Alaska.

I SAY, THERE'S NO OTHER TOBACCO LIKE PRINCE ALBERT FOR GETTING ALL THE SMOKING JOY THERE IS IN A 'MAKIN'S' CIGARETTE PRINCE ALBERT

JOHN DURKIN, busy hotel man, stepped outside with a friend who snapped this photo of him with his pocket tin of Prince Albert. "I've been enjoying P.A. for 5 years now," Durkin says, "and for easy rollin', taste, and mildness nothing beats P.A." Well, that's what you expect from a finer grade of tobacco, "crimp cut" for rollin' 'em, and treated to remove tongue-bite. Try a pocket tin as a starter—you'll never know how good P.A. is in a "makin's" cigarette unless you try it. No risk—just take hold of the iron-clad money-back offer. See reminder at right.

Drive one round on an Oliver Row Crop "70" with centrally mounted check row planter and you'll be convinced that the "70" has everything, does everything and is a beauty any way you look at it. Perfect checking with accurate seed drop and uniform depth means a proper start for the crop and easier cultivating later on. Central planter mounting enables you to watch the planting operation closely without strain, and to work up to short headlands. The Tip Toe Wheels never run in the planted row and do not pack the soil—in fact, they help cultivate it.

You'll like the way the "70" handles—smooth, lively, 6-cylinder power under finger-tip control from the comfortable driver's seat—automotive steering with automatic steering braking on the turns—Oliver Variable Speed Governor Control that enables you to use only the fuel needed to do the work—speed that cleans up planting in a hurry.

Pick your fuel and your "70". For gasoline, it's the specially designed "70" HC with high compression engine—for kerosene or distillate it's the "70" KD. Get a "70". See us for a demonstration of America's newest tractor—now!

Funeral Service Held Tuesday At Belmond For Mrs. Ella E. Kurtz

Funeral services were held at the Belmond Methodist Church, Tuesday, April 25, 1939, for Mrs. Ella Elizabeth Kurtz, 66, who died Friday night, April 21, at her home at Clear Lake, Iowa, where she had resided for the past few years. Mrs. Kurtz formerly lived with her husband and family on a farm near Klemme.

Services were in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service of Klemme and the Rev. J E. Lombard of Belmond, and the Rev. T. B. Collins of Clear Lake conducted the rites.

Interment was made in the family lot in the cemetery near Belmond and Mrs. Kurtz was borne to her final resting place by Russel Bell, Harry Jackson, John Chapman, Pat and James Quigley and Adolph Hunst.

The following obituary gives a history of Mrs. Kurtz:

Obituary

Ella Elizabeth Kurtz was born March 11, 1873 in western Pennsylvania. Her parents, Israel and Rebekah Knoll died while she was a small child, and she grew up in the home of an older sister. At the age of 17 she was united in marriage to James Kurtz and they lived on a farm near Albany, Illinois and there their twelve children were born and raised.

In the Spring of 1917 the family moved to Iowa. They farmed for ten years near Belmond, and then for four years they farmed the Weigman section near Klemme. It was there that the husband, James Kurtz, passed away June 5, 1929. Since then Mrs. Kurtz had lived in Clear Lake, Iowa.

She was sick but a few days and passed away Friday night, April 21, 1939 at the age of 66 years, 1 month and 10 days.

She leaves of her immediate family, eight daughters: Mrs. Wm. Tideback and Mrs. Ray Best of Belmond, Mrs. Ross Smith, Tampico, Ill., Mrs. Wm. Skalnik, Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Aaron Greiman, Garner, Mrs. Alfred Larson, Mrs. Clarence Lenning and Miss Susan Kurtz, Clear Lake; and three sons: Charlie Kurtz, of Garner, Mike Kurtz, Clarion, and Wm. Kurtz of Ventura.

She also leaves twenty-one grand children, and other more distant relatives and friends.

KARL PRIEBE FUNERAL SERVICE TODAY AT KLEMME REFORMED

Eighty Year Old Man Died Early Monday Morning

Funeral services were held today (Wednesday) at the Klemme Reformed Church for Mr. Karl Priebe, 80, who was found dead in his bed Monday morning, evidently his death being caused by heart trouble.

Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch gave the funeral sermon and the Wellemeyer Funeral Service was in charge of arrangements. Interment was in the Klemme Cemetery.

Following is the obituary as read from the pulpit by Rev. Grosshuesch:

Obituary

Karl Priebe was born on the 25th day of January in the year of 1859 at Luebke, Pommern, Germany. His parents later moved to Redlin in the same province. He was baptized in the Lutheran Church and received his religious training in the same church. At the age of 14 he was confirmed. As a youth he learned the trade of wagon maker. In the year 1880 he and his sister, Minna, left their home land and came to the United States, where he found employment at Milwaukee, Wis. Here he remained two years. In the meantime his parents had emigrated to America and located on a farm in Hancock County Karl joined his parents in Iowa and worked in home neighborhood as farm hand for some years. In 1885 he was married to Miss Aguste Buktan. They lived on a farm in Twin Lake Township for ten years. Five children were born, of whom one died in infancy. His wife died August 10, 1895.

On the 28th of March, 1901 he was united in marrigae to Mrs. Emilie Machall. In the year 1907 Mr. Priebe sold his farm south of Klemme and moved to Edgely, North Dakota with his family where he bought a farm. In 1916 they returned to Klemme, built a home and lived here since. He departed this life early Monday morning, April 24th, 1939 at the age of 80 years, 2 months and 29 days.

Mr. Priebe was a hard working man, a good husband and father. Throughout his life his lot was not easy, but he bore the cross of misfortune and tribulation patiently.

Surviving him and mourning his death are: his wife, four children: Herman, Charles of Edgely, North Dakota, Walter, and Mrs. Henry Metzgar of Blufton, Ind.; two brothers: Julius and Herman of Klemme; seven grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

SHAMROCKS RUNNERS-UP IN CO. BASEBALL MEET

Play Shut-out ball In Two Games; Take 5 to 3 Setback In Final

Coach Al Kingery and his Klemme High School baseball team made a trip to the county baseball tournament at Woden, Tuesday, and came within an ace of bringing back the first place trophy. They ran into one bad inning in the final game against Kanawha, however, and lost by a score of 5 to 3.

The record of the Shamrocks in the entire tournament was nothing short of remarkable Starting with the first round game at Goodell on Apil 14 when they eliminated their southern neighbors by a 3 to 0 score, the Klemme boys played shut-out ball until the sixth inning of the final frame. Corwith was forced to take the short end of a 1 to 0 count in the morning semi-final contest, and Kanawha was held scoreless until the fatal sixth when they pushed over all five of their runs.

Iron man Genie Kluckhohn pushed his southpaw slants past the Goodell hitters so effectively in the first game that he recorded a no-hit, no-run game for himself Grosshuesch, Grange and Kluckhohn did the scoring in this game after getting on base on their own hits Schoenwetter, Wicks. and Buseman were others who got safe blows in this game.

In the semi-final game against Corwith, an average of only four men an inning batted on each side, and each team was limited to four hits. Halligan pitched for Corwith, while Kluckhohn again went the route for Klemme. Klemme's one important run came when Wicks raced home from first on Buseman's long blow in the fifth.

In the final game, the Shamrocks got off to a three-run lead in the first inning when Grange got on on an error, Kluckhohn walked and Grosshuesch and Katter got successive hits. The game was a deadlock from then on until Kanawha's half of the sixth inning when Kluckhohn was just too tired to hold up any longer and gave up his first runs of the tournament. He had pitched fifteen successive shut out innings up to this point. Schoenwetter took up the pitching duties midway in this inning and stopped the attack after a couple more runs came in. After allowing one hit in the last inning he set down the three remaining batters in order. Tranier pitched for Kanawha.

Europe Faces Final Showdown In Democracy-Dictator Battle

By Joseph W. La Bine

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of the newspaper.

Europe

"There are in Europe two madmen . . . Hitler and Mussolini. There are in Europe two damn fools who sleep—Chamberlain and Daladier."

Such was the parting shot of Albania's King Zog as he fled Italian invasion. Symbolic of British-French lethargy were Mr. Chamberlain's warships, which lay at anchor off Greek Corfu, within cannon range of the invader. One shot, said Zog, would have stopped the Italians. But one shot might also have been the sendoff for a conflict more frightful than the one which started from a pistol shot at nearby Sarajevo 25 years ago.

When Il Duce captured Albania, a month had passed since Britain and France dropped their futile appeasement policy for a Stop Hitler—Stop Mussolini program. Poland, Rumania and Turkey were fairly well lined up with the democracies but such Balkan states as Jugo-Slavia, Bulgaria and Hungary knew when they were well off. Alignment with Britain would invite invasion from Italy or Germany. Meanwhile Berlin's covetous eyes began looking at Switzerland and the Netherlands, while Herr Doktor Paul Joseph Goebbels shouted from his propaganda office a German answer to the key question facing Europe today: Will Britain really fight to defend any lesser European nation's independence?

Herr Goebbels said no, and many an alert Britisher said the same thing, wondering if aggressive Germany and Italy were not right in maintaining that Great Britain has passed her empirical peak and is falling into decadence. Under the appeasement policy it was only passingly embarrassing for Mr. Chamberlain to make repeated concessions for peace's sake. But under the new policy Britain at last faces reality; Europe's dictators are obviously forcing a showdown to demonstrate that Mr. Chamberlain will never fight to protect them, therefore the little nations had best beg for mercy from Hitler and Mussolini.

Hence observers agree the worst of Europe's recurrent crises—and England's, too—may come within the present month. Neither Britain nor France have backed up their new umbrella-waving policy in the case of Albania, whose occupation was a direct violation of the Anglo-Italian pact of 1938. A swift German jab at Poland or an Italian march into Greece would provide the ultimate test; if Britain fails to march in such a situation, then European democracies are indeed decadent and the Old World has new undisputed masters in Hitler and Mussolini. At the same time Mr. Chamberlain's government would undoubtedly collapse.

On the other hand, if Britain and France act to block the next dictator aggression, there is a pathetically good likelihood of general European warfare.

Trade

State trade barriers are usually brainchildren of panicky, depression-ridden legislatures. Though sectional barriers (like North-sponsored high freight rates in alleged discrimination against poorer Southern states) are also to blame, most of them spring from a forlorn hope that the individual commonwealth can protect its own prosperity by discriminating against tradesmen from neighboring states. Sample barriers are: (1) preference to home-state industries, often resulting in monopolies and exorbitant prices; (2) excessively high license rates for out-of-state truckers; (3) unreasonable sanitary laws which bar dairy imports.

Most such regulations tread on questionable ground, assuming round-about jurisdiction over interstate commerce which is really a federal power. Early this year Washington became so alarmed that several officials like Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace threatened to use a federal mallet to knock down the barriers. The most important result came from intervention by the Council of State Governments which called a "national conference on interstate trade barriers" in Chicago. Surprisingly, though most of the 44 states represented were themselves guilty, they condemned barriers to a man. A clear-cut prophecy, actually keynoting the session, came from Missouri's Gov. Lloyd C. Stark:

MISSOURI'S GOV. STARK

"The point is this: If the states try to get these additional revenues at the expense of their neighbors they are gaining only a temporary advantage. They are laying the groundwork for an unprecedented economic breakdown and eventually nationwide financial chaos which will affect their own citizens along with citizens of all other states."

Assents came from U. S. Solicitor Gen. Robert H. Jackson and Fred I. Kent of the American Bankers' association. Principal dissent was from Arkansas' Gov. Carl Bailey, whose complaint about sectionally discriminating freight rates was finally included in the conference's resolutions. Other condemnations: (1) discriminatory state alcoholic beverage laws; (2) sales taxes and "use" taxes, in states where no "offset" provision is made for goods produced in another state having sales tax; (3) discriminatory out-of-state truck permits.

Homeward bound delegates were admonished to work generally for uniform regulations among the various states. If they must discriminate, it was decided to do it "directly, and not by masquerading under the taxing power." But every delegate knew it would be a tough job—even political suicide—to destroy the invisible barriers which folks back home consider a justifiable protection for their state's industries.

People

Invited, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, back home to help the house foreign affairs subcommittee in an urgent task, shaping an "ideal" neutrality policy in the event of war.

Needed, a successor for Illinois' late Sen. James Hamilton Lewis, age-concealing, sartorially elegant Democratic statesman since the 1890s.

Facing trial, Kansas City's Democratic boss, Thomas J. Pendergast, on grand jury indictment charging income tax evasion.

Aviation

Some 4,100 miles southwest of San Francisco and 3,250 miles northeast of Australia, just south of the equator, are Canton and Enderbury islands, the former named for a Massachusetts whaler wrecked there in 1854. Both islands went officially unclaimed until March, 1938, when President Roosevelt saw them as a vital link in U. S. defense and a logical base for trans-Pacific aviation. When Great Britain disputed the claim it was announced last August that both countries would use the islands for commercial aviation, but not until recently was a formal treaty signed. Its 50-year provisions: U. S. and British administrators will reside there, exercising powers to be determined by consultation; American interests will build an airport, to be used by British aircraft in return for a fee.

Pacific aviation is boomed by the pact, for Canton and Enderbury lie only 1,850 miles from Hawaii, directly on the route a ship would take to Sydney, Australia. Canton boasts a quiet lagoon nine miles long and three miles wide, ideal for planes.

But aviation to the contrary, many a congressman was dubious when asked to ratify the treaty. Reason: If Britain were involved in war, an attack on British property in the Pacific might force the U. S, to defend the islands, thereby getting its own feet in the international puddle.

Agriculture

While congress wrestles with a huge U. S. cotton surplus which threatens to engulf southern planters unless it can be dumped abroad, department of agriculture officials begin to see a faint sunrise over the huge mountain of wheat which constitutes the other major part of America's farm problem. With winter wheat well under way and spring planting estimates taking definite form, the situation might be summarized as follows:

In 1938 the total U. S. wheat production was 931,000,000 bushels (687,000,000 in winter wheat, 244,164,000 in spring wheat). But 1939's winter planting is cut to 46,173,000 acres compared with 56,355,000 last year, and spring planting is dropping about 17 per cent under 1938. Thus 1939 prospects are for slightly more than 700,000,000 bushels, only a mite above normal domestic requirements. This means the July 1 surplus of 275,000,000 bushels (compared with 154,000,000 bushels a year previous) will be reduced if export volume is maintained during the coming season.

The "if" remains a big factor, however. U. S. delegates to the forthcoming world wheat conference can boast that America leads the way in trying to slash surpluses, but that accomplishment holds little satisfaction because pace-setting U. S. farmers can find no nation falling in line behind them. With most European plantings bigger than last year, with Argentina just harvesting its second largest crop on record, and with Canada almost certain to offer a price guarantee, there remains slight hope that America's carry-over from last year will be reduced materially by sale abroad.

Miscellany

Total U. S. expenditures for the fiscal year's first nine months ($6,764,353,436) exceeded income ($4,390,177,312) by $2,374,176,124.

● Ninety-five per cent of the voters in Europe's tiny Liechtenstein (population, 12,000) have signed a privately circulated declaration rejecting union with Germany.

● The U. S. Steel corporation will soon begin marketing completely prefabricated steel buildings, including residences for small towns.

Taxation

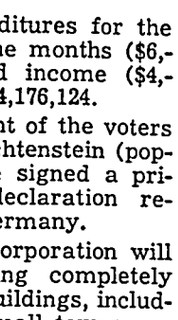
Time was when the ambitious U. S. mother wanted her son to be a banker. But nowadays the hand that counts money keeps far less of it. Today's ambitious mother should tutor her son (or daughter) to enter the motion picture industry. At Washington, the house ways and means committee received its annual list of top flight U. S. wage earners and their salaries for 1937, disclosing that Movie Magnate Louis B. Mayer led the pack with $1,296,503 ($1,161,753 as production executive for Loew's, Inc., $134,750 as vice president of Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer). Second place went to Loew President J. Robert Rubin, $651,123; third, Publisher William Randolph Hearst, $500,000; fourth, Loew's N. M. Schenck, $489,602.



Louis B. Mayer

Of 63 salaries topping $200,000, an even 40 were reported by movie workers. Highest paid cinema star: Greta Garbo, $472,499. Highest paid radio star: Maj. Edward Bowes, $427,817. Highest paid industrialist: International Business Machines' Pres. Thomas J. Watson, $419,398.

One consolation for bread-and-butter workers is that the more a man makes, the more he pays the government. Sample: More than $800,000 of Louis Mayer's $1,296,503 probably went out in federal taxes. On net incomes of $50,000, the government gets 17.7 per cent, or $8,869; on $1,000,000 it gets 67.9 per cent, or $679,044. Often heaped atop this levy is a state income tax, like New York's, which ranges from 2 per cent of the first $1,000 taxable income to 7 per cent of all taxable income over $9,000.

Gabriel Arthur, Wanderer

IN THE spring of 1673, Capt. Abraham Wood of Fort Henry (now Petersburg) in Virginia sent James Needham, a South Carolina gentleman, and a lad named Gabriel Arthur into the Southern Appalachians to trade with the Cherokees. They were warmly welcomed but later Needham was murdered by a treacherous Occaneechi brave.

The Cherokee chief promised Arthur to escort him home the following spring. In the meantime he took Arthur to a village of friendly Mohetons on the banks of the Great Kanawha. Returning from this visit the Cherokees went out of their way to attack a village of Shawnees. In the battle which followed the English lad was wounded twice by arrows and taken prisoner by the Shawnees.

Because he had long hair, the Shawnees suspected that their captive was not a Cherokee and when they scoured off the accumulated dirt they were amazed at his white skin. When he told them, by sign talk, that he would return to trade with them if they would release him, they promptly sent him on his way to the Cherokee country.

Reaching the town of his former friends, he set out for Fort Henry the following spring accompanied by 18 Cherokee laden with furs for trading. Narrowly escaping death at the hands of the hostile Occaneechies, Arthur reached his home after one of the most eventful experiences that probably ever befell an English lad of his years. He had penetrated farther into the Ohio country than any of his fellow-Englishmen but history does not record whether or not he lived to see his people triumph over the French in their contest for that rich land.

America's 'Prime Minister'

IN 1736, Christian Priber arrived in the Cherokee Indian village of Great Tellico in what is now east Tennessee. He had left in South Carolina everything he owned except some books and writing materials.

Priber soon won the friendship of the Indians by adopting their dress and mode of living and insured their further confidence by marrying the daughter of Moytoy, chief of the tribe. Then, as one of their own, he taught the redskins to read and write.

Having won their deep respect and encouraged their dependence upon his plans, he staged an impressive ceremony. While war drums thumped, he, the mild-mannered teacher, short in stature, unimpressive in appearance, "crowned" the tall and stately Moytoy "Emperour" of the "Kingdom of Paradise." Diplomatically, he created other titles for the lesser chiefs and there was a colorful ceremony as they paraded before the throne of their "emperour." But, most important of all, was Christian Priber's own appointment as "prime minister."

His next step was his undoing. He sent an "official" communication from Great Tellico, capital of the Cherokee "kingdom," to the governor at Charleston telling him that the English must leave America. Not because they took him seriously, but because they feared French influence, the English military authorities captured America's only "prime minister" and kept him prisoner in Frederica, Ga., until he died.

Schermerhoorn's Ride

Listen my reader and you shall learn
Of the midnight ride of Schermerhoorn.

PAUL REVERE didn't have such a hard time of it in April, 1775, when he rode 15 miles on the best turnpikes in the colonies to be the inspiration for Longfellow's famous poem. But when Symon Schermerhoorn, on the night of February 8, 1690, rode from Schenectady, N. Y., to Fort Orange (Albany), he made the most courageous ride in American history.

Symon was in the village of Schenectady on the night it was destroyed by the French and Indians. He knew that the small garrison of 24 men could not resist very long and that the attackers, flushed by victory, probably would go on to Fort Orange for more plunder.

It was bitter cold and the snow was coming thick and fast. Although wounded in the thigh, he seized a stray horse and started the 20-mile ride of warning. Schermerhoorn rode for six hours plunging through drifts that were impassable a few hours later. In spite of his wound and the severe weather and the fact that he passed many farm houses where others could have taken over his mission, he kept courageously on until he reached Fort Orange. In front of the gates, gasping warning, he collapsed.

The severe conditions under which he made his ride are shown by the fact that the French and Indians were unable to continue their foray and were forced to return to Canada.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—On August 2 of this year, Dr. Gustavus Adolphus Eisen will be 92 years old. It was his research that established, so far without authoritative challenge, the Chalice of Antioch as the "oldest surviving record of the faith of the Apostles." The chalice was exhibited during holy week at St. Thomas Episcopal church, New York, with the conjecture that its inner cup may have been the beginning of the legend of the Holy Grail. In a book published in 1926, Doctor Eisen established the use of the chalice in the Church at Antioch not later than the end of the first century of the Christian era.

Dr. Eisen at 91 Still Delves Into Past and Future

At the age of 85, Doctor Eisen learned to decipher cuneiform inscriptions, to write a treatise on Mesopotamian cylindrical seals, or glyptics. In 1936, he published 15 volumes summarizing his research in legends of the Holy Grail, and is now at work on studies of early portraits of Christ and the apostles. His eyesight and hearing are still good and he puts in a full working day.

Doctor Eisen has published more than 150 books covering his amazing range of inquiry in a half-dozen sciences, including studies of earthworks, fig culture, archeology, ancient grass, portraits of George Washington and geological, zoological and botanical subjects.

Born in Sweden, he was a frail child, unable to attend school, frequently in the country, with tutors who stimulated his scientific interests. In the University of Upsala, he wrote a thesis on earthworks which attracted the attention of Charles Darwin. His correspondence with Darwin put him in touch with Alexander E. Agassiz, the American naturalist, and, when he obtained his doctorate in 1873 and removed to America, the two men formed a long and fruitful association. For 40 years, Doctor Eisen was on the Pacific coast, working at times with the late Luther Burbank on plant research.

Horticulture Is Modern Field Of the Scientist

Last year, the California Academy of Science honored him as the founder of the state's great fig-growing industry. Smyrna figs frequently had been taken to California, but there was no yield. Doctor Eisen studied this problem and reached the conclusion that the failure was due to lack of fertilization. Male trees were brought over and California began gathering fig crops.

The chalice, which had been found in the ancient ruins of Antioch in 1910 and placed in the Louvre, in Paris, was brought to this country in 1914, to safeguard it during the war. Doctor Eisen's conclusion was that it had been made by a great Roman artist, Appollodorus, who lived from 50 to 120 A. D.

Doctor Eisen's avid scientific studies continue on, unabated, into his tenth decade. He is a bachelor. None has ranged farther into the past, while pressing eagerly into the future in his zest for knowledge.

ON A cotton patch in the high mountains of North Carolina, a lad leaned on his hoe, and, in his imagination, followed out in the world the 11:15 train, in the valley far below. One day, he did follow the lingering plume of smoke and that is linked, in the long chain of causation, with the Sperry corporation's harbinger of one more spring. The lad with the hoe, one Thomas A. Morgan, president of the corporation, announces a net income of $4,961,398 for 1938, against $2,949,860 the year before.

Gyroscope Aids Lad With Hoe in Whirl to Wealth

He joined the navy when he hung up his hoe, qualified as an electrician, and, running a gyroscope, sank his career in this magic whirligig. That geared him in with the Sperry company, and, just as the great war was breaking, he chased the Czar's navy all over the far-eastern map to sell it gyroscopes. He caught up with it and rang up a sale, in one of the epics of free American enterprise.

Thereafter he planted gyroscopes on all the great fighting ships of the world and sailed a true course to the presidency of the Sperry corporation in 1928. He became one of the grand panjandrums of aviation. He says he got where he is by thinking of today, and its demands, rather than of yesterday or tomorrow. He had ten months' schooling when he trailed the train in the valley.

Omaha Turns Back the Clock to 70 Years Ago When North America Was First "Spanned With Steel"

The "Wedding of the Rails" at Promontory Point, Utah, May 10, 1869, completing the first transcontinental railroad. Central Pacific engine on the left, Union Pacific on the right.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

© Western Newspaper Union.

FOR four days, April 26 to 29, Omaha, Neb., is turning back the clock 70 years and visitors arriving there during that time will probably rub their eyes in amazement. For they will find that this modern American city has been transformed into what resembles a frontier village of three-quarters of a century ago.

They will see the Union station covered with logs to a height of 10 feet to give it the appearance of an old-time blockade, and, as they cross the Plaza in front of the station, they will be greeted by shrill war-whoops from a band of Brule Sioux Indians whose lodges are pitched there. On the courthouse lawn they will find another Indian village and as they walk down one of the principal streets in the business section they will see a solid block of buildings covered with "false fronts" similar to those which lined Omaha streets back in 1869.

Prairie schooners and stage coaches, instead of automobiles, will be parked along the curbs with here and there a picturesque frontiersman in his fringed buckskin suit and fur cap lounging in his saddle as he passes the time of day with bewhiskered citizens, wearing tall beaver hats, or ogles some pretty girl dressed in crinoline, hoopskirt and quaint, old-fashioned bonnet. In fact, some 50,000 of Omaha's 200,000 people will be wearing the costumes of 1869 during those four days.

"Golden Spike Days."

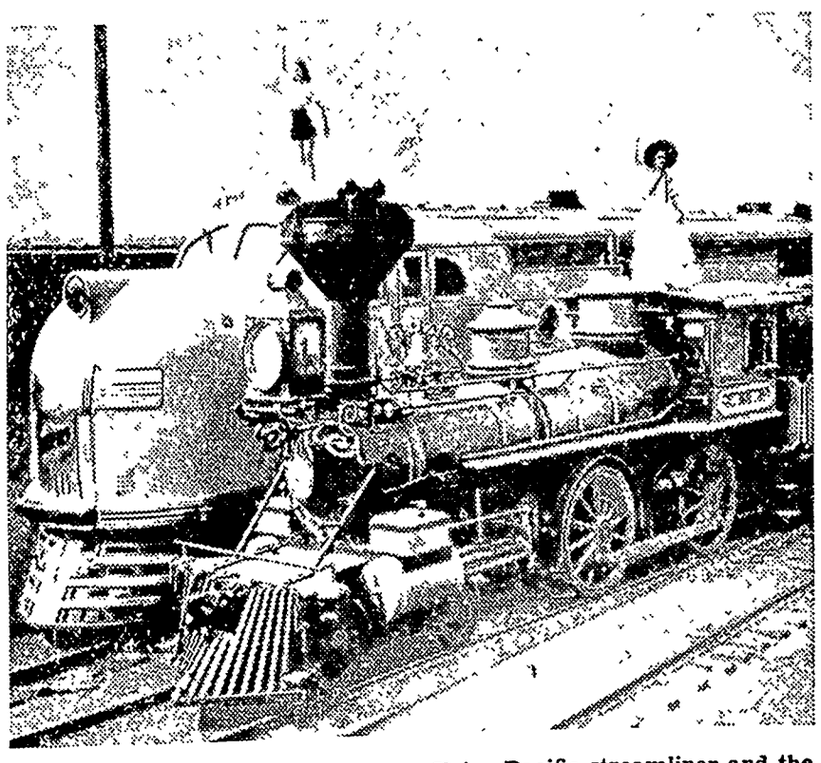
"Golden Spike Days," they're called, and they commemorate the seventieth anniversary of the event which really united these United States. It was the driving of the final golden spike when the eastward-building Central Pacific and the westward-building Union Pacific met at Promontory Point, Utah, on May 10, 1869, to form the first transcontinental railroad. Why, then, should this celebration be held in Omaha rather than out in Utah? There are several good reasons. One is that headquarters of the Union Pacific railroad are in Omaha and the history of the U. P. has been bound up closely with the Nebraska metropolis and its twin-city-across-the-Missouri, Council Bluffs, Iowa, from their beginnings. Another is the fact that the world premiere of a new motion picture called "Union Pacific," based upon the building of the first transcontinental railroad, will be held in Omaha during the celebration.

During the celebration there will be another East-West meeting in Omaha which is somewhat reminiscent of the historic meeting at Promontory Point 70 years ago: On Thursday morning, April 27, a special train will arrive from the East bearing W. A. Harriman, chairman of the board of directors of the Union Pacific, all other members of the board and a large number of eastern industrialists. That afternoon the old-time train used in the picture "Union Pacific" will pull into the Union station.

The engine on it will be the "General McPherson," one of the original U. P. wood-burning locomotives of the exact type used at Promontory Point. Behind this ancient iron horse will be two coaches of the same period, one of which is a replica of the business car used by Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, who was the chief engineer of the railroad during its construction period.

Coupled with this train will be the Union Pacific's giant new steam-electric locomotive and the necessary modern baggage and Pullman cars to accommodate the motion picture celebrities from Hollywood and others arriving from the West coast. Getting off this train will be W. M. Jeffers, president of the U. P., Cecil B. DeMille, producer of "Union Pacific," Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck, other members of the cast, and several western governors. That night the Easterners and Westerners will meet at a huge banquet in the Ak-Sar-Ben coliseum and, during the next two days, they will see and take part in a series of historical parades, pageants, luncheons, banquets and other festivities which have been arranged as a part of the celebration.



The Old and the New—A modern Union Pacific streamliner and the old-time locomotive, built in 1862, which was used in the motion picture "Union Pacific."

Such will be the highlights in the celebration of the event upon which the eyes of the whole nation were focused when it took place 70 years ago. For that event special trains, bearing notables from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, were run to Promontory Point, arriving on May 10. At a signal from Edgar Mills of the firm of Ogden Mills and Company of San Francisco, who was master of ceremonies, the two engines moved up to their assigned positions about 60 feet apart. Drawn up along the north side of the track were four companies of the Twenty-first infantry with their regimental band to furnish music for the occasion.

The scene which followed is described by L. O. Leonard, for many years historian of the Union Pacific, as follows:

The preliminaries completed, Edgar Mills stepped forward and asked for attention, while the Rev. J. Todd of Pittsfield, Mass., offered prayer. Next was the presenting of the spikes for the ceremony.

Doctor Harkness of the Sacramento Press in a brief speech presented Governor Stanford with a spike "forged with gold from the mines of California" and also presented, "from her laurel woods, a hewn tie, polished and with a silver plate properly inscribed."

Hon. F. A. Fryth, of Nevada, then stepped forward and presented to Dr. T. C. Durant, vice president of the Union Pacific, a silver spike, on behalf of the people of Nevada, with the sentiment, "To the iron of the East and the gold of the West, Nevada adds her link of silver to span the continent and wed the oceans."

Governor Safford of Arizona next presented a spike made of iron, silver and gold, saying: "Ribbed with iron, clad in silver and crowned with gold, Arizona presents her offering to the enterprise that has banded the continent and directed the pathway to commerce."

To these donors, Governor Stanford, on the part of the Central Pacific, responded, "accepting with pride and satisfaction these gold and silver tokens of appreciation and importance of the great work."

Maj. Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, chief engineer of the Union Pacific, responded for that company in a most happy manner. Mr. Coe of the Pacific Express company, then presented the officials with a silver spike-maul with which to drive the golden spike into the tie.

All preliminaries now being completed, Samuel B. Reed, who had had charge of the Union Pacific construction work, stepped forward, as did also J. H. Strowbridge, who held a similar position for the Central Pacific. They carried the laurel tie and placed it in its bed beneath the track.

Governor Stanford, grasping the silver spike-maul firmly in his hands, then took his position on the south side of the rail and Vice President Durant upon the north side. At a signal, Governor Stanford struck the first blow and then Doctor Durant the second blow and the golden spike was driven home. At the same instant the electric signal announced to the world the completion of the great enterprise. The crowd cheered and the band played the "Star Spangled Banner."

The ceremonies and visiting being concluded the trains backed off the scene and the crowd gradually faded away. By evening the scene was deserted and that night the coyote roamed over the locality, disturbing no one with his lonesome howl.

W. M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific, wearing the type of beaver hat which will be in vogue in Omaha during "Golden Spike Days."

Closely associated with the history of the first transcontinental railroad is the name of Abraham Lincoln. It came about in this way:

In 1858 Lincoln visited Council Bluffs on legal business for a client. General (then Colonel) Grenville M. Dodge had just returned from making a survey for a railroad west of the Missouri river. General Dodge says: "He heard of my return from the survey and on the porch of the Pacific House he sat with me for two hours or more and drew out all the facts I had obtained in my survey and naturally my opinion as to the route for a railroad west. I thought no more of giving this at the time than that possibly I might have given away secrets that belonged to my employers in this work. In 1863 while in command of the district of Corinth, I received a dispatch from General Grant to proceed to Washington and report to the President.

"President Lincoln informed me that I was sent for for a consultation in regard to the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific railroad. He remembered the conversation with me on the porch of the Pacific House and under the law he was to determine the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific railroad. Those who remember that time know what pressure was brought to bear on the President to name this point far north and far south of Council Bluffs. After a long conversation with me obtaining my views fully and the reasons for them, the President finally determined to make it on the western border of Iowa."

A "Pacific Union."

On July 1, 1862, President Lincoln signed the act to build the Pacific railroad. It was not a perfunctory procedure. He had advocated the passage of the act and the building of the road, not only as a military necessity, but as a means of holding the Pacific coast to the Union. There is no doubt but that the idea behind this enterprise was for a Pacific Union, which name reversed gives us the title of the railroad.

Not only did Lincoln establish the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific railroad opposite Section 10 in the Territory of Nebraska, but he also fixed the other boundaries on the western end of the line which was being built eastward from the Pacific. By the original railroad act the President was to fix the point where the Sacramento valley ended and the foothills of the Sierra Madre began.

The chief engineer had designated Barmores, 31 miles from Sacramento as the beginning of the mountains. The Supreme court decided the foot hills commenced at 30 miles from that city. Several attempts were made to bring this to the attention of President Lincoln but the President's occupation with heavier duties connected with the war prevented the action.

The time came, however, when it could not be longer delayed. It was important to the railroad company that the foot hill should begin as near as possible to Sacramento. Senator Sargent claims the credit of moving the mountain from Barmores to Arcade creek, a distance of 24 miles. He relates the affair as follows:

Lincoln was engaged with a map when the senator substituted another and demonstrated by it and the statement of some geologist that the black soil of the valley and the red soil of the hills unite at Arcade. The President relied on the statements given by him and decided accordingly. "Here you see," said the senator, "my pertinacity and Abraham's faith removed mountains."

Apropos of Lincoln's connection with the Union Pacific is the fact that several years ago Historian Leonard found in the records of the department of the interior in Washington many papers which he signed, one of them on a U. P. document only four months before his assassination. It is interesting to note that only upon U. P. papers did he sign his full name "Abraham Lincoln." On almost all others he wrote it "A Lincoln."

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Gives Practical Advice on Feeding 'Teen Age Child; Describes Some Special Food Needs of Both Boys and Girls

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

BEGINNING around the twelfth year in girls and the thirteenth year in boys, the rate of growth is greatly accelerated. Then children require large quantities of food to meet the needs of their rapidly maturing bodies and they usually develop huge appetites. Unfortunately, however, they are often inclined to overlook the foods that are most necessary to health, to eat at odd hours, and to stuff themselves with rich combinations that may severely tax the digestive system.

Mothers may find it exceedingly difficult to deal with their offspring all through the 'teens, when physiological changes are taking place which mark the transition from childhood to maturity. For along with the development of his fast growing body, the child's emotional life undergoes a profound and disturbing change. The boy or girl who was formerly amenable to direction suddenly exhibits a desire for independence. He becomes jumpy and irritable, and the wish to direct his own life extends even to his choice of food.

Mothers must mobilize all the patience and forbearance at their command—must make it their solemn duty to see that their adolescent children have the foods they require for growth, for stamina, and for building resistance to disease. For the stress and strain of adolescence will be far more easily weathered by boys and girls who are properly nourished.

Quality Important as Quantity

During the years of greatest growth, boys and girls frequently require more food than their fathers or mothers. But it is essential that the diet be well balanced and of the highest nutritive value. It should include an abundance of easily digested energy foods, such as breadstuffs, potatoes, cereals and macaroni products, as well as liberal quantities of the more concentrated fuel foods, such as butter or margarine. There must be an ample supply of high quality protein—which is furnished by meat, fish, eggs, cheese and milk—to build the new muscle tissue required to cover the lengthening frames of the boys and help build the rounded contours of the girls.

Need for Minerals and Vitamins

There must be ample amounts of the various minerals—especially calcium and phosphorus for the teeth and bones, and to help build sound, healthy nerves; iodine for proper functioning of the thyroid gland; iron for building increased quantities of rich red blood. Every vitamin must be included in the adolescent's diet to promote normal health and development, but vitamin A is especially valuable at this time of rapid growth, and vitamin B is also required in liberal amounts to meet the extra demands of increased activity and growth.

A Quart of Milk Daily

It is highly desirable that the diet should include a quart of milk daily, because milk is such a splendid source of calcium and vitamin A, as well as other necessary minerals and vitamins. If children have been brought up with a wholesome respect for this master food, they will continue to drink it during their 'teens.

However, if they complain about taking it as a beverage, mothers should see that it is supplied by way of cream soups and sauces, with cereals, and in nutritious pudding desserts, which can be enriched with eggs, thus providing additional proteins, minerals and vitamins.

Fruits and Vegetables

Fruits should be eaten freely—at least twice a day—and the high-caloric dried fruits, such as prunes and dates, may be used to advantage along with bananas, oranges, grapefruit, apples and other fresh fruits, as well as the many varieties that come in cans.

Cooked and raw vegetables should be provided liberally—if possible, at both lunch and dinner. Dressing cooked vegetables with butter or margarine will increase their fuel value, and make them more satisfying for hungry boys. Girls, who are often finicky eaters during their adolescent years, can usually be tempted with crisp, raw vegetables served in the form of salads; and protein can be added by means of eggs, cheese, fish or chicken.

Boys Need More Food Than Girls

There is a marked difference between the fuel requirements of 'teen age boys and girls. Both must have a well balanced diet. But the boys need many more calories, and therefore should have a more generous allowance of highly concentrated foods which supply necessary fuel with a minimum tax on the digestive system.

They should have cereals in generous-size portions—and it's advisable to choose part of the cereals from those retaining the bran and the germ. And they'll welcome nourishing desserts, such as custard, tapioca, bread and cornstarch puddings.

Girls Warned Against Reducing

Girls, on the other hand, may become fussy and try to cut down radically on the fuel foods, with the foolish idea of keeping fashionably thin. This must not be permitted, because it may result in under-nutrition, which opens the way to fatigue and nervousness, and may lead to serious disease.

In addition to wholesome, nourishing food, 'teen age boys and girls should have plenty of rest, sunshine and healthful outdoor exercise. And they also deserve the sympathy and deep understanding of their parents.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. B. L.—Sea foods are a rich source of iodine, fresh and canned salmon, cod, crabmeat and oysters being especially notable in this respect. Fruits and vegetables grown near the sea also contain varying amounts, depending upon the iodine content of the water and soil.

"Hank" Galbreth handed us an item the other day which he clipped from a letter and which expresses what we would call an ideal condition on the other side of the pond. We had to read it twice to catch the full meaning. Here 'tis:

Not bad, not bad!

Pres Rendall from Waldorf College at Forest City came down to give the Seniors an invitation to a Conference on Vocations to be held April 29, beginning at 9 00 at Waldorf College

They will have outstanding speakers, music and dinner for Seniors, in their dining hall.

The Freshmen and Sophomores there will help to show us around the campus all day Mr Rendall said, "It would be nice if everyone would spend the day on some campus before entering college, they would know what a campus was like and wouldn't act as green as most Freshmen do the first day they are on the campus of any college."

There will be groups and special speakers will talk on teaching, business courses, science, and other fields of work.—Mildred.

BLOW 'EM UP AND BUST 'EM
by
BARSWICK

A couple of the Seniors were driving around town after play practice one night and parked the car Just then the horn started to honk, and the more they tried to get it stopped, the louder it honked. I'll bet they woke every person in town, even the teachers.

Some of the girls in the Senior class are getting all flustered because of LeRoy's continuous winking. Which one do you think he'll get? Be careful, Mildred.

GRADES 1 & 2

Marjorie, Iris, Isabelle and Mary got A in spelling on Friday.

We have been busy learning our parts for our "Circus" which will be a part of the exhibit program.

The kindergarteners have a "Good Workers" chart. Each time a child does something especially well he gets a gold star.

GRADES 3 & 4

Robert Baack brought one of his tame rabbits to school. We kept the rabbit for a couple of days.

We have started to practice for our circus play.

Norman Allbee's birthday was Friday, April 21. He was ten years old. His mother brought treats to school. We had a party.

GRADES 5 & 6

Betty Blickenderfer and Mavis Meyers—Reporters

The fifth graders are having a good English contest. The sides are named "Lassie" and "Laddie."

The sixth graders are making a chalk drawing of Holland. The fifth graders have finished their drawings of the pony express.

We are sorry that Herbert Mueller has to miss school. He had an appendicitis operation Tuesday night. We all hope that he will get along fine.

Three of the people in our room went to the music festival at Britt on Friday. Those who went were Ruth, Patricia and Edward.

Patricia, Betty, Duard and Ruth and perfect spelling scores this week.

GRADES 7 & 8

Eighth Grade English Class —Reporter

Wednesday we observed the partial eclipse of the sun through smoked glasses.

Roger Bamman brought some rocks to add to our collection Some were sandstones which we have not been able to get. One was a fossil in a limestone. Mrs. Schaeffer has given us her collection to use.

Larry Van Syoc and Phyllis Klotzbach gave oral book reports Thursday.

Betty Etchen, Billy Grosshuesch, Eugene Habercamp, Barbara Johnson, Phyllis Klotzbach, and Julia Bell attended the music festival at Britt on Friday.

Larry Van Syoc, Corrine Merkel, Lawrence Bock and Phyllis Klotzbach received 100 per cent in spelling.

In arranging veils you are supposed to do just as fancy dictates, the more whimsical, the more erratic, the more altogether adorably irresponsible so far as following form and conventions, the smarter.

With her black lace afternoon dress Hildegarde, glamorous American radio songstress, wears a black felt turban with bright Tuscan straw brim as pictured below to the right in the group.

Combining Jacket Being Modernized

The fussy "combining jacket" that mother used to wear has been superseded by a trim rubber cape which has many other uses besides keeping stray hairs from settling on a clean dress or blouse. Slipped on and off in a jiffy, it is ideal for repairing complexions and for washing up at odd moments when there isn't time to disrobe.

One of the newest make-up capes on the market has a little pocket in the form of a flower for holding hair pins, powder puff, or comb. The soft rubberized fabric takes to soap and water like a dish cloth, thus making it possible to keep its delicate pastel colors flower-fresh.

Fashion Designers Turn Lilac-Minded

Each season this flower or that flower is especially featured. Paris milliners have turned lilac-minded this spring, either trimming with lilac clusters or in some instances making toques and even tiny sailor hats of them. Wear a lilac spray on your dark or light coat, it is one of the popular flowers of the moment in fashion's realm. Carnations are also worn.

Checked Costume

It is considered smart this season to have at least one Shepherd's checked costume in the wardrobe.

Silk for Action

Washable and noncrushable silks for active sportwear have been endorsed by Paris.

Shells for Lapels

Tiny bouquets of flowers are made entirely of shells and are to be worn in your lapel.

PAUL CROSSES INTO EUROPE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15 36, 16:4-15
GOLDEN TEXT—And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia.—Acts 16 10.

Guidance is the moment by moment need of every man and woman, boy and girl The whole of life calls for decisions, many of which look quite innocent and unimportant, but upon which the destiny of an entire life may turn. Who does not recall the poet's lament over the want of an ordinary horseshoe nail which resulted in the loss of the shoe, which disabled the horse, whose rider was lost, with the result that the battle went against his people.

Since the great issues of life may turn on the simplest of choices, we need guidance at every point in life. This need has been recognized by those who would make merchandise of their neighbors Quacks and charlatans offer guidance by every method, from reading the palm, looking at the stars, or consulting the spirits, to those smug enterprises which pose as spiritual and talk much of prayer, but which do not honor the name of Christ nor recognize Him as Redeemer and Lord.

One of the glories of the Christian faith is that the believer is indwelt by the third person of the Trinity, the Holy Spirit Himself, who is ready and willing to give divine guidance in every detail of life from the smallest to the greatest.

We study today the coming of the gospel into Europe, and that means through our forefathers to America. We consider what from our viewpoint was a crucial point in the history of the Church. Thanks be to God that His servant Paul was in that hour obedient to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Observe that the gospel came to Europe

I. By Providential Hindrance (15: 36; 16:4-8).

Not only the steps, but also the stops of a good man are ordered of the Lord. That is not an easy lesson to learn. We may be as much in the will of the Lord when all of our efforts seem to be thwarted as when they prosper. Let us not forget it.

Paul had set out on a second journey to carry out a follow-up campaign in the cities where he had already preached. This was a good plan and had God's blessing (see v. 5). But soon we find that word "forbidden" (v. 6) and then "suffered not" (v. 7). The Holy Spirit began to close doors to the gospel preacher. Now what? Shall he go on in determined self-will? Or shall he become discouraged and embittered in his soul? No, let him wait, for God is guiding him by providential hindrance, which is soon to be followed

II. By Divine Guidance (16:9, 10).

The Spirit spoke to Paul in a vision revealing the divine purpose that the gospel should go over into Macedonia. The Spirit leads in our day, possibly not by visions, but by impelling inward prompting complemented and checked by the teaching of Scripture and by providential circumstances, and a man may know what is the will of God.

A word of caution is needed at this point. Some earnest Christian people go astray by projecting their own desires and purposes into the place where they come to regard them as the will of God, and thus do themselves and others, and Christianity itself much harm. The three things already mentioned should agree—(1) the inner prompting of the Spirit, (2) the teaching of God's Word, and (3) God's hand in our outward circumstances

III. Through a Faithful Witness (vv. 11-14)

The gospel came to Europe because Paul and his fellow workers were faithful to their calling. When God led, they went to Macedonia (vv 11, 12), where they sought out those who were in the place of prayer (v. 13). Paul spoke to them about Christ (v. 14). It is one thing to have a vision, it is another thing to be obedient to that vision (Acts 26:19). There are some who talk much of their consecration to God, but who give little evidence of it. The little girl was right (though her grammar was wrong) when she said, "It's better to walk your talk than to talk your walk."

IV. Through a Receptive Heart (vv. 14, 15).

God sent an obedient messenger to the place where He had a prepared heart (v. 14). Space forbids much reference to this godly, successful business woman and housemother, but we do note that she not only received the Word of God into her own heart, but at once gave herself to the task of passing it on. The first thing she could do was to give aid and comfort to the messenger of the truth, and she did that at once. Be assured that from that day on she did all she could to prosper the gospel on its way through Europe and to the ends of the earth. Have we done likewise?

TIPS to Gardeners

Care in Transplanting

TRANSPLANTING is an important activity in almost every garden, but a gardener will save time and possible disappointment if he knows what should and what should not be transplanted.

The following should not be moved: Celosia, didiscus (blue lace flower), four o'clock, hunnemania, and perennial sweet pea. Because of their peculiar root growth, these flowers are damaged, sometimes even killed, when transplanted.

Flowers which may be transplanted with little fear of damage, as long as the moving is done properly, include ageratum, alyssum, snapdragon, aster, calendula, marigold, pansy, petunia, pinks, salvia, scabiosa, verbena, Canterbury bells, columbine, hollyhock, pyrethrum and viola.

There is a third division of flowers, according to Harry A. Joy, flower expert of the Ferry Seed Breeding Station, whose lives will not be endangered by transplanting, but whose growth will be stunted. Both plant and blossoms will be smaller but earlier. Larkspur, zinnia, phlox, nasturtium and bachelor button are in this group.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

For Stained Tables.—Dressing tables often get stained with cosmetics and scents. To remove such stains, rub well with paraffin, leave for a few hours, then rub with furniture cream and polish with a soft cloth.

Better Bread.—Yeast and baking powder breads will be softer and more tender if the dough is allowed to stand 10 minutes just before kneading.

Removing Fish Smell.—One tablespoon of vinegar added to the washing-up water for dishes that have been used for serving fish will help to remove traces of smell.

For "Pump Bumps."—If you have "pump bumps" on your heels, tape a covering of cotton or gauze over them. Dust the tape with talcum powder to keep it from sticking to your stocking.

Left-Over Batter.—Griddle cake batter is excellent for dipping chops, cutlets and other foods to be "breaded."

Knitting Hint.—When binding off knitting use a larger size needle than you used for the main work. This keeps the edge from being pulled too tightly.

Cotton Strengthens the Socks.—If you knit socks for the menfolk try knitting in a strand of ordinary cotton, together with the wool when turning the heels and shaping the toes.

SAFETY TALKS

Defective Cars in Accidents

COMPILATION by the National Safety council of state motor vehicle accident reports shows that 9 per cent of the motor vehicles in fatal accidents were reported as defective.

In non-fatal accidents defective vehicles numbered 4 per cent.

The council commented that "it seems certain that mass statistics understate the true importance of this problem. A careful study made several years ago indicated that vehicular defects were at least a contributing cause in 15 per cent of the accidents.

85TH YEAR

HOW TO SEW

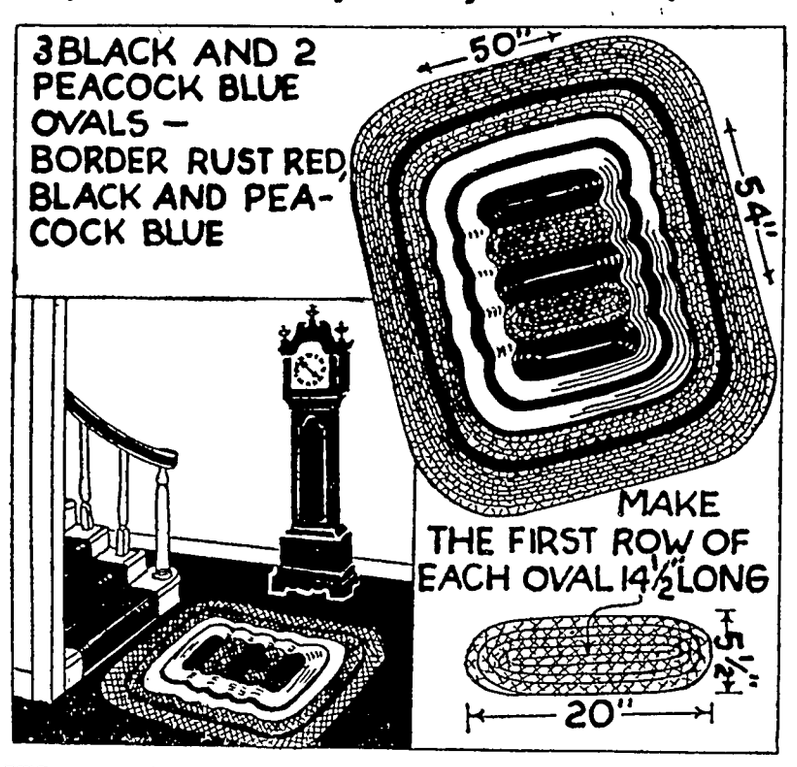
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



YES, a certain grandmother surprised everybody—even herself. She had always enjoyed making hit and miss rag rugs in cheery colors. Then one day her favorite grandson brought home the girl he was going to marry. She was a bright young thing, and chattered away about color schemes for her new home.

The living room and hall were to be peacock blue and rust with black. So Grandmother got out her dye pot and her best wool rags, and she mixed and she dipped and then she made five ovals of the size shown here—3 black and 2 blue. She sewed these together, then around them came 4 rows of rust; 2 rows of black next; then 4 of rust; 1 of black; 4 blue; 2 black; then 8 rows of blue around the outside.

When the wedding day arrived this gift was a great surprise; even Grandmother was amazed at how handsome it looked at the foot of the stairs in the new house.

Women everywhere are using their leisure to make their homes more attractive, with slipcovers, curtains; bedspreads and lampshades. They are again taking up embroidery and handwork so that they may beautify their homes and there is a revival of interest in old time hand crafts.

Mrs. Spears' Book 1, SEWING for the Home Decorator, and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery, clearly chart the way for you If the old craft of rag rug making is your new hobby, you may have free Mrs. Spears' leaflet on rag rugs with your order for both books at 25 cents each. ## Kitchen Kinks

An ordinary broom will last longer if dipped in boiling soapsuds for a minute or two each week.

Stored linens will not become yellow if the inside of the linen closet is painted a deep blue.

Good substitutes for bread crumbs or cracker crumbs in casserole dishes are: potato chips, shredded wheat, flaked dry cereals and small noodles.

Steaks, pork and lamb chops, ground meat, bacon and other cuts of meat will shrink if stored in the refrigerator unwrapped.

Breakfast treat: Serve poached eggs on toast that has been liberally spread with deviled ham.

Work is progressing rapidly on the improvements being made on the John Etchen house. The basement has been excavated to full size and a new tile wall put in and the house raised. A furnace will also be installed. Stanley Thada and family have rented the house and will move in when the remodeling has been completed.

Miss Minnie Lenz entered Mercy Hospital at Mason City last week Tuesday for treatment. Miss Lenz had a severe case of influenza a few weeks ago from which she did not fully recover. Her sister, Mrs. C. A. Arnold has been with her a great part of the time at Mason City.

Funeral Services Held Friday For Wm. Bachman, Klemme

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon from the Klemme Methodist Church for Mr. Wm. Bachman, 72, retired farmer. Rev. Wm. Zabilka preached the sermon and interment was in the Amsterdam Cemetery east of Goodell.

Obituary

Wm. Bachman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bachman, was born in Baden, Germany, February 11, 1867, and died at his home in Klemme, April 21, 1939. Age 72 years, 2 months an d14 days.

He came to America with his parents at the age of two years and lived in and around Ackley, Iowa, until he was ten years old. His parents then moved to Wright county. Here he lived until 1879 when he came to Hancock county, where he has lived since.

Mr. Bachman was united in marriage to Alvina Knoke, August 26, 1899 to which union were born two children, Clarence Bachman and Mrs. Clifford Montgomery both of Klemme.

Besides his two children, he leaves to mourn his passing, three brothers: Jake of Goodell; and Fred and John of Klemme; and one sister, Mrs. George Griggs, of Goodell. There are also 10 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

His wife preceded him in death, February 26, 1930, as did a son, Edward, in January, 1938.

Mr. Bachman had been failing in health for the past two years or more, but had been about all the time. Even the morning of his death he had been up town to purchase some garden seeds. He was found in the yard later in the forenoon, having suffered a stroke.

Several years ago while living in the Goodell community, he united with the U. B. Church of that place. He was also at one time a member of the Modern Woodman Lodge but this he gave up. He will be missed by many of the older retired men of the community.

CARD OF THANKS

The people have been good to us in our hour of trouble and contributed all that human kindness could suggest. We appreciate more than words can express the expressions of their kindness.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Montgomery and family
Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bachman and family
Mrs. Martha Bachman and family. 1tc.

Funeral Services Held Sunday For Mrs. Flora Schlei

Funeral services for Mrs. Flora Schlei, 57, were held at the Klemme Methodist Church with the Wellemeyer Funeral Service conducting, on Sunday afternoon, April 30, 1939, at 3:30 o'clock. A short service was held at the farm home southwest of Klemme prior to the church services.

Rev. Wm. Zabilka, pastor, assisted by Rev. Harry E. Whyte, former pastor here and now at Ida Grove, preached the funeral sermon and last rites.

Interment was in the Ell Township Cemetery near Klemme, and Mrs. Schlei was borne to her final resting place by Fred A. Arnold, Herman Schuldt, C. C. Kilgore, Otto Pringnitz, Owen Neuhring and Herman Priebe. Following is the obituary:

Obituary

Flora H. Schlei was born March 23, 1882 on a farm in Liberty township, the second of a family of nine children born to Charles A. Schoenwetter and wife Sophia (nee) Holtz.

She attended the schools of Liberty township and was a member of the Liberty Methodist Church.

On March 12, 1913, Flora Schoenwetter and Henry F. Schlei were married and moved to an unimproved farm three miles west of Klemme where they put up new buildings, fences and tile so that it became one of the model farms in the community. They were thrifty and successful and were good neighbors, liked by everyone in their community. Two sons were born to them.

After eighteen years of married life, the husband passed away, and since then, eight years, Mrs. Schlei and her two sons have operated the farm.

Some months ago Mrs. Schlei submitted to a major operation, and later cancer developed in the liver which ended her earthly career. on the morning of April 27, 1939, at the age of 57 years, 1 month and 4 days. While her life was short in years, still she accomplished much for the good of her family and community.

She leaves her two sons, Kermit and Melvin, Klemme; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Schoenwetter, Garner; three sisters, Mrs. Emil Pringnitz, Klemme, Mrs. Ray Yeager, Colorado, Miss Myrtle Schoenwetter, Garner; four brothers, Arthur, George, Edward and Victor, all of Klemme, and many other relatives and friends.

John Lauen Buiding New Modern Home

MANY NEW BUILDINGS UNDER CONSTRUCTION IN COMMUNITY

Northern Lumber Company Construction Crew Busy With New Buildings

With the coming of good weather the Northern Lumber Company's construction department has been busy with a large crew of men getting new buildings under construction in this community.

A fine modern house is under construction at the John Lauen farm. Excavation has been completed and the foundation and walls have been put in. The new Lauen home will be an exact duplicate of the Paul Grange residence in Klemme.

Virgil Cook is having a new barn built on his place occupied by Louis Stahl. The new barn will be a modern type building.

On the Ray Veldhouse farm northwest of Klemme a modern corn crib and granary is now under construction. The Veldhouse farm is one of the show places in this part of the county and has a complete set of modern buildings.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Velau are planning new buildings for their farm west of Klemme. At present a new milk house is being constructed, but they are also planning to build a new house on their farm this year.

On the farm occupied by Verner Nelson southeast of Klemme, the new house being built there is now enclosed, ready for plastering. The new house will be modern in every respect.

Leslie Hartbeck is building a new barn on his farm northeast of Klemme, which he purchased some time ago. John Albers and family live on the place at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Buseman recently purchased two lots east of the Henry Wille residence in northeast Klemme. They plan to build a cottage there this summer.

On the Dale Smith farm southeast of Klemme the Northern's crew are building a new hog house at the present time.

SCHOOL CALENDAR FULL FOR REMAINING WEEKS

First Event Is Exhibit And Hobby Show Which Will Be Held Friday Evening

A glance at the school calendar shows a busy time ahead from now on until the end of the school year, which is just a little over two weeks away.

The first of the big events is the all-school exhibit and community hobby show scheduled for Friday night of this week. The program in the gymnasium will start at 7:30 with a miniature circus by the 1st four grades. This will be followed by two plays by the intermediate and upper grades, and the home economics style show will complete the program. Following the program the grade rooms and class rooms will be open for the exhibit of hand work and art work, and the high school assembly room and one of the class rooms will be given over to the hobby show. Contributions to the hobby show are welcome from anyone.

At the same time that the exhibit is in progress here, Irene Becker will be representing Klemme in the state music festival with her marimba solo. Irene will play in the evening session of the festival, which starts at seven o'clock. She will be accompanied on the trip by her parents and her instructor-accompanist, Mrs. W. B. McClellan of Mason City. Irene will compete against contestants from Baxter, Hampton, West Union, New Hampton, Toledo, West Branch and Ankeny.

Commencement activities start in earnest Friday, May 12, when the juniors entertain the seniors at the annual banquet. Members of the school board are also being invited to the banquet this year, and the juniors are bending every effort to make it one of the best in the history of the school.

The Baccalaureate sermon Sunday, May 14, will be given by Rev. William Zabilka at the Methodist church. Following in order through commencement week will be class day exercises Tuesday evening, commencement exercises Thursday evening, and the community and school picnic Friday. W. R. Hamilton, president of the Hamilton School of Commerce at Mason City, is the commencement speaker. An added feature of picnic day this year will be a baseball game between Meservey and Klemme on the local diamond.

SIMPSON GRADUATE SIGNS FOR KLEMME TEACHING JOB

Glenn Bowles, of Indianola, Iowa, graduate of Simpson College, has signed to teach Commercial and direct atheletics and coaching in the Klemme High School.

Mr. Bowles was prominent in both high school and college athletics and was captain of the Simpson basketball and baseball teams this past season. He was also chosen on the all-conference basketball team.

The board received his contract this morning.

Weekly News Analysis

G.O.P. Frowns on Early Booms While Wooing Insurgent Dems

By Joseph W. La Bine

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of the newspaper.

Politics

To stand a chance of winning 1940's presidential election, Republicanism's two biggest jobs for 1939 are (1) stopping any premature boom which might shatter party unity, and (2) win support from Democratic leaders who have abandoned the New Deal. These objectives clash because few Democrats will desert their traditional political faction for nothing more stable than the hope that a suitable candidate can be found. But the G. O. P. is tackling both jobs with fingers crossed:

Candidates. Most favored presidential nominee is youthful New York District Attorney Thomas Dewey, whose sensational racket-busting record is offset in veteran political minds by the realization that he has no administrative experience. Second choice is Michigan's able Sen. Arthur Vandenberg. Trailing far behind are Ohio's ambitious Sen. Robert Taft, his home state's Gov. John W. Bricker, and ex-President Herbert Hoover. Since most danger of a premature boom centers in Washington, minority leaders in both houses (Oregon's Sen. Charles McNary, Massachusetts' Rep. Joseph Martin) are reportedly urging their colleagues to avoid commitments. On the G. O. P. calendar are party dinners, each of which will hear a potential candidate. One such affair, originally scheduled to hear both Candidates Taft and Bricker, was split two ways when Governor Bricker's name took greater importance.

SENATOR TAFT

Coalition. Possibility of Democratic support for a Republican candidate started during last autumn's "purge" and grew when President Roosevelt plumped for liberalism over partisanship. This season's rebel congress gave it more impetus, and in late April Mr. Roosevelt told junior Jackson day celebrants via letter that the Democratic party must uphold New Deal principles to win next year.

Seizing the cudgel, Ohio's Taft labeled the letter an "insulting ultimatum." Said he at a "Republicans-on-the-March" banquet: "To the President, anyone who disagrees with him is moved only by prejudice and . . . is disloyal to his lord and master. The Republican party . . . welcomes them (anti-administration Democrats) to our party councils. There is no fundamental difference between us which cannot be reconciled."

Meanwhile New Dealers on Capitol Hill thought the President's letter was highly significant. Louisiana's Sen. Allen J. Ellender thought Mr. Roosevelt was asserting aggressive leadership to block a "reactionary candidate" in 1940. Pennsylvania's Sen. Joseph Guffey thought what he had believed all along—that Mr. Roosevelt should seek a third term.

Europe

From his Paris office, the Chicago Daily News' Edgar Ansel Mowrer apparently sent first word of Der Fuehrer's crafty scheme to devaluate President Roosevelt's peace appeal. The scheme: Germany asked individual nations whose peace Mr. Roosevelt said is threatened, whether they felt menaced by Germany. Said Mr. Mowrer: "It is the old story of the wolf asking the lamb whether it really believes that wolves sometimes eat lambs."

Though Mr. Mowrer's revelations and subsequent diplomatic maneuvers took the edge of Herr Hitler's plan, democracies had little reason for glee. In the week preceding Der Fuehrer's Reichstag answer to Mr. Roosevelt, both dictators and democracies made frantic efforts to line up Europe's few remaining neutrals, all of them located in the Balkans. At negotiations' end, the Rome-Berlin axis had won a signal victory by the simple procedure of jerking a keystone—Jugoslavia—from under the tottering Balkan entente. Hemmed in north and south by Hungary and Italy respectively, the Belgrade government joined Germany, Italy, Spain, Hungary, Japan and Manchukuo in the anti-Communist alliance, framed a mutual defense pact with Hungary and began leading a new pro-Fascist Balkan entente in which Bulgaria will be a member.

Strategically located Rumania now becomes the focal point, wooed desperately by democracies as the last hope of stopping a solid dictator front in southeast Europe, yet inclined to conform with Nazi demands on pain of invasion from land-hungry Jugoslavia, Hungary and Bulgaria.

Deeper in the Balkans, British-French alliances with Greece and Turkey may meet similar fate. Though expressing gratitude to the democracies for guaranteeing her integrity, Greece has announced she seeks to remain on a friendly basis with the Axis powers who now threaten her entire northern front via Albania, Jugoslavia and Bulgaria. Meanwhile Turkey has given Germany a contract to build her $12,000,000 new naval base and granted Lufthansa, German airline, an operating concession.

With the Balkans apparently lost to Naziism, Britain's last chance for anything like a parity of European power lies in the last-resort military treaty with Russia. The unexpected return to Berlin of Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson has given rise to belief that Britain may seek peace with the Reich rather than accept a Russian pact. Furthermore, France's move to return her German ambassador, coupled with rumors of U. S. trade concessions to a peaceful Hitler, produces a world-wide atmosphere suspiciously like the long-since discredited instrument of "appeasement."

Relief

Workers Alliance is a WPA union which thrives mainly on contributions from a reputed 400,000 (out of 2,756,000) U. S. reliefers. From its Washington headquarters go frequent mimeographed statements for newspaper men and persistent lobbyists to plague Capitol Hill. Of the latter, most famous is Theodore Ozman who had his face slapped by Georgia's fiery Rep. E. E. Cox during debate on the $150,000,000 deficiency relief bill. Workers Alliance's most famous officer is President David Lasser, who last year drew from Aubrey Williams, then deputy WPA administrator, a terrible pre-election statement for WPA consumption: "We've got to keep our friends in power . . . The men you are going to (elect) should be those who stand for projects such as WPA sponsored."

Though Harry Hopkins squelched further Williams outbursts, David Lasser's reliefers no doubt took the Williams advice. Whether their vote was big enough remains to be seen, for now pending in congress are measures to toss relief back into the states' lap, to junk all present agencies for a new federal unit, and take politics out of relief. Workers Alliance is primarily interested in the latter.

Chief puzzle facing West Virginia's Rep. Clifton Woodrum and his relief subcommittee is whether reliefers should or can be denied the right to organize for a patently political purpose. Already on record are several disturbing facts. Samples:

(1) Though David Lasser denied he is a Communist, most official Washingtonians rate him distinctly pinkish. Workers Alliance Secretary-Treasurer Herman Benjamin boasted to committeemen that he has been a Communist for 20 years, also that he reported personally to Moscow last year on the Alliance's activities.

(2) Alliancers have threatened and may some day exert pressure on congress. When President Roosevelt asked an $875,000,000 deficiency relief appropriation, the Alliance asked $1,000,000,000. Congress coughed up $725,000,000. When the White House asked restoration of the $150,000,000 cut, Mr. Lasser turned on heat and threatened to ballot all reliefers on a protest march to Washington.

Probable outcome will not be an attempt to dissolve the Alliance, but a hastening of back-to-the-states legislation in the hope that individualized relief setups will give the union less chance for a unified national front.

Asia

Primarily an exporter of cheap substitutes, Japan's foreign trade is normally unbalanced on the debit side since total value of exports falls short of total imports. Biggest single export, however, has been precious silk to the U. S., a $100,000,000 annual trade which brings an average of $50 to each of 1,815,246 Jap families raising cocoons as a sideline. But recently U. S. chemists perfected nylon, a synthetic substance which threatens to replace Japanese silk. An important discovery in itself, nylon has upset Nippon's business applecart far enough to precipitate a major industrial revolution. With cotton imports curtailed and its U. S. market disappearing, Jap silk production will become smaller and sale restricted to domestic markets.

Thus forced into even greater self-sufficiency, Japan has launched a three-year program of industrial expansion with the double purpose of giving its people hope and informing other nations of its strength. Sample production increases: Magnesium, 1,000 per cent; artificial gasoline, 800 per cent; dehydrated alcohol, 1,200; wool, 200; steel, pig iron, machine tools, 100.

Noteworthy is the heavy emphasis on iron ore and gasoline, both of which have been purchased entirely abroad, and both of which will be needed the day Japan tackles Russia in a great Asiatic war. Sampling its first fruits of conquest, Tokyo will depend largely on Chinese and Manchukuoan resources.

Transportation

On some future date all U. S. motorists may be forced to insure against public liability and property damage, a coverage at once most essential (to protect fellow motorists) and most ignored (because of high rates). Originally a rich man's insurance, "P. L. and P. D." was offered mainly by 37 member companies of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, who eventually began losing business to newer, lower priced companies. To recover business, bureau firms have just effected new low prices in 30 states, cutting 20 to 25 per cent from rates charged private motorists. Thus a downward price trend has been stimulated, which may eventually place liability rates at a point where state legislatures can make this coverage mandatory without suffering undue criticism.

Aviation

U. S. isolationists to the contrary, each European dictator encroachment apparently has its repercussions on this side of the Atlantic. Looking ahead, observers are now sizing up the results-to-be of a very likely dictator coup, the unification of Portugal with Spain through an externally inspired revolution.

Two Portuguese landmarks, the Azore islands and Lisbon, are vital stopping points on the southern route of Pan-American's transatlantic air service which is scheduled to start this spring. Over nearby routes from Europe to South America fly German and Italian lines which would like a slice of lucrative U. S.-to-Europe air business.

Since Spain's puppet Dictator Francisco Franco would share Portugal's spoils with his two friends, Germany and Italy, those two nations would gain aviation rights at Lisbon and the Azores, thereby holding a monopoly over south Atlantic airlanes. Still open to U. S. boats would be the northern route from New York to Southampton, excellent in summer but risky in winter.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Progressive education has been pushed around a lot lately. The Bellwether Lincoln school of New York has been backtracking as have several other Daniel Boones of the educational wilderness. From the right came the charge that they just let the youngsters fool around with toys and tools, without rubbing in any real education.

See What Came Of Leaving Chap With $2 Camera

Here's a field goal for the other side. At the somewhat ultra Fountain Valley, progressive school of Colorado Springs, the boy, David Hare, scion of a highly placed New York family, was given carte blanche to build his education around a $2 camera. The idea, as in all progressive schools of those few years back, was to give the green light to any creative impulse.

But, at 22, here is Mr. Hare with a New York exhibit of camera portraiture, with President Roosevelt among his subjects, and with famous artists and photographers, including Arnold Genthe, cheering him as the "Leonardo da Vinci of the camera." Specifically, they agree that young Mr. Hare has proved indisputably that the camera not only may be, but now is an instrument of the highest artistic expression, and that he demonstrates an absolutely new method and medium of color portrait photography.

His three-lens camera allows the superimposing of color images, in the manner of the color-printing process, and makes possible shading and emphasis in the service of mood. His is the first and only color portrait exhibit in the country. Artists and prominent society folk are boiling with enthusiasm over Mr. Hare's achievement.

He is a tall, shy, personable young man, somewhat inarticulate, as he filters life through a lens, and hesitant in any other form of expression. As was the young Lindbergh. There is the same "We" combination here. Whether he knows the prepositions used with the ablative or whether he stumbled across the "Bridge of Asses" is not revealed.

OUT of the limbo of the past rises "Ole Bill," Bruce Bairnsfather's famous walrus-mustached cartoon character of World war days, to adorn recruiting posters being displayed throughout the United Kingdom. Bairnsfather says his revised character reveals signs of age, but, for that matter, so does the cartoonist.

Time's Attrition Marks 'Ole Bill' And His Creator

The slow attrition of 20 years since a slender youngster created "Ole Bill," in a trench in Flanders, has added to his bulk, had taken toll of his thatch of wavy black hair. Bitterness came, too, as when he returned all his war medals to the British government in protest against its treatment of veterans.

Somehow, despite the wide and varied exploitation of Bill—books, lectures, a play, "The Better Ole," a syndicated piece and so forth—Bruce seemed to get the short end of it all. He is said to have received some $10,000 out of $500,000 earned by his black and white creation. Putting on his own review, "Ullo," he lost $40,000, and after that events led him straight to bankruptcy, liabilities $75,000, assets negligible.

He was born in India of a long line of army forebears and began life as an electrical engineer. Of recent years, what with lecturing, writing and drawing, life is said to have dealt more amiably by him.

SELECTED for transfer from his post as ambassador to Argentina to the government of Gen. Francisco Franco in Spain, Alexander W. Weddell, 63 years old, bears with him such assets as are implied in the long experience of a career diplomat, a man of tact and diplomatic deftness, combined with broad humanitarian sympathies.

Our Ambassador To Spain Packs Diplomatic Bag

Mr. Weddell was educated at George Washington university law school and the University of Catania in Italy. Appointed private secretary to the minister to Denmark in 1908, he entered the consular service two years later as consul at Zanzibar. He spent two years, 1912-14, as consul at Catania, going thence to Athens as consul general.

Retiring from the diplomatic service in 1928, he returned six years ago, filling various consular posts until his appointment as ambassador to the Argentine.

What to Eat and W

C. Houston Goudiss Considers the Question: How Often Shall We Eat? Suggests That Some People May Benefit by More Than Three Meals

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the questions I am frequently asked is whether or not it's advisable to eat between meals. Any answer must take into consideration a number of factors. It is true that many people experience a desire for food in mid-morning, mid-afternoon or before going to bed. Some begin to nibble as soon as they feel hungry, and often they continue to eat in excess of their needs. Others, trained to more restraint, refrain from eating, because they have been brought up with the idea that no food should be eaten except at regular meals.

Unfortunately, it frequently occurs that neither procedure is based upon actual food requirements.

Consider the Day's Food Needs

In arriving at any decision concerning between-meal eating, the day's ration should be regarded as a whole. If the foods served at breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper are carefully chosen, with a view to meeting bodily requirements, there should be no need for many adults to eat between meals.

On the other hand, it should be borne in mind that dividing the day's food into what we Americans so often call "three square meals," is primarily a convenient custom. One reason that it has grown up over a period of years is because it allows the maximum free time to pursue our various occupations. In a number of countries, a fourth meal is an accepted part of the day's routine. No Englishman, for example, would consider going without his afternoon tea; and workers pause in offices, stores and factories, as well as at home, for a brief rest and welcome refreshment.

How Many Meals?

In recent years, several scientists have advanced the idea that some of us may benefit by eating more than three meals. At a leading university a few years ago, two distinguished investigators concluded that smaller and more frequent meals would promote general health and well-being for many types of individuals. They suggested lighter meals, but proposed as many as four, five, or even six feedings a day.

Another well-known authority has performed various experiments which effectively demonstrate that a light additional meal in mid-afternoon, consisting principally of a milk beverage, increased the efficiency of workers and helped to reduce fatigue.

Relieving Late Afternoon Fatigue

Many people experience a tired feeling about four o'clock in the afternoon. During the working day, they gradually utilize available food energy, so that by late afternoon, the supply may be greatly reduced—along with both mental and physical energy.

Here is a case where eating between meals is regarded as a decided advantage, provided the food is carefully chosen. A glass of milk and a few crackers, or some other carbohydrate food, will help to renew energy, relieve the feeling of fatigue and bridge the gap to dinner. It must be remembered, however, that the extra meal should be composed of light, easily-digested foods so as not to destroy appetite for the following meal.

Young Children and Elderly People

Children of certain ages, as well as adults, may benefit by a schedule that includes an extra meal. Very young children—in the toddler stage—are frequently given a mid-morning feeding of orange juice, or a mid-afternoon cup of milk with one or two crackers. And some school children also make better weight gains if they pause in the middle of the morning, or take an after-school snack, of fruit juice, or milk, and crackers.

Aged persons often require more than three meals. That is because large, heavy meals might overtax their digestions, and three light meals do not usually provide adequate nourishment. For this reason, nutritionists advise that they have a light, mid-afternoon pickup of a hot beverage and crackers; and perhaps a cup of hot bouillon before going to bed.

Don't Overeat

Thus, it is evident that there are numerous instances when there is justification for departing from the accepted routine. But it must be remembered that as the number of meals is increased, the amount of food taken at each one should be decreased. Otherwise, an undue strain may be placed upon the digestive organs.

Then, too, no matter how the day's food is divided, it must provide all the substances required for sound nutrition. Otherwise, the body will be improperly nourished, no matter how many meals are consumed.

The diet should be built first all around the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables which are such an important source of necessary minerals and vitamins. It must also supply protein for growth and repair, carbohydrates and fats for adequate energy, and sufficient bulk or roughage to promote normal elimination.

Keep the Diet Balanced

Whether you serve three hearty meals and forego eating between times, or follow the plan of providing a mid-morning or mid-afternoon pickup, you should meet the requirements for a balanced diet. This, you will remember from previous discussions, includes a pint of milk for each adult, a quart for every child, an egg for each member of the family, or at least three or four weekly; one serving of a whole grain cereal; one serving of meat, fish or chicken plus a second source of protein, such as meat, nuts, cheese, dried beans or peas; two vegetables besides potatoes, one of which should be of the leafy green variety; two fruits or one fruit and one fruit juice.

TIPS for Gardeners

Changing Methods

CERTAIN garden practices widely followed a generation ago have now been proved unwise.

Gardeners formerly allowed vegetables to grow as large as possible. According to Harold Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Breeding Station, this practice gave a higher yield in pounds, but very often lowered the quality of the vegetables.

Some vegetables, of course, like tomato, must be mature to be edible; but carrots, cucumbers, beets, summer squash, turnips, radishes and others are more tender and tasty when not much more than half grown.

To keep a regular supply of vegetables of proper eating size, gardeners are finding also that it is advisable to plant oftener than once or twice a year.

Few gardeners nowadays sow flower seeds. Fine flowers growing in the home garden often are cross-pollinated by others of the same species, making flowers grown from their seed inferior or untrue.

On April 30 New York Reveals "The World of Tomorrow" to Millions Who Visit Her Fair

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

APRIL 30, 1789.

George Washington stands on the portico of ederal hall in New York ty and takes the oath of fice which makes him the st President of the United ates of America.

No matter how far-see- g the Father of His Coun- y may have been—or any her man who witnessed at ceremony 150 years ago it is not likely that he could ve looked into the future d even dimly realized the eatness which the new na- on was to attain—in terri- ry, population, wealth, cul- ral and scientific achieve- ent, social and political ogress.

April 30, 1939.

It is another historic occa- on in the annals of New ork City. For on this day e gates to what New York- s believe is the greatest ternational exposition of all me are being thrown open thousands of visitors—the inguard of an estimated 20 illions who will see the New ork World's fair before it oses.

And significant of the changes at have taken place in a cen- ry and a half, these visitors, nlike those who thronged New ork's narrow streets for Wash- gton's inauguration, will be ble to look forward into the fu- re even farther than 150 years. or the "theme" of this fair is The World of Tomorrow."

One of the theme spectacles the fair is a model of Democ- acity, designed by Henry Drey- uss, which deals in comprehen- ive fashion with the possibilities improvement in design of our ities in the future. In a brief pace of six minutes a visitor, n one of the two moving plat-

Outside, surrounding the city, separated from it by a green belt of farms and parks, are industrial towns—these decentralized factory centers, where man works and lives and depends on the central metropolis only for direction in his business and in his cultural activities Democracity is a practical suggestion of how we should be living today—in a city of light and air and green spaces. Stretching out in all directions from the central city are fine roads sweeping over broad green belt areas and connecting the various industrial towns with the metropolis.

Democracity will present the general plan of the City of Tomorrow; details of our future American living will be clarified in many of the fair's individual exhibits. In so far as the prosperity of America always has and probably always will depend largely upon the prosperity of her farm population, one of the major exhibits is the "Farm of the Future"—a practical working farm, with a farm house and buildings, completely equipped, with cattle, horses, chickens, in fact every last thing one would expect to find on a farm, even to the flower and vegetable garden near the house. And all of it will be on less than one acre!

Electricity will do the work on this farm, efficiently and economically. More than one hundred practical applications of electricity will be shown—all under working conditions.

The house is an attractive two-story frame structure, with a tile terrace. On one side is a flower and vegetable garden; apple trees and elms make a picturesque setting for the house, and maples in the pasture lot provide convenient shade for the cattle. At one end of the plot, grouped for convenience and efficiency, are the silo and barn, and close by, the workshop and horse shed; at the other end of the plot, the poultry house, brooder house, greenhouse, hotbeds, community packing house and the orchard.

The farm house is the hub around which practically all activity on the farm centers—particularly the farm kitchen. And what a kitchen this is! In it scientific planning is evident in the location of each piece of equipment — designed to conserve time, labor and footsteps.

The barn is complete and up-to-date in every respect—proper lighting and ventilation, drinking cups, the latest type stalls, grinding and mixing of feed and pumping of water.

On one side of the barn are eight tie-stalls for milking cows; on the other, four box stalls, with a pen of calves, a cow and calf, and two bulls. These cattle are to be supplied from famous herds by the breeder associations: Guernseys the first six weeks; Jerseys the second, Holsteins the third, Ayrshires in the last period of the fair. The top of the barn—which would ordinarily be a hay loft—is a room accommodating about one hundred people, and will be used as a meeting room for farm organizations and others at the fair.

The workshop on the electrified farm is completely equipped, with electric forge, anvil, electric drill, electric saw and a portable electric welding outfit. With this equipment in his workshop, a broken casting or piece of machinery doesn't mean a trip to town—sometimes when the farmer can least spare the time.

In the poultry house a complete poultry unit is shown. In this poultry house, some of the hens will be kept in laying batteries and some in the conventional type laying house.

The incubator in the service room of the poultry house will have chicks hatching twice a week so there will always be new chicks to put in the battery brooder, which is also in the service room. Some of these chicks will be kept in an electric hover brooder in a separate brooder house just outside of the main poultry house. To complete the installation, there will be an egg cleaner and grader and latest type candler; also scalding and waxing equipment for removing feathers in preparing broilers for market.

Across a small court from the poultry house is the community packing house. In the center is a complete fruit cleaning and grading system, electrically operated.

Near the community packing house is an apple orchard, with a stationary spray pump for spraying and maintaining the health of the trees. At the end of the plot is a greenhouse, so insulated that the only heat necessary in addition to that supplied by electric heating lamps, controlled automatically by thermostats, is the sun's rays through the glass of the greenhouse which is slanted to catch every bit of sun. Flowers out of season and an early start for garden plants are made possible with such a greenhouse. Adjacent to the greenhouse are electric hotbeds which also insure the starting of early garden plants for spring planting. The soil used in plant beds is freed of weed seeds, insects, etc., through electric soil sterilization.

A view of Democracity, the dream city of the future which Henry Dreyfuss has designed for the Perisphere exhibit in the Theme Center of the New York World's fair. This photograph was made from a model less than one-twelfth the size of the projected exhibit which measures 100 feet in diameter.

forms inside the Perisphere, can look down upon a representation 24 hours of life in Democracity.

The central city has a vast transportation center where ocean liners, limited trains, airplanes and dirigibles come to a single terminal. The audience will see a central city catering to a million people with a working population of 250,000, none of whom will sleep there at night. Homes, apartment houses and hotels are built on the outer rim of the city, centered in parks facing a vast green belt which surrounds the central city. In the outlying satellite towns, men will walk home from work across parks, which separate the living section from the working section.

Between the satellite towns and the central city is a 30-mile green belt devoted to agriculture. Suburban homes are placed upon hills, or along the banks of rivers, so as not to utilize land designed to produce the fresh food

If George Washington, who was one of the most progressive farmers of his day, could have seen this electrified farm! And speaking of Washington—the opening of the fair on April 30, the date of his inauguration, is not the only coincidence reflecting the association of our first President with New York City and its fair. On October 10, 1789, President Washington wrote in his diary:

"Pursuant to an engagement formed on Thursday last, I set off from New York, about nine o'clock, in my barge to visit Mr. Prince's fruit gardens and shrubberies, at Flushing, on Long Island. The Vice President, Governor of the State, Mr. Izard, Colonel Smith and Major Jackson accompanied me."

On this and a subsequent trip President Washington was searching for a plot of ground on which to erect a national capital. "But for some quirk of circumstance," Grover A. Whalen, president of the World's Fair corporation, has said, "the site of this greatest of expositions might have been the capital of the United States."

Dominating Constitution Mall, the central esplanade of the fair, is the largest portrait statue fashioned by mankind since the Egyptians carved the figure of Rameses II out of rock in the land of the Nile. The work of James Earle Fraser, noted sculptor, this statue portrays Washington as he arrived in New York for his inauguration.

Dominating the trees, buildings and fountains of Washington Square, from which his figure rises 65 feet, the Father of our Country appears to gaze across two sculptured groups by Paul Manship, the celebrated artist. One denotes the passage of time as it affects the human race. The second group includes a gigantic sundial with an 80-foot gnomon. Washington seems to gaze at the 18-story Perisphere and the 50-story Trylon—his back to the 150 years of progress in the past as represented by the Federal building, his face toward the future as represented by the Theme Center.

Standing solidly behind Washington and carrying out the patriotic theme are four tall figures which represent the foundation strength of the government. They are Freedom of the Press, Freedom of Religion, Freedom of Assembly, and Freedom of Speech. From this group, which has come to be known as "The Freedoms" and which was sculptured by Leo Friedlander, came the inspiration for the historical thread that is carried through the Mall pattern.

To the north of the "Freedoms," the historical theme is continued through another 1,500-foot section of the Mall by the grouping of the buildings and exhibits of 62 foreign nations around the parade ground, or Court of Peace, where the flags, uniforms and costumes of all nations are shown in various drills, pageants and other colorful spectacles. This grouping also suggests the strength the United States has drawn from the infusion into its population of liberty-seeking elements from foreign shores.

Numerous buildings and exhibits are dedicated to George Washington. The state of New Jersey has a replica of the barracks the general used as his headquarters at Trenton, during the stormy days of our struggle for independence. Motion pictures exhibited in the Federal building feature Washington.

In line with the commemorative theme of the fair a copy of Washington's oath of office, a picture of his inauguration ceremony on the balcony of Federal hall in New York city, a bronze statue of him, and wax impressions of the seals he used are locked within the cornerstone of the fair's imposing administration building. Washington Perrine of Baltimore, Md., closest lineal descendant of the first President of the United States, deposited these seals in the cornerstone.

An American Spahi

FEW Americans have ever heard of Marius Van de Weghe. He stays pretty close to his tallow and caustics, test tubes and chemicals and other scientific apparatus in his laboratory at a soap company in Chicago.

You wouldn't suspect that Marius, a young man of less than 40 years, is an Ouissam Alaouite Cherifien. But that is what you are when the Sultan of Morocco gives you a medal and says that's what you are.

Because Van de Weghe, while a soldier in Morocco, displayed unusual bravery under fire, the sultan knighted him. Van de Weghe was a spahi in the Moroccan army right after the World war. A spahi is a cavalryman. During a fierce engagement with rebel natives, Van de Weghe rode back two miles into enemy territory to bring back the body of his slain commanding officer.

The kind of men the soldiers were fighting were those who tortured their live captives and mutilated those who were killed. Van de Weghe's heroism prevented the natives from burying the body of his commander with his head protruding to be eaten by insects.

But there is nothing of the hero in Van de Weghe's present demeanor, now that he is an American citizen and the head of a family. Whenever anyone expresses amazement that he would risk his life to retrieve a dead body he adds his own amazement, stating that neither can he understand how he happened to do it.

'Prince of Trinidad'

"JAMES I, PRINCE OF TRINIDAD," is an impressive title. The holder of it was an American who married the daughter of a Standard Oil company magnate. He presented her with the entire kingdom of Trinidad which they ruled together with a firm hand.

Trinidad was easy to rule, of course, because Mr. and Mrs. James Harden-Hickey, the American names of the rulers, were the only human inhabitants. Their subjects were the land crabs, sea fowl and snakes with which the place was infested.

Trinidad is an island 700 miles east of Brazil in the South Atlantic. Discovered by the Portuguese and visited by the British, no power had exercised active possession of it at the time "Mr. and Mrs. James I" went there and proclaimed themselves rulers in 1894.

But their reign over this small domain that reeked with the odor of dead fish, ended in January of the following year when the British sent the warship Barracouta there to take over possession.

This wasn't the first time James Harden-Hickey was thrown out of a country. He established a newspaper, Le Triboulet, in Paris in 1878, and was so obnoxious in his criticism of the republican government that he was expelled from France in 1880.

He died a suicide in El Paso, Texas, in 1898, just plain James Harden-Hickey, American citizen.

Audacious Robert Stobo

HOUDINI was famous for his ability to escape from almost anywhere; Sergeant York was noted for his ability to capture enemies by the wholesale; but in pre-Revolutionary days, Maj. Robert Stobo was famous for both.

The French from Canada were constantly arresting Stobo for supplying Washington with confidential information about their plans. But regardless of where he was imprisoned he always managed to escape.

After breaking out of a cell in Quebec, he paddled up the St. Lawrence river with three companions. Camping one day on the bank, he noticed a small boat leave a French ship and make toward them.

He could easily have retreated into the woods until they gave up the search. Instead he and his companions surprised the party when it landed and captured the group that had been sent out to capture him!

Then, after waiting for darkness, he had the further audacity to order them all into the boat and with guns at their backs, row back to their ship as if he and his party were captives. They were all aboard the vessel before the crew realized that it was Stobo's party, not theirs, that held the guns Once aboard, he had the upper hand and forced the entire crew of 18 to surrender

But this was only a good beginning. In command of the ship, he set sail and pulled alongside another French vessel a mile down the river. Without warning, he fired a broadside against the unsuspecting vessel and forced its surrender too. Then he set fire to it.

Proudly he set sail up the St Lawrence and returned triumphantly to Colonial territory, having performed one of the most adventurous feats of his time.

THE CHIPPING SPARROW

The Chipping Sparrow is a sociable little bird with a reddish cap which comes to live around Iowa gardens and homes about April 1

The compact nest of the Chipping Sparrow is built in trees, bushes and vines Grasses rootlets and hairs are used in the construction The use of horse hair in the nest has led some to call this sparrow by the name "hair bird" Three to five bluish eggs are laid The streaked young birds appear in about 11 days. Two broods may be raised in a single summer

This sparrow consumes an abundance of insects during its stay in Iowa, especially when insects are numerous. During early and late summer more weed seeds, such as lesser ragweeds, crab grass and lamb's quarters, are taken.

Coloring Directions· Bill black, top of head reddish brown; white bar above eye from bill to neck; chin, throat and breast white, sides and belly grayish white; back streaked with black and brownish gray, rump slate gray; wings brownish gray with two white wing bars Female similar.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

FINALE

The forlorn emptiness of an abandoned circus lot has replaced the hurry and bustle of Iowa's legislative chambers as 158 lawmakers close their books — and mouths — and return to their homes It was a history making session little concerned with the concoction of the customary clutter of new laws It was, instead, a determined Republican majority pledged to reorganize and economize The so-called 'third house,' made up of high pressure lobbyists and representatives of the many interests, formed its lines quickly but this time for defense rather than offense Not always agreed as to minor details the Republican majority nevertheless pounded away ceaselessly at the sturdy walls of established bureaucracy. They will be the first to confess their attack was not an unqualified success but the Wilson administration's most critical observer has grudgingly acknowledged that the "reorganization program to which the governor and the bulk of legislators were pledged, was pretty well carried through."

BUDGET

To a commonwealth alarmed at the continued pyramiding of bureaus and departments and the natural increase in costs that have likewise skyrocketed, chief interest has been centered upon the biennial budget as the document most likely to reveal the trend of affairs. A subject of spirited debate and the ground upon which the opposition to many economy efforts made their most determined stand, the final draft as adopted by senate and house conference committees need not be accompanied by apologies. Because of departmental shifts under the consolidation program, the budget is not comparable to those of preceding years. Many important departments which spent huge sums annually were not included in former budgets. They used funds which they themselves collected directly and their expenditures were not a part of the totals shown upon the biennial budget. Hereafter, however, their funds are limited by legislative action. Therefore an apparent increase in budget totals is misleading. As a matter of fact if the 1939-40 budget included only those departments listed in the budget of two years ago, the total would show a decrease of some $221,000.

NO GUESS WORK

The budget was in no sense a program of guess work but grew out of many long hours of earnest consideration It permits much needed increases to state institutions yet reveals the truth of the contention that many opportunities could be found for substantial savings if a governor and legislature would just take the time for examination In an early conference with the highway commission Governor Wilson brought about a million dollar saving in the commission's administrative and maintenance allotment. By putting in the cigarette tax law the administration hopes to recover an additional $800,000 without any form of new levy. Another substantial saving is a reduction from five cents to four cents per mile allowance for automombile mileage allowance for state empoyees. Governor Wilson and the legislature made up their minds it could be done Then they did it.

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED

The legislature considered sixty-six reorganization bills. Fifty-one were passed, three were rewritten or incorporated in other bills One was killed and eleven others were allowed to die A conservative estimate of the saving through consolidation alone can be set at $500,000 per year. Add to this measure designed to recover funds now lost through leaks and which will require no additional levies upon taxpayers, and the 48th General Assembly now adjourned, looms as a legislature of real acromplishment. No new levies were imposed many departments were consolidated and although the full hopes of ardent economizers and reorganizers were not realized, enough was accomplished to prove it can be done. And it will be something for future legislators to build on.

WATCHING THE CORNERS

Business men well know the value and necessity of cutting the corners in the matter of expense and the necessity for preventing even the slightest leaks in legitimate income. A revision in truck licensing methods in Iowa is expected to bring an additional annual income of about $500,000 to the state while at the same time tightening up on protection for truckers who have not been trying to chisel on their fees on take advantage of technicalities. The change from payload to gross weight for computing a license fee makes the law more enforceable. The ton mile tax was changed to a flat rate for road usage will avoid leakes through evasion. This will react to the financial advantage of all counties and more particularly to the smaller counties. Since fifty per cent of the road usage tax goes to the highway commission it also serves as an additional protection for county primray road bonds.

FINIS

Lieutenant Governor B. B. Hickenlooper, presiding officer of the senate, looked out across the senate chamber at 3:50 p. m., Friday. A hundred yards away stood John Irwin of Keokuk, speaker of the house, with gavel poised. With a single motion these two officers brought their gavels down and the 48th General Assembly came to an official close. Only a small handful of senators, representatives and onlookers were present. Thus ended a legislative session that cost the state close to $319,000 in salaries and wages, printing, supplies and mileage A total of 1167 bills were introduced, 655 in the house and 512 in the senate Of this number 299 became law. The session lasted 110 days.

TAG ENDS

Lieutenant Governor Hickenlooper and Speaker John Irwin were presented with fine wrist watches by their colleagues as the session ended . . . . . a threat of injunction caused Senators and Representatives to hurry to cash $80,000 in pay checks at the State Treasurer's office during the last few hours . . . current national debt total $40,036,687,964.75 . . . your share $307.97. . . . . .

Kitchen Kinks

Raw or cooked cauliflower flowerets and canned string beans are tasty additions to spring salads.

For a change of pie crust once, try adding two tablespoons of peanut butter to the dough.

Soda, applied with a damp cloth, will remove coffee, tea and other stains from china.

To keep paint brushes in working order never allow paint to dry on them.

To make a fluffy omelet more fluffy, use fresh eggs at room temperature.

Meringue will hold its shape if baked in a moderate over for 20 minutes Or before beating the eggs add a tablespoon of cold water to the egg whites.

Peppermint sauce makes a dressy topping for a bread pudding.

To Freshen Pillows:

All sleepers like fresh, fluffy pillows But pillows that have been in constant use all winter are neither fresh nor fluffy, unless given a spring freshening Simply remove the slip and scrub the pillow ticking with soap lather. After the whole pillow has been gone over wipe off the lather with a soft cloth wrung out in lukewarm water. To get all the soap off change the water several times. Then dry the pillow on a clean towel or sheet in a warm place, in the sun, turning and beating it several times while drying

CHINCH BUG THREAT IN SOUTH, 'HOPPERS WEST

Counties along the Missouri River in central western Iowa are likely to be the most heavily infested with grasshoppers and counties in southern Iowa along the state line are likely to have the worst of the chinch bugs, Iowa State College entomologists predict.

Entomologists are busy now making a check of chinch bugs in southern Iowan. Winter mortality has been fairly high in spots, but not enough to remove danger entirely, and worst spots are expected to be in the southern tiers of counties. Southern Iowa is said to have a relatively light supply of eggs.

Rains Will Tell

Grasshopper prospects have not been affected by the winter, but spring rains—or lack of them—will tell the story as to what may be expected from a considerable portion of central western to northwestern Iowa and a part of southeastern Iowa.

Dr. C. J. Drake, state entomologist, and his assistants do not expect any serious threat in southeastern Iowa, although much will depend on weather conditions.

Hoppers May Move In

It is possible, Drake reports, that migratory locusts might become a menace as they existed in fairly large numbers in the Red River Valley to the north and west of Iowa.

Iowa farmers might have to contend with grasshoppers moving into the state as well as those expected to be hatched from eggs already in the soil.

Moisture in western and southwestern Iowa early this season points to a possible lower per population, but it is yet to tell whether it will any significant effect on

"SUCCESS"

Success comes in cans' Failures in can'ts! He has achieved success who has lived long, laughed often. loved much, accomplished his task, has left the world better than he found it, has looked for the best in others and given the best he had There is one straight road to success, and that is merit. This is the road we should follow. The first thing to do is to choose a profession and work from the bottom up About the only thing that can be started from the top is a well. Patience to work and to wait is required Talking gets a job, but working holds it. A person has to try to do his best and try to get ahead, not leave all the work for someone else If we think we can't and get it into our minds that it is difficult to go on, failure will possibly be the result. The next thing to do would be to start over in the same way and endure the hardships all over again This would be unnecessary if we would try to start out right in the beginning with the determination to stick to it and get some place

The only school with no graduates is the school of experience and it stays open all night. Success does not come over night. It may take years to get on top It is worth while trying to accomplish a task, rather than leaving it unfinished Success consists of finding the shortest line between two places—where you are and where you want to be —Doris.

AROUND K. H. S. ASSEMBLY

The band has started marching in preparation for the music concerts this summer.

The Junior Class was well represented at Britt last week. All but a few members were in the band, and four members sang in the mixed chorus. They were Elsie Ward, Elsie Thiemann, Marian Waterman and Howard Schoenwetter This mixed chorus was made up of about sixty people from various towns in North Iowa.

The girls in the sextet made their fifth appearance this year when they sang between acts for the senior class play. The numbers they sang were "The Elfin Dance" and "Little" Sir Echo." Elsie Thiemann sang a solo, "Deep Purple," between one of the acts, and Irene Becker played a marimba solo.

The typing class is typing original poems written by the English Lit. Class. Some of these people have proved to be "great poets."

The band has received an invitation to attend the North Iowa Band Festival at Mason City again this summer.

Everyone is busy preparing for the exhibit. The Home Ec. girls are getting their dresses finished up; the lower grades are busy on their circus; and the upper grades are practicing their plays and songs. The rooms are also preparing their material for their rooms.

Wayne Buseman and Dwaine Johnson typed the news this week instead of the regular editor and assistant.

—K H S—

STYLE SHOW

The style show by the Home Economics Classes for the school exhibit will start off with a song, "We've Been Ripping." Following this, the girls have prepared a dialogue concerning some of the mishaps that have occured in the construction of the freshmen pajamas and all of the dresses. Some Dutch style dresses will be shown in the dance of "Hansel and Gretel."

After each dress has been modeled, the group will sing a final number.

Jacqueline Kudje, accompanied by Miss Brakel, will play the violin for the modeling. Elsie Ward will accompany on the piano for the other numbers.

IT'S THE MODERN WAY TO CULTIVATE CORN . . . .

Cultivate Faster and Save Time in the Field

The corn grower who wants to cultivate at the higher tractor speeds gets a pleasant surprise when he sees how easy it is with McCormick-Deering Hi-Speed sweeps. Save time in the cultivating season when time is worth money.

Save Plants by Not Cutting Roots

Hi-Speed sweeps do not plow deep. Therefore, there is no danger of cutting off the vital brace roots.

Cultivate Cleaner Because You Run Close to Row

Because of of the closer, cleaner cultivation, the plants grow stronger and produce greater yields. Weeds use moisture which is nearly always needed by the plants some time during the growing season. Close cultivation means fewer weeds to rob the plants of moisture and plant food.

Come In Today And See These Sweeps. The low price will astound you . . . . and they fit any tractor cultivator.

y-Wash Fabrics That Are Fast Color, Non-Shrinkable

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IS no wonder that smart cot-ons and other wash materials e attained to dizzy heights of e prestige, which is especially this season, for they are amaz-y lovely and versatile, and tune very occasion, formal or infor-.

owever, their attractiveness is no means their chief lure, for really grand and glorious thing ut most modern washables is promise they carry of being both color and non-shrinkable. Mod- science has worked miracles his particular. Which should be ticularly encouraging to mothers are outfitting little daughter pretty new dresses for spring summer. For peace of mind it nly necessary to demand, when ing wash materials, the kinds carry non-fade and non-shrink urance.

he materials that go to make up charming dresses pictured take added interest when you know will not fade neither will they nk. For everyday wear in class-m and happy carefree hours the day the shirtmaker dirndl dress shown to the right dn't help but satisfy the pride of t any little style-alert girl. It ade of a sanforized-shrunk slub adcloth in a smart triple stripe gn, with white collar and trim he sleeves.

opping in wash-fabric sections e days is as refreshing an expe-ce as walking through gardens om with spring flowers. The s voile florals especially make feel just like that, they are so realistically flower-patterned in colors that are breathtaking in beauty. If there is one sort of frock more than another that will make a dainty little maiden look her prettiest it is a dress of flower-printed sheer and to prove it the adorable child to the left in the picture says invitingly, "look at me!" She is wearing a dress of fairyspun lawn, which, being pre-shrunk, will wash like a dream, and what's more the beautiful print is fast color, assured by the use of vat-dye. You can get these dainty, sheer lawns in the newest color schemes, both in flowered and conventional patternings. The shops show dresses made up that are surprisingly inexpensive, and so pretty you will want several.

Which all goes to show the chic, the charm and the dependable wearableness of the wash materials that go to make up the new showings. By the way, had you heard that gingham is making style-high fashion news for spring and summer? Not only are little girls wearing it with their usual enthusiasm for this ever attractive and colorful wash weave, but mother and big sister are ordering tailored suits made of it, for fashion decrees gingham as fashionable to wear about town, at the club and to bridge parties or wherever you go during the active rounds of the day. Gingham also is the "pet" of the teen-age for party and prom evening frocks.

Speaking of frocks for party wear, when you go fabric-seeking be sure to look over the showings of cloque organdies.

Yoke and Pleats

leating continues to add infinite rm to the majority of print silk ses. Here is a fashionable Per-a design silk print in bayadere ped treatment. The silk for this ractive afternoon frock has cool e green and black as its color eme. Novel pleating lends in-est to the skirt front. The patent her belt of corselet interpreta-repeats the colors of the print. ce the waist is made with a e which is a styling greatly em-ized this season.

Ribbon Ruffles to Trim Chanel Suit

Chanel trims a superb dressy suit with applique of tiny ribbon ruffles, around the collar, down the front, and around the lower edge of the jacket and sleeves. The jacket doesn't meet, so a sparkling white gilet shows at the front. The skirt is slightly gathered and has a row of ribbon applique down the front.

From Molyneaux comes a suit that combines a rose-colored box jacket with a skirt of soft brown. The jacket has revers and pockets of brown.

Hat Shapes Most Important Item

This spring the shape of a hat will be more important than its trimming. Straws are spreading out, enormous brims in odd shapes—palettes, or shovels or fans. Others, halo style, are tied on with bandanas, mammy style. Doll hats—if you still like 'em—in straw with stiffly starched veils; the inevitable school girl sailor; felts, their crowns blocked in odd shapes; straws with brims like royal crowns, will all be good.

Recent Arrival in Millinery Realm

One of the latest arrivals in the domain of hats is the black felt sailor with rolled brim—the padre style with very flat crown and slightly upturned brim on each side. To relieve its severity and give it a distinctly feminine touch, it is draped with a cyclamen-pink mesh veil gathered at the shallow crown to fall loosely over the face.

PAUL EVANGELIZES A PROVINCE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 19:1, 8-10; 20:17-21; Ephesians 2 19-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.—Ephesians 2:13.

The Christian Church (that great organization which outwardly represents in the world the mystical organism which is the true Church) seems to be "stalled," if we may borrow a word from the automobilist. Just like a well-designed and carefully built machine which has "died" on the road.

Perhaps the lesson for today may serve to stir up some of us to the responsibility of the Church, and particularly of its individual members, for an aggressive testimony for Christ. Certainly Paul knew nothing of the defeatism which seems to have laid its paralyzing hand on present-day Christianity. Our lesson finds him again making the rounds of the churches he had earlier been used to establish. He knew of their dangers, the tendencies to backslide, the need of new life in the daily conversion of others, and he went about that business with the flaming zeal of an evangelist, with the tender compassion of a pastor, and always with the vision of the heavenly goal before him. Let us learn of Paul.

I. The Evangelist—Fearless and Tireless (Acts 19:1, 8-10).

At Ephesus Paul did the work of an evangelist with such a passion for souls and such power from God that even his enemy, Demetrius, testified (Acts 19:26) that "not alone at Ephesus but almost throughout all Asia this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people" from their heathen worship. He met great opposition both in the synagogue (v. 9) and from the worshipers of Diana (Acts 19:23-41. But he also found that God had opened for him "a great door and effectual" (I. Cor. 16:9), and we read that many believed and showed their faith by destroying the books of heathendom which were in their homes (Acts 19:19).

Are the days of such evangelism gone? Since only the power of God can explain what was accomplished by Paul, the answer would depend on the reply to the question, Has the power and purpose of God changed? Obviously the answer is "No." God is the same, and when we are ready to meet His spiritual requirements He will move again in mighty power. Am I ready? Are you ready?

II. The Pastor—Lover of Souls (Acts 20:17-21).

Having completed his journey through Macedonia and Achaia, Paul is hurrying back to Jerusalem, and not having time to stop at Ephesus he sends for the elders to meet him at Miletus, the nearest seaport. He recalls to them the experiences which he has passed through, tells them of the bonds and afflictions which await him, but above all he wants to admonish and encourage them to go on for Christ. As a pastor who has been true to God and faithful in his ministry, he is able to point to his own walk and work among them as an example, doing this in all humility. Pastor, shall we ask ourselves if we could do the same, or would we need to blush in shame over our failures?

Especially noteworthy is Paul's reference to having gone from house to house as well as teaching publicly. The work of the pulpit or from the teacher's desk loses much of its savor and usefulness if not backed up by personal contact. Some men who preach well, excuse themselves from pastoral work on the ground that they are really preachers, not pastors. Others love to do pastoral work but do not apply themselves to the work of the study, and so they say their calling is that of a pastor rather than a preacher. Brethren, let us face that matter honestly and perhaps we shall find that we are simply taking the line of least resistance. Paul had none of that spirit. He preached with all zeal and power, but he also went from house to house, "serving the Lord with all humility of mind and with many tears."

III. Fellow Citizen in God's Household (Eph. 2:19-22).

The evangelist and pastor here reminds his Ephesian converts that they have entered a goodly fellowship—"the household of God"—and have become "fellow citizens with the saints."

Some folk are called "joiners" because they like to join every possible society, organization, lodge, or what not. Well, here is the supreme fellowship of all, which knows no barrier of race, creed, social position, age, sex, or nationality, and which brings us into fellowship with the eternal God Himself. You may "join' if by faith you will take the Lord Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour and thus enter into eternal life. Will you join God's people now?

Pocket for dish towels.

TWO pockets on the inside of this pantry door are used for dish towels—the upper for clean towels; the lower for soiled ones. The pockets themselves are made from four dish towels with bright red borders and are hooked onto the door with brass rings. All the dimensions for cutting, and directions for making are given here in the sketch. If toweling by the yard is used, 3¼ yards will be required.

These directions are not in either Book 1 or Book 2, so be sure to cut them out for reference. Each of the books contains complete directions for making dozens of other useful things for yourself, your home and to use for gifts and bazaars. Many readers are also making scrap books of these articles and when they are combined with the two books, they have a treasure house of ideas that have been tested by thousands of homemakers.

Book 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, contains 48 pages of step-by-step directions which have helped thousands of women. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each. With orders for two books we include FREE, a leaflet of 36 authentic patchwork stitches. Address, Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Smiles

Awkward

"Mum, what was the name of the last station?"

"I don't know. Don't bother me. I'm reading."

"Well, I'm sorry you don't know, because Jimmy got out there."

Applicant—I'm sorry I've lost Mrs. Bigwig's reference, but these initialed spoons will show that I worked there.

Exchanged Tastes

"How children's tastes do change as they grow up!" complained the mother. "When my two were small, Johnny loved soldiers and Mary was mad on brightly painted dolls. But now Mary is mad on soldiers, and Johnny runs after every painted doll he sees."

She Named It!

"Why, Jane," protested the mistress, "that cake is as black as a cinder. Did you cook it according to my instructions?"

"Well, no mum," replied the culprit. "It's one of me own cremations."

Mother—How did you manage to break my plate, Betty?

Betty—Well, you see, mother, I threw down the towel and then I found it was in my other hand.

SAFETY TALKS

Driving Ability

THE National Safety council reports that automobile drivers reach the peak of their skill and ability after 20 years of age.

Recent studies, said the council, indicate that drivers under 20 years of age have the highest accident rate. This rate decreases quite steadily to the age of about 50, and then increases sharply.

ASK ME ANOTHER ?

A Quiz With Answers Offering Information on Various Subjects

The Questions

1. What is meant by the Roaring 40's?
2. Who had the "face that launched a thousand ships"?
3. How fast could Walter Johnson throw a ball?
4. Is there such a thing as a double-jointed person?
5. Has anyone ever seen the other side of the moon?
6. What is the difference between a thief and a robber?
7. How much oil does the Queen Mary burn?
8. What is the origin of the Sicilians, and are they Italians?

The Answers

1. The streets of New York between Fortieth and Fiftieth, especially relating to the Times Square district.
2. Helen of Troy.
3. A test made at the Remington Arms Co., showed that Walter Johnson threw a ball at the rate of 122 feet per second.
4. No. Loose or stretched ligaments give the appearance.

See for Yourself What It's Like to Cultivate with the "70"

Don't take anybody's say-so about what a great job the Oliver Row Crop "70" does with its centrally mounted cultivator. Drive the "70" and see for yourself how it has everything, does everything and is a beauty to handle as well as in looks.

See the shovels working in plain sight right in front of you, as you roll straight down the row, at 4½ m.p.h. on Tip Toe Wheels that tread so lightly that they actually cultivate the soil. You draw close up to the fence... a second's pause, up come the gangs as you whip the wheel around and the automatic steering brakes come into play . . . you're on line, the brakes release, down come the gangs and away you go down the rows with a running start.

That's cultivating as only the Row Crop "70" cultivator does it. That's smooth, lively 6-cylinder power under finger-tip control from the comfortable driver's seat—automotive steering with steering-braking on turns—the Oliver Variable Speed Governor Control that enables you to use only the fuel needed to do the work—speed that gets cultivating done when it will do the most good.

The "70" is built in two fuel types: the "70" HC with high compression engine for gasoline and the "70" KD with engine designed for kerosene or distillate. Pick your fuel and your "70" and get modern low-cost tractor power. See us about a demonstration today.

ERNEST GERARDI OPENS SCHOOL OF MUSIC AT MASON CITY

Broadcasts Program Each Tuesday And Thursday Noon On KGLO

Ernest Gerardi, formerly of Cedar Rapids, and son-inlaw of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Quandt, of Klemme, has sold his interest in the music school at Cedar Rapids to his brother.

Mr. Gerardi has opened a music school at Mason City in the Federal Building at 200 North Federal Avenue. Mr. Gerardi has his studio on the second floor with the entrance on 2nd Street, N. E.

Each Tuesday and Thursday at 12:15 P. M. Mr. Gerardi will broadcast a program of accordion music over KGLO.

The Gerardi family will remain in Klemme during the summer and Mr. Gerardi will drive to and from his work each day.

KLEMME YOUNG MAN WILL OPEN DENTAL OFFICE AT GARNER IN JUNE

Byrnes Missman, son of Dr. W. F. Missman, Klemme physician, will take over the dental practice of the late Dr. R. W. Specht at Garner, early in June.

Dr. Specht's office has been closed since his death and will remain closed until Dr. Missman opens it after he has graduated from the University of Iowa and has taken the state board examinations.

Dr. W. F. Missman is a cousin of the late Dr. Specht. Dr. Byrnes Missman was born and raised in Klemme and is well known throughout this part of the county

SHAMROCKS LOST BASEBALL THRILLER TO VENTURA NINE

Wednesday afternoon the Klemme Shamrocks journeyed to Garner and took a 3 to 2 setback at the hands of the Ventura batsmen. The locals were out in front until the sixth inning when the Ventura nine rallied to snatch the lead away from them and then hold it for the remainder of the game.

Kluckhohn went the route on the mound for the locals, while Bowen who started for Ventura had to turn the pitching duties over to Dorrow after the Shamrocks romped home with a pair of runs.

Klemme Men Attended Fishermen's Party At Dows

Walt Thada ,Stub Lewis, Ernest Gerardi and R. A. Jorgenson attended the fishermen's party and lake trout banquet put on by the Dows Commercial Club Tuesday evening, when nearly 450 fishermen were present.

The lake trout were furnished by the commercial club of Grand Marais, Minn. A delegation of sportsmen from that town was present. Fishermen from more than thirty towns in north Iowa attended.

Ernest Gerardi furnished some very fine entertainment for the meeting with his accordion.

J. R. Baggs Elected Supt. Of Hancock County School System

COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD PRESIDENTS MET TUESDAY TO ELECT COUNTY SUPT.

J. R. Baggs was reelected Hancock county superintendent of schools for another three-year term at a meeting of delegates and alternates from the 26 school districts of the county held at 11:00 a. m Tuesday at the courthouse in Garner. Mr. Baggs has served as county superintendent of schools for 28 years and he will start his new term Sept. 1.

Other candidates were Russel Fish of Goodell and Miss Thelma Hardman of Hayfield.

LARGE POULTRY FLOCKS PAY BEST FOR LABOR EXPENDED

A labor income from 79c to $1.81 an hour for time spent in caring for the poultry flock. This was what Iowa poultrymen who participated in the 1938 flock record program received last year, according to figures released by W. R. Whitfield, extension poultry husbandman at Iowa State College.

Tradition, Whitfield said, has kept most farm flocks around 100 to 200 birds. That this is not the most efficient flock size is demonstrated in the 1938 report. Figures show that the average number of birds in the low producing flocks was 99, while those in the high producing flocks were nearly 10 times as large.

A comparison of the labor income shows that the small flock paid the operator only one-thirty-second as much income as the large flock. The small flock required over twice as many hours per bird as were needed in the larger flock.

AVERY THEATRE WILL SHOW LOUIS-ROPER FIGHT PICTURES

In addition to the regular show on Friday and Saturday night of this week, Chas. Marks, manager of the Avery Theatre, announces that the pictures of the Joe Louis-Jack Roper championship fight will also be shown. The picture will be of special interest to sport fans who listened to the fight over the radio.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION AT ALGONA FAIR GROUNDS

3500 To Join In Mass Meeting Sunday, May 14th

This year marks the hundreth anniversary of the- "Saxon Immigration," a group of 700 people, who left their homeland in Saxony Germany and established a religious colony in Perry County, Missouri, from which has grown a church body that has become a strong religious force in this land having established thousands of congregations and missions from coast to coast, supporting missions on all the continents off the earth. On Sunday, May 14th large mass meetings will be held in the many circuits throughout the country, with the purpose of commemorating this signifigant religious development.

The congregations of the Algona circuit, having a membership of over 3500 will meet at the Algona fair grounds, weather permitting for two services. The morning service will commence a t10 o'clock and will be in charge of Rev. W. T. Wolfram, of St. John's at Garner. The afternoon service will commence at 2 o'clock and will be in charge of Prof. R. Neitzel of Springfield, Ill. Special selections by choirs, children's chorus and orchestra will add to the festivity. Refreshments may be had on the grounds and free coffee will be served to all. In case of cold or wet weather the services will be conducted in the auditorium of the Algona high school. Do not forget the date and place.

KLEMME GIRL PARTICIPATED IN STATE MUSIC CONTEST AT IOWA CITY

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Becker and daughter, Irene, drove to Iowa City, Friday, where Irene took part in the state high school music contest.

Miss Becker made a wonderful showing in music this year, having won in the sub-district, the district and then competed in the state contest playing her marimba. Considering that this is the first year Miss Becker has played the instrument, she has made a fine record both for herself as well as the Klemme school.

The Beckers also turned the trip into one of sight-seeing, as they spent some time visiting the University campus and later visited the School for the Blind at Vinton.

Mrs. Lester Stille Elected President Of Klemme Music Mothers Club

Busy Days Ahead

COMMENCEMENT EVENTS START IN ERNEST FRIDAY

Commencement activities will be in full swing for the Class of 1939 of the local high school this week end. The junior-senior banquet Friday evening planned around the motif of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, promises to be an outstanding event. Clever decorations, gay gowns, a fine dinner, and a toast program will all contribute to the success of the occasion. Miss Greiner is directing the juniors in the preparation for the event. Mothers of the junior students will prepare the dinner.

Baccalaureate services will be held Sunday evening in the Methodist Church. Rev. William Zabilka will deliver the sermon. Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch will assist in the service. Special music will be furnished by high school music groups.

The seniors' own program will be given next Tuesday night, when they will present the annual Class Day exercises. Important documents such as the class history, class will, class prophecy and others will be read on this occasion.

W. R. Hamilton; popular commencement speaker of Mason City, will deliver the commencement address Thursday evening, May 18. More complete details of this program will appear in next week's paper.

The school and community picnic on Friday, May 19, will also get more publicity next week, both through the paper and in the solicitation to be made during the week. Meservey High School will meet the local boys in a baseball game, which will furnish an added attraction for that day.

TREE OF LIFE

NEW YORK—This is a picture of a 60-foot statue being carved from an elm tree at South Windsor, Conn.; by Lawrence Tenney Stevens. It will symbolize a great ethereal spirit and, with two smaller companion pieces representing man and woman, will be placed in a plaza at the New York World's Fair 1939.

MRS. LESTER STILLE ELECTED PRESIDENT OF MUSIC MOTHERS CLUB

Club Purchases Additional Caps And Capes For School Band

The Music Mothers Club met Friday afternoon for their last meeting of the year, when officers were elected for the coming year. Mrs. Lester Stille was elected president, Mrs. P. W. Johnson, first vice president; Mrs. C. J. Wille, second vice president, Mrs. John Etchen, secretary, and Mrs. W. H. Galbreth, treasurer.

The school band has grown in numbers and several players lacked uniforms for marching. The Club voted to purchase eight additional caps and capes at a cost of nearly $65. The band now has uniforms for more than thirty players.

Mr. Batchelder, director, stated that he now has thirty-seven boys and girls in the school band, and prospects for several more to join.

STANDARD BEARER GIRLS MET AT CHURCH TUESDAY

The Standard Bearer girls held their Thank-offering meeting Tuesday night at the church. Roll call was answered using the Standard Bearer code. During the business meeting a contest was held and a prize was given to the one who could answer the most questions concerning the organization. Elsie Ward won the prize and similar prizes, Chinese hand-painted rouge cups, were given to Ellen Kilgore, Miss Hansen, Marjorie Lemke and Evelyn Lewis for the two best meetings of the year. Then followed devotions led by Mrs. Elder, a program directed by Miss Potter, and the candlelight ceremony. At the close of the meeting the girls presented Miss Hansen with a farewell gift.

SOYBEANS PROVE BEST EMERGENCY HAY CROP

Soybeans make the best emergency hay crop that can be grown in Iowa, says H. D. Hughes, head of the Farm Crops Department at Iowa State College.

It's the one annual legume that will grow on any soil—acid or neutral, poor or rich.

Immune To Chinch Bugs

Chinch bugs will not destroy it, and these insects have overwintered in Iowa—especially in the southern portion—in numbers large enough to cause a serious outbreak in 1939.

The acreage planted to soybeans in Iowa has increased from a negligible amount a decade ago to a million acres in 1938, a proof of their popularity.

The rehabilitation of agsiculture calls for extensive plantings of legumes but one limiting factor is the availability of seed at a price which will insure general use.

Foreign Policy Showdown Seen Over Roosevelt's Peace Appeal

By Joseph W. La Bine

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of the newspaper.

International

Though U. S. citizens have been wont to decry Britain's vaccilating foreign policy, events of 1939 have focused more than passing attention on a similar problem at home: Does Washington officialdom agree on a sound, well-reasoned foreign policy? Is such a policy reflected in common-sense national defense?

Most Americans think not, though by and large they feel alike about Hitler and Mussolini, dislike war and want no part in an arms race. Yet informed Americans agree both Germany and Italy were manhandled at Versailles, agreeing also that the U. S. must have "adequate" defense, even if it means an arms race. On the subject of American interference in foreign affairs there is debate: One school prefers traditional isolationism, though this group also resents President Roosevelt's strong reiteration of a long-standing U. S. interest in Pan-American solidarity. The other school discards silent isolationism as no longer possible in a world of fast communications where politicians ride the same boat with foreign tradesmen.

SENATOR BORAH

Until early April, President Roosevelt had accomplished little by way of clarifying foreign policy, thanks partly to an impasse with congress. Each White House plump for internationalism had been followed by congressional plumping for isolationism, until in one short week the President apparently took the ball from congress via three strokes that made the U. S. citizenry conscious of a definite interest in Europe's fish kettle. First was the apparently casual remark at Warm Springs, where Mr. Roosevelt promised "to return in the fall if we don't have a war." Later he explained that "we" meant western civilization, and that the remark was actually planned to "give direction" to public thought.

Next, while congressional isolationism began simmering, Mr. Roosevelt told the Pan-American Union's governing board that the Western hemisphere is willing to match "force to force" against aggression, in defense of New world institutions and independence. By this time congressional isolation was boiling, but a few hours later the President delivered his biggest stroke—a frank appeal for world peace via diplomatic note to Hitler and Mussolini. Its gist: The President would serve as intermediary between dictator states and 31 nations of Europe, North Africa and Asia Minor, whose integrity he wants them to respect. This would lead to an international conference for disarmament, economic settlement and at least 10 years of mutually guaranteed peace. Most fearful quotation: "Plainly the world is moving toward . . . catastrophe unless a more rational way of guiding events is found."

Congress held its breath awaiting formal replies, too concerned for reckless speech-making at the moment. Isolationism's cause seemed defeated, yet even liberal internationalists began worrying lest the U. S. be summoned to serve 1917's purpose again, i.e., bring peace to traditionally quarrelsome Europe. Idaho's Sen. William E. Borah wrote: "This is not a war over the questions of democracy or totalitarianism . . . These European powers, whatever their ideology or political views, pursue one and the same course . . . They all violate treaties, disregard . . . principals of right, pursue methods which inevitably lead to war and then call upon the United States, Canada and other nations to save them from their own intolerable and vicious methods."

Even so, the President's personal brand of foreign policy bore some fruit. Though German-Italian rejection was expected from the start, favorable replies rained on Washington so fast that one purpose was definitely accomplished: World opinion had at last been mobilized, drawing peace-loving assurances from lesser nations which fear dealing with either the Axis or the Anglo-French bloc, but who will speak their minds to an intermediary. Even more important was the psychological effect. Slow in sending their hostile, jointly prepared answers, the Rome-Berlin axis inferentially and involuntarily reminded the world that Europe's two dictators are guilty of aggression, moreover will be responsible for the war Europe soon expects.

Best anti-Roosevelt argument of isolationists is that Italy and Germany have already broken so many agreements that the President's dream of a 10-year peace "guarantee" is rather futile. Second best argument is that the note merely gave impetus to Britain's warlike Stop Hitler front, drawing France, Russia and England closer to a mutual defense pact, which is probably inspired by the unspoken hope that the U. S. is willing to join the party if need arises. Third argument is that Axis chiefs may grow hostile and seek revenge by discrediting democracies' via a new territorial grab, such as Danzig, which Britain and France have already agreed not to protest. Since such renewed belligerence would be a direct slap at President Roosevelt, isolationists still see hope for their cause.

Refugees

Patterned after Red Cross and Salvation Army, the Friends Service committee was formed in Philadelphia during the World war by Quakers. An earlier Philadelphia Quaker was Joseph Scattergood, who in 1880 built a Quaker preparatory school at West Branch, Iowa. Closed in 1931 for want of funds, Scattergood school reopens May 1 for another sort of preparatory work. Its main building renovated, its caretaker's home turned into a dormitory, the institution will house 40 to 50 refugees who can spend a maximum of 90 days there getting bearings for a new life in the U. S. Then they will shift for themselves, making way for new arrivals.

Business

A Republican, Edward J. Noble built his confectionary business into a mint called Life Savers before President Roosevelt named him chief of the civil aeronautics authority. Because he represents business, also because he believes—unlike many businessmen—that U. S. industry can move forward under current governmental regulations, Mr. Noble was too good a friend to be left in the non-controversial field of aeronautics. Result: He has been named assistant to Harry L. Hopkins, new commerce department chief who is conscientiously trying to make that traditionally dead-end office into a vital aid to U. S. business.

But Harry Hopkins is admittedly trying to sell the New Deal to business (though not without carefully removing obvious stumbling blocks) and he may have his eye on the 1940 presidential campaign. Hence Mr. Noble makes a good "front man," and now the front man is himself looking for front men.

At his first press conference in the new job, Mr. Noble gave U. S. newspapers a want-ad for patriotic, distinguished business leaders who, like himself, will take $1 a year each to assist the department's business expansion efforts. His purpose: "I want to get around me men smarter than I am to do specific jobs."

EDWARD J. NOBLE

Departmental objectives, in the Noble opinion: (1) Restore confidence, leading to increased business volume, leading in turn to lower taxes without disturbing government's revenue or extraordinary expenditures; (2) help industry reabsorb the unemployed; (3) build foreign trade, especially to combat the Nazi-Fascist threat in South America.

People

Appointed, James Slattery, Illinois commerce commission chairman, U. S. senator to succeed the late J. Hamilton Lewis.

Resigned, H. F. McElroy, for 13 years Kansas City's city manager, father of Mary McElroy, once a kidnap victim.

Resigned, Son Elliott Roosevelt, as president and a director of Hearst Radio, Inc., to spend more time with his Texas State Radio network.

Relief

His 1939 relief vote may be a record on which many a senator and congressman will rise or fall next election. Reason: Congress is determined to outlaw the present system, substituting something closer akin to state administration in which states will also pay a bigger share. If the plan succeeds, fine; if not, disgruntled relief clients could make hostile constituents at election time.

Major idea is that of South Carolina's Sen. James F. Byrnes, who boasts coalition support for a measure to place WPA, PWA, CCC and NYA into a new public works agency, provide old age assistance payments, liberalize unemployment compensation and increase aid to unemployables. Federal supervision would continue unabated, though bipartisan administration would attempt to quiet cries of politics-in-relief.

SENATOR McNARY

Many Republicans support the Byrnes bill, but the solid congressional economy front may break down under relief debate. Going whole hog against federal supervision, Oregon's Sen. Charles L. McNary (G. O. P. minority leader) wants WPA eliminated entirely because of serious "structural defects" which inevitably produce periodic "scandals." His program: (1) Return relief administration to the states; (2) create bi-partisan federal boards to allocate funds; (3) create bi-partisan state boards to disburse relief money.

Though Senator Byrnes scoffed mainly at the impossibility of "bipartisan" boards, both proposals had one other major defect, namely, financing. Senator McNary would compel states to contribute not less than 25 per cent of funds spent within their borders. Senator Byrnes would have states pay one-third. The stumbling block is that the U. S. will not cut its tax levies, yet without such cuts the 48 states cannot raise their levies to reassume relief costs which the government began easing from their shoulders in 1933. The hoped-for solution, already under discussion, calls for U. S. allocations based 50 per cent on population and 50 per cent on unemployment, proportionately higher grants going to "sub-marginal" states with less than average per capita income.

Science

In 137 B. C., two Chinese astronomers who reported an eclipse were beheaded for being drunk. Four hundred years earlier an eclipse scared the Médes and Persians into ending their five-year war. No such consequences resulted one mid-April day when the sun, moon and earth staged a similar phenomenon. Passing in front of the sun as astronomists predicted, the moon eclipsed from one-third to three-fourths of the fiery ball in a show visible throughout most of the U. S., much of Europe and eastern Russia.

Asia

Discouraging to a disguised Japanese visitor would be modern Chunking, new headquarters for westward-driven China where newsmen have been shown for the first time how crafty Gen. Chiang Kai-shek is sinking the industrial roots of a new nation, while Nippon wrestles with war-wrecked coastal districts.

Projects include a $2,500,000 iron and steel works which far-sighted Chiang began building early last fall, where a 30-ton blast furnace, a 10-ton open hearth and a 10-inch rolling mill will soon be in operation. Nearby, under American trained directors, are two Chinese-built electric furnaces making ship anchors, rails and smaller steel items.

Another important project is a vegetable oil cracking plant where experimental production will soon start on artificial gasoline refined from oil comparable to high grade motor oils. At other sites in Chungking's vast new industrial district reporters saw silk, cotton and electric plants, while several thousand workmen were laboring over new factories.

Lest Japan push westward to capture Chungking, Chinese are expanding their industrial life to other places like Szechuan, Yunnan and Kweichow.

Miscellany

Geneva's international labor office reports U. S. unemployment (estimated at 11,523,000) led all other nations in 1939's first three months. Thirteen nations reported increased unemployment in this period.

The 'Old Pioneer'

A CENTURY ago newspapers in various parts of the country frequently printed contributions signed "By an Old Pioneer." The man who thus signed himself was one of the most interesting characters in the history of the West—John Mason Peck, preacher, writer, teacher and editor.

A Yankee by birth, Peck arrived in St. Louis in 1817 as a young and zealous preacher sent out by the Baptist church to Missouri territory. Except for two or three years, the remaining four decades of his life were spent in traveling thousands of miles on horseback, preaching, exhorting, establishing schools, churches and Bible societies, making friends and giving counsel to many a settler far removed from civilization.

Also during this time he was making an even greater contribution to posterity. He was recording his observations and impressions of the people and the country through which he traveled. He interviewed many frontier notables, among them the venerable Daniel Boone and later wrote a biography of the great Kentucky pioneer.

By the time of Peck's death in 1857 his journals numbered some 53 manuscript volumes which he willed to a library. At the beginning of the Civil war, the librarian went away to fight and Peck's material was stored temporarily. When the library was moved to new quarters at the end of the war it was left behind and eventually was acquired by a paper mill and turned into cardboard. Thus much priceless historical information was lost.

But despite this loss, Peck's life had not been lived in vain. His writings, published in the newspapers, had a great deal to do with bringing settlers into Illinois and Missouri and in establishing those two commonwealths.

Under Five Flags

WALPOLE ROLAND is believed to have been present at more historic events and known personally more historic characters than any other American who is not famous in his own right.

He served under five flags, with the British, as a major in the Turkish army during the Crimean war, a colonel of cavalry in the Mexican army, a general in the Chinese army under Li Hung Chang, a scout for Custer in the Civil war. During the Crimean war he was an eyewitness to the famous Charge of the Light Brigade and in India he was present at the "Relief of Lucknow."

He knew the Duke of Wellington, Napoleon III, Sultan Mejdid VI of Turkey, who decorated him, and Abraham Lincoln, who expressed his gratitude for Roland's leaving the Chinese army to volunteer in the Union army. Roland went 20 miles into Confederate territory and returned with the topographical maps upon which the famous battle of Gettysburg was fought.

At the age of 71, he volunteered for service in the Spanish-American war and was rejected as being physically unfit. But 13 years later, at the age of 84, he was lost in the Canadian woods for 21 days without food—and came out of it without any injury to his health. In fact, he lived to be more than 100 years old, but this war-worn adventurer spent his last days in a poorhouse in Detroit.

'The American Traveler'

JOHN LEDYARD, Dartmouth sophomore, paddled home in a canoe down the Connecticut river to Hartford in 1772. This was not only the first recorded trip of its kind—it started Ledyard on his career as "The American Traveler," who saw more of the world, as it was then known, than any other man.

He went to sea and landed in London at the time the great navigator, Captain Cook, was preparing for his third South Sea voyage. He won a berth on Cook's vessel as a corporal of marines. Returning, he went to Paris and hobnobbed with Thomas Jefferson, Lafayette and John Paul Jones. Then back in America, he accepted Jefferson's suggestion that he explore the western part of North America by crossing it on foot eastward to Virginia. This meant going first to London, crossing Europe and Asia and taking a Russian ship to the Vancouver islands.

He started from London in December, 1786, and reached Stockholm uneventfully. He learned there that he was to cross the Gulf of Bothnia by sled but the ice route to Russia was not frozen over. Faced with waiting until spring to cross by boat, he decided to walk around the gulf instead—a 1,500 mile trek through unknown country.

Although the feat seems impossible, he reached St. Petersburg seven weeks later. He continued by sledge across Russia until Empress Catherine banished him as a French spy.

Shortly thereafter he started on a trip to explore Africa but died suddenly in Cairo, January 17, 1789.

By Virginia Vale

IF A stranger bobs up in your town and begins asking people to take screen tests, don't be surprised; just blame it on Jesse Lasky, who began making pictures way back in the early days. Probably you've listened to his "Gateway to Hollywood" on the air, and perhaps you heard the final result of that search for movie talent—the selection of Rowena Cook and Ralph Bowman as the two fortunate young people whose names will be changed to "Alice Eden" and "John Archer," with the leading roles in the picture, "Career," as their first screen appearances under these names.

Six other contestants were given contracts, and the search for new faces for the screen will probably be taken up again by some of the big producing companies. About every so often this search seems like a good idea to the movie-makers; usually it is practiced for a while, with plenty of ballyhoo and results that are anything but spectacular, and very little in the way of real talent is brought into the studios.

Carrying it on with the aid of radio, as Mr. Lasky has done, may be the solution. Certainly there are plenty of potential movie stars in our midst, and all they need is a chance to make good.

The nation-wide printers' con- t was conducted under the di- ction of Chairman Jack H. atherman, president of the cramento Advertising and les club in co-operation with Ir- Engler, the centennial's pub- ity chairman. Entrants in the eliminaries were judged solely on the basis of age, appearance and experience, speed and accuracy. One of the requirements for entrants was that they must have entered the printing trades prior to May 1, 1888—50 years ago. It was not required, however, that they remained continuously in the trade. The judging, in the finals will be on the following basis:

1. Age of entrant, 30 per cent.
2. Appearance and experience as a typical old-time printer, 30 per cent.
3. Speed in "sticking type," 20 per cent.
4. Accuracy in "sticking type" 20 per cent.

The 26 winners in the preliminaries, who are now competing in the semi-finals for the honor of representing their region in the grand finals at the Sacramento centennial were announced by Chairman Leatherman, as follows:

Henry Shaw, Philadelphia, Pa.; sponsored by Typothetae of Philadelphia, Pa.

Charles Frank Holden, Toledo, Ohio; sponsored by Women's Advertising Club of Toledo, Ohio.

Louis E. Goodrich, Kansas City, Mo.; sponsored by Advertising Club of Kansas City, Mo.

Jourdan M. Thompson, San Diego, Calif.; sponsored by the San Diego Advertising club, San Diego, Calif.

David Oliphant of Chicago, 91 years old and a printer for 79 years, operates a job press.

P. B. Watrous, Stratford, Okla.; sponsored by the Business Men's Club of Stratford, Okla.

Michael A. McInnis, Oakland, Calif., sponsored by the Oakland Advertising club, Oakland, Calif.

Many of the most colorful and picturesque figures of the printing industry are among the 26 semi-finalists. One of them is a true pioneer of the Golden West. He is Charles H. Smith, 84-year-old business manager and co-owner of the Catalina Islander, published at Avalon on California's famed Catalina island.

Mr. Smith was born in 1855 at a small mining camp at Mt. Diablo, Calif., his parents having come west in the gold rush, following James Marshall's epochal gold discovery at Coloma, near Sacramento, in 1849. He entered the printing trade in 1869 at the age of 14.

Mr. Smith was a co-founder of California's Native Sons of the Golden West, a fraternal organization, and counts among his closest friends Frank C. Jordan, the 80-year-old California secretary of state and dean of American state secretaries. As a child Mr. Smith watched the building of the state capitol at Sacramento on which his father was a workman.

Another native son is Charles Williams of St. Helena, Calif., who was sponsored in the contest by the San Francisco Advertising club.

Another contestant who remembers historic events and historic personages is David Oliphant, winner in the preliminary contest conducted by the Chicago Federated Advertising club. Mr. Oliphant is 91 years old and has been engaged in the printing business for 79 years. He marched in the funeral procession of Abraham Lincoln and was well acquainted with Stephen A. Douglas.

The "oldest" and the "youngest" in the contest is represented by 94-year-old Benjamin Franklin Waite of Johnson City, N. Y., and 64-year-old Louis E. Goodrich of Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Waite, who was named in honor of Benjamin Franklin, the greatest of all American printers, was sponsored in the contest by both the Syracuse Advertising Club of New York and the Schenectady Advertising club. In spite of his advanced years, Mr. Waite is still active in the daily operation of his business, embracing all branches of printing and the allied arts. He does job and book work, magazines and lithochrome work. He also publishes a newspaper, Life and Herald, and is one of its principal writers and advertising men. He is, in fact, able to engineer a complete campaign. He is the oldest living member of the International Typographical union, and started his career as a printer's devil in 1859 at Worcester, N. Y.

B. F. Waite

Mr. Waite counts among his acquaintances many famed business men and statesmen, including George Francis Train, of the Union Pacific railroad, and Theodore Roosevelt when he was New York police commissioner. He also worked with Col. Franklin Roosevelt, father of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. He was also associated with Andrew Kellogg in development of off-set printing on an old Rubel press.

The "youngster" in the semi-finals is Louis E. Goodrich, who was sponsored by the Advertising Club of Kansas City, Mo. He's a mere infant of 64 years, who still works daily in display advertising composition on the Kansas City Star where he has been employed since 1887. Mr. Goodrich served 16 years as "ad-alley" superintendent, having started his printing career in 1875. Like Mr. Smith and Mr. Oliphant, he numbers many famous persons among his acquaintances.

L. E. Goodrich

A printer for nearly 70 years is Robert E. Carr, 86 years old, of Hammond, La., the entry of the Advertising Club of New Orleans. Before coming South (he has lived in Hammond for 50 years) Mr. Carr worked in Chicago. He established the Daily Herald in Hammond in 1905 and operated it for 12 years—or until the outbreak of the World war, when newsprint soared to such a prohibitive price that the small daily and weekly newspaper found it difficult to operate. When the Herald ceased publication newsprint was quoted at 26 cents a pound, with restricted shipments. The Herald for a time managed to get sufficient supply to publish daily, except Sunday, for a limited time. One weekly paper used wallpaper for one edition, being unable to get "just one bundle" upon which to put out its issue. jobs or operating presses.

Mr. Carr abandoned his daily publication and confined his activities to his job printing plant. He is still able to do a day's work, putting in from six to eight hours a day.

The entry of the Typothetae of Philadelphia is Henry Shaw, 80 years old, who started printing at Millington's in London, England, in 1867 and remained active until 1933. While employed in Paris, France, he witnessed and contributed to the building of the Statue of Liberty which was presented to the people of the United States by the people of France in 1885.

Henry Shaw

A contestant who looks like the typical frontier editor is Ben Wood, who comes from one of the "last frontier" states —Arizona and who was sponsored in the contest by the Advertising Club of Phoenix, Ariz. He can tell some interesting tales of the "wild and woolly" days in the Southwest.

Ben F. Wood

Another Western old-timer is T. A. Hayes, the entry of the Boise (Idaho) Advertising club. Mr. Hayes was born in 1851 and started as an apprentice printer in 1867. Despite his 88 years, he is still actively engaged in the business as head of the Hayes Printing company of Blackfoot, Idaho.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Explodes Some False Notions About Food; Warns Homemakers Against Fallacies and Superstitions

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

IT HAS been well said that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. This is particularly true of dietary facts, for half-truths can be more misleading than lies.

There should be no place for half-truths, misinformation or superstition in a matter so vital as the choice of food. Yet judging from the letters that come to my desk, thousands of homemakers are being influenced, not by scientific knowledge, but by "old wives tales," and a multitude of fads and fancies which there is not a shred of scientific evidence to support.

Some food fallacies are harmless. Others may be detrimental to health. For they result in an unbalanced diet that deprives the body of substances needed to maintain physical efficiency at the highest possible level.

Misinformation About Meat

Many common and persistent fallacies concern the eating of meat. It is wrongly charged that light meats are more wholesome than dark meats . . . that veal is not completely digested . . . that meat is a contributing cause to disease, and many other equally foolish notions. All these misconceptions are in a class with the absurd ideas that eating turnips will make you brave, that lettuce is a cure for insomnia, or fish a food for the brain.

There is no evidence to support the belief that some meats are less desirable than others because they are less completely digested. Tests show that the length of time meat remains in the stomach varies with such factors as the quantity of fat present, the method of cooking, and the amount of chewing it receives. But there is no marked difference in the thoroughness with which the different kinds of meats are digested.

Erroneous Ideas About Cheese

Other fallacies that continually crop up in my mail are the ideas that cheese is constipating, and that this good food is not completely digestible. Neither belief is in accordance with the facts.

Numerous tests have shown that when cheese is given a proper place in the diet, it is usually well digested. Moreover, it has been demonstrated that there is practically no difference between cheese and meat with respect to ease of digestion.

As for the completeness with which this food is utilized by the body, studies made by investigators for the United States department of agriculture, demonstrated that on the average, about 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed!

Some few persons may have an allergy to cheese just as they are sensitive to a variety of other protein foods. But that is an abnormal reaction and has no bearing on the use of cheese by persons in normal health.

Cheese Is Not Constipating

The mistaken idea that cheese is constipating doubtless arose from poor menu planning. Cheese is a highly concentrated food. It enjoys the distinction of being the most concentrated source of protein known. Because of this fact, menus containing cheese should be balanced by the inclusion of foods containing bulk or cellulose, such as fruits, vegetables or whole grain breads. When these foods are omitted, it is not the presence of cheese, but the absence of bulk that is responsible for the meal being insufficiently laxative.

Homemakers who have the interests of their families at heart will banish the notion that cheese is either constipating or difficult to digest when properly used. They will give this splendid food a regular place in their menus and thereby provide valuable nourishment at a most economical cost. It is doubtful if any other food provides such a variety of important nutrients concentrated in such a small space. Besides its fine quality protein, cheese is notable for its energy values, for supplying the minerals, calcium and phosphorus, needed for teeth and bones, and as a source of vitamin A.

Don't Make Mistakes About Milk

Not even milk has escaped a variety of groundless superstitions. It is said to be "fattening" when the truth of the matter is that no food is fattening unless consumed in excess of bodily needs. The food faddists say that fruits and milk must never be taken at the same meal, for the fruit acids will cause the milk to curdle. Here is an outstanding example of the misleading effect of half-truths. For it is a physiological fact that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the action of the hydrochloric acid!

Some people are afraid to eat acid-tasting fruits because they have the erroneous idea that they produce "acidity" in the body. In spite of their acid taste, however, most fruits have an alkaline reaction following digestion.

My earnest advice to homemakers is to disregard all such fads and fancies. Don't be guided by hearsay advice. Eat a wide variety of foods in moderation. Learn what constitutes a well-balanced diet. And make that your health ideal.

It isn't love altogether that makes a marriage a success. It's mixed with common sense.

Inefficiency usually lies in incapacity to observe closely.

A he man is right agreeable if he isn't too assertive about it.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

REAL ACTION BEGINS

Now that the theorizing over consolidation of state departments has ended the actual work of coordination has begun. Executives of the state departments concerned in these consolidations have discovered that tremedous savings in overhead costs are possible and that nearly every one of the departments was generously overstaffed. Because of the uncertainty over the full extent of the reorganization program, comparatively few jobs have been involved in purely political personnel changes. But the army of job hunters is on the march again and it is only reasonable to suppose that the customary rewards will soon be given to Republican workers.

OVERHEAD DECREASING

Maybe it was because many departments on January 2 found their predecessors had practically liquidated their appropriations that economy has been marked in these first few months of the Wilson administration. Or maybe it is just the inevitable result of common sense. Whatever the cause the records show that every department of state government operated cheaper for the first three months of 1939 at less cost than for the same period last year. The elimination of excess employees continues steadily until the number on the public payroll today has been reduced nearly to the 1931 level. The gradual infiltration of Republican supporters into jobs now held by Hawkeye New Dealers will not be made upon a "man for man" basis. The ratio of Republican replacement into jobs now held by Democrats will probably be on a two-for-four or three-for-four basis. A minimum reduction of twenty-five per cent in the number of state payrollers is sought.

DUMMY PLATES

"Dummy" license plates are being used on state cars again but under Republican rule they are being used according to law and only after approval of the executive council. Last summer the legislative committee on retrenchment and reform discovered that several hundred of these plates were being used by state employees and officers in place of the official plates which mark the car as state owned—and supposedly used only on official business. "Dummy" plates are regular plates withdrawn from the county treasurer and supposedly cancelled. In case a state employee cared to do so—and a set of dummy plates were available — official state plates could be removed and the state owned car used for private affairs. Dummy plates do have a legitimate use in disguising the official cars of police and investigators. And the 59 sets of such plates recently authorized by the executive council, all are assigned to police departments and the bureau of investigation.

MORE ELIMINATIONS

The absorption of the securities department into the office of the Commissioner of Insurance is another tangible evidence of how consolidation can come about without the slightest impairment of insurance. Formerly under the Secretary of State, the securities department occupied spacious offices in the state house and employed ten persons. Its absorption into the insurance department vacates a large office and makes it possible to house some other department without extra rental payments and reduces other administrative costs by more than fifty per cent. Commissioner of Insurance Charles R. Fischer believes his department can absorb the securities department with a maximum of four employees in place of the customary ten. In addition three automobiles used by the securities department will be removed from service as unnecessary.

TAG ENDS

Included in appropriations were provisions for fire escapes and a general fireproofing of all state institutions . . . . . Dave McCreery, new member of the Board of Control, notffied the Executive Council that he "can't see over the hood of the Buicks and Oldsmobiles the board has; get me something smaller" . . . . . the conservation bill forbids a dog "to chase a raccoon for 30 days before the opening of the season" . . . . . that would be a long run for any dog . . . . . current federal debt total $40,056.-071,243.60 . . . . . your share $308.12.

FISHING SEASON OPENS NEXT MONDAY

Nimrods who take to the lakes and streams next Monday in quest of game fish should bear in mind there are a few changes in the laws this year. For the first time women are required to pay a $1 license to fish in state-owned lakes.

Fishermen and hunters who lose their license may now be abe to procure a duplicate for 25 cents.

The last couple of years there was some confusion regarding minnows and frogs for bait as the season did not open until May 15. However, it is now legal to have them in possession from May 12 to Nov. 15.

The season opens May 15th on Northern pike (pickerel), Wall-eyed Pike, Yellow Perch, Yellow, Striped and Silver Bass, and Trout, the latter season opened April 1st.

The daily catch limit on Northern Pike, Wall-eyed Pike is 8, Perch, Yellow, Striped and Silver Bass, 15, Bullheads 25. The daily catch limit on fish of all kinds is 25, and the maximum possession limit is 30. And so much for that.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY ON KLEMME BOLOGNA

C. C. Kilgore had a birthday one day last week and received a package in the mail (with postage due) which he supposed was from his son, Clair, in Chicago. The package was taken home and when unwrapped contained a fine ring of bologna. The greater portion of the fine meat reposed on C. C.'s plate for supper and he was very enthusiastic regarding its fine flavor (and the thoughfulness of his son for remembering his birthday) Mr. Kilgore remarked, "What a fine flavor, why can't we get bologna like that here?" Son "Pete" (who knew more about the package) laughed out and remarked that maybe you could get bologna like that in any Klemme store!

C. C. later learned that Postmaster John Day had purchased the bologna in a local store and had fixed up the package as a joke! Postmaster Day had better watch his step! C. C. remembers like an elephant.

KLEMME GIRL GOES PLACES WITH MUSIC

Our bouquet this week goes to Miss Irene Becker, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Fred Becker, for the wonderful progress she has made in music. Miss Becker has won honors for herself and for her school by playing her way on the marimba to a state music contest. Against strong competition Miss Becker came out ahead in the Sub-District Music Contest, then conquered a District Contest and then went into the State Contest. She did not win first place there, but was ranked in the upper bracket of musicians. And she did it with less than one year of experience on the instrument! Klemme congratulates Miss Becker and hopes that she will bring back the state ribbon next year!

THIS COLUMN HAS A READER . . . AT LEAST ONE!

We are in receipt of a note from our friend Earl Hall of the Mason City Globe-Gazette in which he lets out a squawk because we fail to publish the "Ink Splatters for a couple of times. Hurray! Now we know we have readers . . . at least one! Earl probably is running low on his material for his "Eye Observing column and wants to swipe some of our hot stuff.

That makes things even . . . we read Earl's column, he reads our's so he has at least one reader, and we have one!

Maybe it would be a good idea to have a column readers convention at the lake some evening . . . a big picnic . . . speeches . . . noise . . . we would both be there! What say, Earl?

WE PREFER TO EAT OUR OWN TROUT

Somebody thought they would have some fun with this writer by clipping from the Mason City Globe-Gazette an article telling of the big fishermen's party at Dows on Tuesday night at which place the commercial club would serve lake trout shipped in from Grand Marais, Minn. On the bottom of the clipping was penned this inscription: "A sure way to get a taste of trout."

We might reply that we have consumed PLENTY of lake trout and which we personally hooked in Canada. We also expect to eat some brook trout this summer and . . . we will also do the catching! Come again, brother.

One pound of cheese contains as much nutriment as two pounds of meat.

WHERE COOPERATION PAYS

Hancock County Co-Op. Oil Association

"SERVING ALL PARTS OF HANCOCK COUNTY

Quick Deliveries—Station And Tank Wagon Service

Cooperation is the biggest word in the dictionary: it is the power that builds states and nations. Splendid cooperation has established the Hancock County Cooperative Oil Co They have dispensed quality products from the beginning and they are expert on lubrication. They are competent to advise the correct grade of motor oil for your individual motor.

The firm is home owned for the benefit of the home community. They deal in high grade gasoline, high grade oils and greases.

They buy in large quantities and sell direct to the consumer, thereby in that way eliminate a large expense in the middleman's profit and are able to give you a better price than competitive concerns who sell through agents only.

By trading with them you are helping yourself . If you can spend your money with a home concern, you have the goods and the money is kept at home, but if you spend it with a foreign concern, you have the goods and they have the money. So let's get our shoulder to the wheel and push together.

You can readily appreciate the fact that thousands of dollars are placed in local circulation by this company which would otherwise never make the aquaintance of the people of Hancock County. They will see that you receive prompt efficient service and will prove to you that your patronage is appreciated.

they do not undergo the detrimental features of being shipped several hundred miles before being delivered to you. In addition their reputation as your friends and neighbors stands behind their transactions with you. Should any dissatisfaction with their chicks arise they will be right at KANAWHA to correct it.

This is a modern hatchery which is one of the essential factors in promoting the more extensive raising of poultry in this section.

This hatchery is kown all over this section. Those in charge are people of wide experience in this important business.

You should visit this hatchery if you have not already done so They make a specialty of this business and can serve you well if you are in the market for chicks

They are authorities upon all matters pertaining to baby chicks. Their chicks are sturdy and full of pep and those who have purchased baby chicks here are well satisfied.

This shows the kinds of chicks they sell and it is not strange that their business has grown to such large proportions and is still growing. They give attention to letters, personal calls or telephone inquiries.

Dentists Once Trained on Apprenticeship Plan

Prior to the inauguration of for-al dental education, practitioners eceived their training by serving as pprentices to dentists already in ractice. This method of instrucon continued throughout the world ntil 1840, writes Harry Bear in the ichmond Times-Dispatch. Amerian dentistry has developed through chools for instruction, scientific so-eties and journals for the dissemi-ation of its literature.

The founding of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery in 1840, the first dental school in the world, was the beginning of formal dental education. The Baltimore college, the publication of the American Journal of Dental Science in 1839, and the organization of the American Society of Dental Surgeons in 1840 marked the real beginning of the development of American dentistry. In 1840, a student was required to spend only four months in college to receive the degree of doctor of dental surgery.

The entrance requirements and the content of the dental course varied for many years. In 1884 the curriculum had advanced to a two-year course of five months each. When the University College of Medicine was established in Richmond in 1893 the dental course was three years in length. The admission requirements consisted of a "good English education."

Practitioners have for many years observed that affections in one part of the body manifested symptoms elsewhere. During the past century writers have recorded observations of diseases which may have had their origin in other organs of the body—the teeth, for instance

To Be June Bride

Mr and Mrs. William Meyer of Klemme announce the approaching marrigae of their daughter, Ardith Evelyn, to Marlin Bowles of near Ventura which will take place June 3 in the Garner Lutheran church. The Britt Hatchery conducts one of the best managed and most widely known hatcheries in this part of the state. Thousands of strong, healthy chicks annually leave this institution to find homes in nearby towns and on the farms of the surrounding territory.

Poultry breeders and fanciers throughout this part of the state have come to know this firm through the high quality of the chicks they hatch. Local produce raisers know that it is not necessary to go farther than the Britt Hatchery for the kind of chicks they want.

This firm's business has been built as a result of satisfied customers sending in repeat orders from year to year and recommending them to our friends.

The raising of poultry has become more important in the revenue of any farm, profit depending on the quality of the chicks obtained and the care they receive.

Make your plans and place your orders now.

King Cobra Most Feared, Also Most Intelligent

The king cobra, or hamadryad, of Burma, is the largest as well as the most deadly of poisonous snakes. Its average length is twelve feet, and individuals have been known to measure eighteen feet, which is three times the length of the common "hooded horror" cobra of India. The king cobra's intelligence, quick temper, extraordinary agility, and lethal poison makes it the most dreaded of all snakes, asserts Guy Murchie, Jr., in the Chicago Tribune.

The spectacular appearance of the king cobra and its terrifying reputation are enough in certain parts of Burma to cause it to be hunted by big-game hunters much as is the tiger in India and the Lion in frica. The only difference is, as Adventurer Gordon Sinclair once wrote: "You don't hunt the hamadryads. They hunt you If you go out to track down a tiger the element of surprise is all yours. You ambush the tiger and smash him down. But you can't put a hamadryad on the spot; the surprise element is all his. He sees you coming and either lies in ambush for you or comes for you like a spluttering skyrocket"

According to one authority, the king cobra is the most intelligent of all snakes It is one of the very few snakes, for instance, that realizes when in captivity that it must rely on its keeper for food A slight vibration at the door of a king cobra's cage is enough to bring the snake at ful speed to the crack, where it will explore up and down the frame with flipping tongue in anticipation of receiving food. And it will invariably lift its head and anxiously look about at feeding time, even before the keeper has put in his appearance.

"None But Americans on Guard"

There is a tradition that during an especially critical period of the Revolution General Washington issued the order, "Put none but Americans on guard tonight." There is no record that such an order was ever issued, but that it might have been issued is suggested by a circular letter which Washington sent to his regimental commanders in 1777 regarding recruits for his bodyguard: "You will therefore send me none but natives." A few months before Thomas Hickey, a pretended deserter from the British army, had tried to poison Washington and had been convicted and hanged. "Put none but Americans on guard" was one of the mottoes of the Know Nothing party which was organized about 1852

Use of Word "Bonus"

The word "bonus" is a Latin adjective meaning good, and is used in England in the sense of gift In that country it was first applied to a dividend or distribution of a surplus to policy holders of a life insurance company, while in this country, in industrial and commercial circles, it came to mean something extra, or to the good It was not until after the World war, however, that a gift or additional compensation to soldiers was called a bonus

Garner Iowa

New Feed Grinding And Mixing Equipment

Take in your farm grains and have them mixed with VITARICH CONCENTRATE Or Buy FAULTLESS BRAND MASH the ready mixed feed

There is great economy in using feeds that are scientifically balanced as there is no waste The obsolete idea of having just anything ground up for feed has been replaced by the modern idea of securing scientifically balanced rations for both animal and fowl. The new idea is putting money in the pockets of the producer.

The products of the Garner Feed Company are of high quality Producers have learned from actual experience that the best results can be obtained through the use of mixed and ground feeds.

There is nothing that adds more to the progress and prosperity of the community than progressive firms which appreciate the necessity of keeping up with the times in the operation of their business.

Mr. De Bord is courteous and tries to render the best of service to his customers and help them in every way possible, such as answering questions and giving advice and information on all subjects allied to his business.

A City Farmer

NEW YORK—A cameraman recently snapped Grover A. Whalen, President of the New York World's Fair 1939, in overalls. He was inspecting a wheat field—the first to be planted in New York City in 65 years. It is part of a food exhibit.

Origin of Pointer in Doubt

The origin of the pointer is not clear. The theory that it originally came from Spain has been shattered in recent years. It is generally conceded that pointers came into use in the British Isles and on the continent of Europe about the same time. However, to the English goes the credit for developing the English pointer. As for the pointer's lineage, there isn't much doubt that several breeds have helped make the English pointer as we have him.

Kitchen Kinks

If you wish a smooth gravy, then add the liquid cold. If liquid is added hot, the starch granules may cook too rapidly and lumpy gravy results. Adding the liquid cool, stirring constantly and cooking long enough to take away the raw starch taste will almost insure first class gravy.

To Clarify Fat:-

Hot weather is likely to cause bacon fat to become rancid which ruins it for cooking purposes. But if you cook the rancid fat with slices of raw potato, which will absorb the strong flavor and cause the impurities to settle to the bottom.

An easy method if cutting quilt pieces is to use a pattern made of sandpaper. This will keep the material from slipping and the pattern will not wear out as quickly as paper.

Pillows may be made with kapok or feathers. Goose down is considered the best. If kapok is used it must be sunned often or the material will disintegrate and go to pieces. It is a vegetable fiber.

AROUND K. H. S. ASSEMBLY

The Juniors distributed the invitations for the Junior-Senior banquet this week.

The Juniors were entertained to a picnic and roller skating party last week by the Seniors. Everyone had a good time and the Juniors would like to take this opportunity of thanking the Seniors for it.

The doors to the gym will be opened about four o'clock Friday afternoon, May 12, to the public to view the setting for the banquet The Juniors cordially invite everyone in to see what they have done.

The Senior class entertained the Junior class and members of the faculty last Wednesday afternoon and evening They enjoyed a baseball game between Klemme and Ventura. After the game, the group journeyed on to State Park and had a weiner and marshmallow roast. To finish up the day's entertainment, they went roller skating and a box of candy was won by Elsie Ward, Lorraine Buntenbach, and Ruben Grosshuesch for having lucky numbers. Everyone reported a "swell" time even if the baseball game nearly had to be called off because of May showers.

The Freshmen and Sophomores had a party two weeks ago similar to the one the Juniors and Seniors had Wednesday night.

The Seniors received their announcements and cards last week.

Grade School News

GRADES 1 & 2

We have been checking stories on our May Story Chart this week.

Isabelle brought a pretty plant to school. It had three flowers on it

Two more moths came out this week They are both very pretty.

Luella, Richard K. and Roger finished the book they have been reading. They got new books on Monday.

Many of the children have brought pretty bouquets to school We like flowers in our room.

GRADES 3 & 4

Ruth Smith brought treats to school Monday afternoon. Her birthday is in June but as school is out then, she wanted to bring some treats now.

Many of the children gave May baskets Monday night. Some of them brought them to school.

One morning a ball came through one of the north windows. We were glad that it was before school time.

Many of the children have brought bouquets of flowers to school.

GRADES 5 & 6

Patricia Kudje and Ronald Brinkman—Reporters

We have started a new unit in science on "Plants." We have cut seeds in two to study their different parts. We have planted different kinds of seeds to use in experiments.

Instead of starting a new health contest, we are just being checked each morning for cleanliness.

Miss Irvine is reading the book "Dorothy Dixon Wins Her Wings" to us.

Mary Lou had a birthday Thursday. She brought treats for the room.

Those who got perfect scores in spelling are Ruth, Mavis, Robert, Junior, Ewald, Marjorie, Duard, Patricia, and Betty.

Doris Spitler was a visitor in our room Friday.

GRADES 7 & 8

Eighth Grade English Class —Reporter

This week we have been busy preparing for exhibit and the program. Wednesday night we had a dress rehearsal.

Betty, Eunice, Freda, Corrine, Larry, Barbara, and Caroline received a perfect score in spelling.

R. E. Nesbit Cafe
Garner, Iowa

People used to say "meet me at the town pump," but at Garner they say "meet me at the Nesbit Cafe" where the best in meals, lunches, beverages and refreshments are to be had.

Coffee is one item that adds much to the enjoyment of a meal or lunch. This cafe specializes in "Excellent Coffee" and you are assured of the finest coffee in town. Coffee brings more repeat business than any other food item.

The Nesbit Cafe serves delicious home made pastry to their discriminating customers, while the margin of profit is small the satisfaction is a great deal larger.

The service is excellent, prices are moderate and the sanitary conditions are above reproach, as they always receive a high mark in sanitation whenever the inspector calls.

The surroundings are just the kind you will appreciate, your meals or lunch in. Come in as you are, you are always welcome at the Nesbit Cafe.

The "customer is the boss" at this cafe, and you will find your wants are well taken care of at this popular cafe. The Nesbit's care for your hunger in a way that you will remember. (Adv.)

Wm. Butz uses great care in selecting the flocks from which he secures hatching eggs and maintains absolute uniform temperatures during incubation. He spares no pains in producing for you the sturdy healthy chicks for which the BUTZ HATCHERY is noted. Quality tells in chicks just the same as it does in livestock.

When you purchase your chicks from the Butz Hatchery, you secure superior chicks. His experience in the poultry business is at your service and he is competent to advise you regarding your poultry problems. He stands behind each transaction of the BUTZ HATCHERY and should any dissatisfaction arise will be there to adjust it. You can pay more elsewhere but you cannot secure better chicks than those he is offering.

Mr. Butz is very careful not to include any chicks in your order which will not develop rapidly with proper care.

Mr. Butz wishes to thank you for your orders in the past and trusts you will order his high quality chicks in 1939. We recommend the BUTZ HATCHERY to our readers. (Adv.)

CHOLERA IS ENEMY NO. 1 OF MODERN SWINE PRODUCER

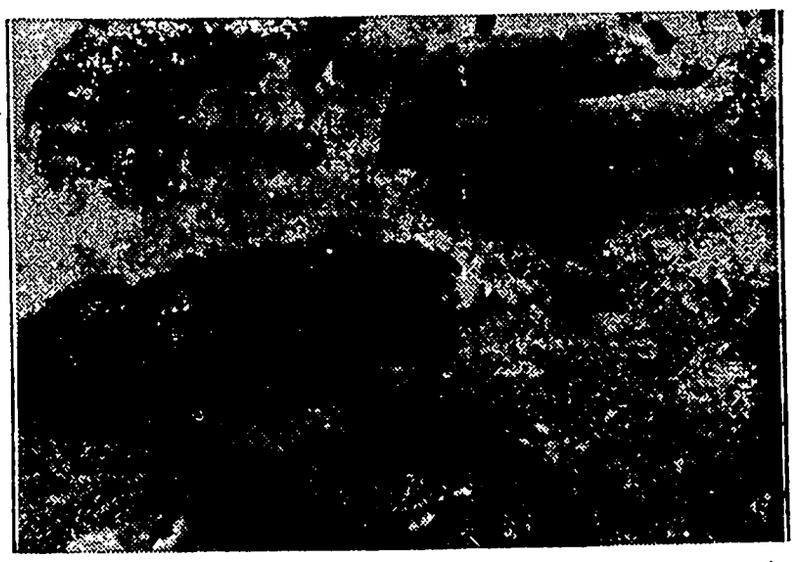
There are two words which the American swine producer dreads more than all others—the words Hog Cholera. For, in spite of all modern practices and scientific methods of control, cholera still ranks as America's Number 1 swine destroyer. It strikes without warning, it travels swiftly from farm to farm, and it is a threat the year 'round.

The first signs of cholera which a farmer sees may be one or two hogs in a herd showing unwillingness to leave their pens. When driven out, they may have their backs humped, may shiver a bit, or show slight weakness in their back legs. Next day a few more hogs show sluggishness. Eventually the whole herd is down, and then it is probably too late to save them.

There is no cure for cholera. The only safeguard lies in vaccination. The best protection is the so-called "double treatment" administered by a veterinarian. This is best given about weaning time, while the pigs are young and well.

The importance of having the immunizing done by a veterinarian is due to the fact that the veterinarian can best tell if the pigs are in proper condition to be vaccinated, and through his knowledge can do an immunizing job which can be relied on.

According to statistics, there will be nearly $30,000,000 worth of hogs lost this year, through cholera. The wise farmer will take no chances with this disease, but will have his pigs immunized at the start of the season.



These hogs have cholera. Notice the signs of weakness, marked prostration, and a tendency to pile up.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for May 7

PAUL WORKS A HARD FIELD

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1, 4-11; I Corinthians 2:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.—Philippians 4:13.

"Sissy!" That one word uttered with the depth of scorn of which only a school boy is capable, is enough to ruin the happiness of the one toward whom it is directed. The writer of these notes has a manly son of eight years of age who has many ambitions in his young heart, but one great fear, namely, that he may do something that will mark him as a "sissy." It is a commendable thing that boys should feel that way, provided, of course, that they are properly instructed in home and church so that they know that real manly courage does not mean being a ruffian or an ungodly person.

One could wish that more of that spirit were evident in the Christian Church. We really have all too many professed believers who are "soft"—afraid of the hard blows of life. These people tell young folk both by word and deed that Christianity is a religion for the soft-hearted and sentimental, when as a matter of fact it calls for all the red-blooded vitality of the strongest man and woman. Here is a place for the boy or girl, man or woman who has a backbone and the spirit of the pioneer. It is a great and glorious battle in which we are engaged. Paul knew it and lived it. In the progress of his ministry we find him at Athens (Acts 17), where a brilliant appeal to the philosophers of that place brought little result. From thence he comes to Corinth, one of the greatest and most wicked cities of the day. Here he meets a difficult task.

I. Human Inability (Acts 18:1, 4-8).

To call a man a "Corinthian" was to label him as a drunkard and a libertine. The town was really tough and Paul walked right into that impossible situation to preach the gospel. He naturally first went to the Jews in the synagogue, but when he preached Christ they made short work of putting him out. Rather we should say he very definitely separated himself from them. Consider the graphic picture in verse 6. But he didn't go far, he set up his testimony for Christ in the house next door, where God had a believer all prepared to receive him. The preacher of the truth may move, but he does not run away from God's appointed place.

Opposition was evidently keen, and as Paul came and went the leaders in the synagogue would probably meet him and make known their plans to destroy him. This, added to the opposition of the wicked city, was enough to discourage any man. He had some results (v. 8), but on the whole he had to struggle with the heartbreak of an impossible task. But the hour of man's extremity is the time of God's opportunity. There comes

II. Divine Encouragement (Acts 18:9-11).

God never tries His people beyond their ability to bear. It is not always given to His servants to have the assurance of success which came to Paul, but in all probability they do not face such staggering discouragement. In any case, those who have walked in the valley as well as on the mountain top with the Lord testify that He gives strength in the hour of weakness to all those who trust Him.

Paul was assured that no bodily harm would come to him and that he was not to think that he was alone, for there were many of God's people even in that wicked city. Safety and fellowship were thus assured, and none too soon, for almost at once a bitter persecution broke out against him. Read verses 12-17. Note that the assurance of God's protecting care does not mean that we shall escape trials and sorrows, but that we are to be kept in the midst of them.

III. The Secret of Victory (I Cor. 2:15).

Looking back on his ministry in Corinth, Paul writes of the secret of his successful work there. This is a passage that every teacher and preacher of God's Word should prayerfully ponder. Eloquence, human wisdom, and self-confidence may be the basis of success in the things of the world, but not in the ministry of the gospel. How well we know that the most carefully reasoned and well-phrased message may be utterly flat and powerless, while the stumbling utterance from a heart full of the love and grace of God "becomes a fire and a searching and a burning, because the Holy Spirit catches it up and bears it upon the inner consciousness of men" (Morgan). The man who preaches without his soul atremble with the sacredness of his task, his own unworthiness, and an appreciation of the power of God, may be eloquent and learned, but he will accomplish little for God.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT
SEWING CIRCLE

BRAID used to give the effect of a bolero is a chief charm of this pretty dress, for street and daytime. It accents the soft fullness of the bodice, above a tiny waist and slim-hipped, circular skirt. Make it of flat crepe, checked or printed silk for now. Later on, have it in gingham, linen or batiste.

Pretty Basque Frock.

This adorable basque frock is smart for both school and parties. It puffs out so charmingly at the shoulders, flares at the skirt hem, and hugs in to a small, pointed waist. Sash bows, tied in the back, draw it in snugly, and look gay and pretty besides. For school, choose gingham, calico or percale. For parties, taffeta or silk crepe.

The Patterns.

No. 1672 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 39-inch material, plus 5 yards of braid.

No. 1722 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2⅜ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1¾ yards of trimming.

New Spring-Summer Pattern Book

Send 15 cents for Barbara Bell's Spring-Summer Pattern Book! Make smart new frocks for street, daytime and afternoon, with these simple, carefully planned designs! It's chic, it's easy, it's economical, to sew your own. Each pattern includes a step-by-step sew chart to guide beginners.

SAFETY TALKS

The Careless Male

It appears that the male of the species is more careless than the female.

Of every 100,000 males in the United States, 119.6 were killed in accidents during 1937, reports the National Safety council.

Only 51.3 of every 100,000 women suffered accident deaths.

The Questions

1. When does a breeze become a wind?
2. How many miles does the earth travel daily?
3. Does Yukon Territory belong to Alaska?
4. How far can the human eye see?
5. Can anything be greater in width than in length?
6. In what year were the first U. S. coins made?
7. Is Joan of Arc's home still in existence?
8. Does an elephant drink with its trunk or its mouth?
9. Is it true that if a car going 40 miles an hour strikes a solid wall, it would strike with the same force
10. Can earthquakes be predicted?

The Answers

1. When it blows from 7 to 38 miles per hour.
2. On its annual trip around the sun the earth travels about 1,601,644 miles daily.
as if it had fallen from a tall building?
3. No; it is part of the Dominion of Canada.
4. One can see some objects from an almost unlimited distance, depending upon the size and brightness of the object. For example, the sun is over 92,000,000 miles away.
5. No, length is always the longer dimension.
6. In 1793.
7. The house where she was born still stands at Domremy, in eastern France. Nearby are the Chenu woods where the voices called her to her patriotic mission. The dungeon at Rouen, where she spent her last days, is also still in existence.
8. Its mouth. It sucks up water in its trunk and squirts it into its mouth.
9. The National Bureau of Standards says that a car going 40 miles per hour, hitting against a solid wall, would strike with a force equivalent to falling from a height of 52 feet—at least a four-story building.
10. Some general trends of crustal disturbances may be predicted, but no really workable system has been produced. The case isn't hopeless, scientists concluding that "some day" fairly precise predictions may be made after a complete charting and study of earthquake areas has been completed. That may take 50 years.

Britt Rendering Works East Of Britt

Erected in 1938 on Carl Hampe farm, one-half mile east of Britt limits. Building is of brick and concrete construction, two stories, size of foundation 48x44 ft. J. A. Bailey, Britt contractor built the plant.

First floor is equipped with two coolers—one 6,000 pounds and one of 4,000 pounds capacity; and Exceller press, a new 100 h. p. steam boiler, and other needed equipment.

The second floor is 48x26 ft. and is used as an operating room, where all skinning and dissecting of animals is done.

Products are tankage and grease. The tankage is sold in the territories where animals are gathered. Animals to be processed come from Wesley, Corwith, Kanawha, Klemme, Garner, Miller, Crystal Lake, Woden, Titonka, Lake Mills, Joice, Scarville, Thompson, Northwood, Kensett, Emmons and Britt territories.

Four large trucks are operated, bringing in the dead animals and delivering tankage to farm customers.

The business is owned by Carl Hampe. Employees are Donald Hampe, James Larson, Jr., Keith Stevenson, Alvin Weborg as truck drivers. In the plant are Chris Bashans and A. W. Warner.

Mr. Hampe started in a small way in 1924 and has grown steadily. The new, modern plant is the third in which he has operated. During the years he has erected a modern home, with suitable outbuildings. These are situated across the Milwaukee tracks north of Evergreen Cemetery.

THE GEOMETRY OF LIFE

(Dedicated to the graduating class of 1939)

Onward young men and women,
Onward to character, go;
Using the square and compass
To help your life to glow.

View with a proper angle
The problems which before you lie;
And don't go off on a tangent
When duty holds you by.

The cone will direct you upward,
Parallel lines will keep you straight;
Make use of the equilateral triangle
Till you have entered the pearly gate.

Use the circle to enclose your friendships and the radius to go half way;
Use the cube to hold you solid
Regardless what others may say.

The plane of life we travel
With opportunity at every bend;
May the polygon we're shaping
Become a circle in the end.

Yes, use all the geometrical figures
You have at your command;
And say, "In the name of Jesus
I'll strive for that better land."

CONTRACT OF GARNER SUPERINTENDENT IS CANCELLED BY BOARD

GARNER—The Garner board of education Monday night resolved to cancel and terminate as af April 7, 1939, a three-year contract granted May 15, 1938, to Supt. R. C. Wood.

Reason for the cancellation was given as follows: "on account of the adjudication of insanity made against him on April 7, 1939" Mr. Wood, who was paroled to his wife and to his father, Walter Wood, two weeks after he entered the Cherokee hospital, was present at the hearing, as were the two to whom Mr. Wood is paroled and also G. W. Shepherd of Ottumwa, father of Mrs. Wood.

The board stated it passed the resolution because it was "deemed advisable by the board after a full and complete hearing and after full and careful consideration."

Community Picnic Will Mark The Close Of School Activities

SCHOOL PICNIC, FRIDAY, TO END SCHOOL YEAR

Ball Game With Meservey Will Climax Day's Events

Friday is picnic day for the school and community. Everyone is invited, and nearly everyone is expected to be there. Members of the senior class have solicited every home in town, and all the other school families have been contacted through students. BUT EVERYONE IS INVITED whether you have been solicited or not. Each family is to bring enough sandwiches for their own use and two other dishes. Of course, everyone should bring their own dishes and silverware, too.

The picnic will be held rain or shine. If it rains, it will be held in the schoolhouse. If it shines, it will be in the park.

A baseball game with Meservey furnishing the opposition for the local high school team, will climax the day if the diamond can be put into condition. Announcement will be made at the picnic as to whether or not the game will be played.

Klemme Girl Initiated Into National Sorority At Ames

Miss Ethel Overholt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Overholt, has been initiated into Kappa Delta sorority, a national social sorority at Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa. Miss Overholt is a sophomore there and is also women's editor of The Daily Iowa Student, college paper.

JESSIE M. PARKER TO TALK JUNE 8

State Official Will Address Hancock 8th Grade Commencement

GARNER—Miss Jessie Parker, state superintendent of public instruction, has accepted an invitation to present the graduation address at annual eighth grade graduation ceremonies for rural school pupils of Hancock county.

The ceremonies will be held in the Garner high school auditorium Thursday morning, June 8, according to an announcement made this week by County Superintendent J. R. Baggs.

Prof. C. A. Fullerton of Iowa State Teachers college will also be present at the ceremonies to direct the Hancock county rural school chorus, which will make its annual appearance at the event. Size of the class has not yet been determined, Mr. Baggs said.

Card Of Thanks

We wish herewith to thank most sincerely the many relatives and friends for their kind sympathy, and the assistance rendered us, upon the death of Father; also for the very beautiful flowers. We appreciate greatly the favorite old hymns rendered by the quartet, for the service of the bearers, and all who in any way participated; also for the comforting words of our pastor, the Rev. Grosshuesch.

and family. 1tp.

W. R. Hamilton, Mason City, Will Give Address Thursday Evening

BACCALAUREATE SERVICES WERE HELD AT M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY EVE.

The 1939 Baccalaureate service and sermon was given Sunday evening in the Methodist Church, with Rev Wm Zabilka delivering the sermon.

The service opened with processional of the Seniors and faculty, led by Marian Waterman and Elsie Thiemann. Rev. Grosshuesch read the scripture lesson and offered the prayer. Then, a small girls' vocal group sang. After the music Rev. Zabilka delivered the sermon. At the close of the sermon, Irene Becker played a marimba solo, "The Rosary." The recessional brought another Baccalaureate service to a close.—M. Waterman.

JUNIOR-SENIOR BANQUET HELD FRIDAY EVENING WAS GREAT SUCCESS

The very colorful Junior-Senior banquet went over with a "bang." Everyone had a good time, and the people that gave the speeches should be complimented on them.

The banquet in general was carried out in the "Snow White" theme. In one corner of the gym was the house of the dwarfs, and their seven beds were placed in it. In another part was the witches den and her kettle with the poison apple hanging over it. The ceiling of the gym was covered with blue sky paper with tiny stars in it. Trees were also put around the edge of the gym to represent the forest. In the west end of the gym was placed a throne, and from the stage hung the Seniors' motto. The tables and flowers also added to the decorations.

Each Senior received a red rose as he or she entered the room.

The very fine dinner served by the Mothers of the Junior class was followed by a program of speeches and music.

A girls' trio, consisting of Margie Blumer, Marian Waterman, and Elsie Thiemann, sang; Elsie Ward sang a solo accompanied by a whistler from the gym balcony, who turned out to be Ellen Kilgore. Short talks were given by Mr. Galbreth ,Mr. Jost, Ruben Grosshuesch, Lester Neuberger, LaRayne Stille, Raymond Swalve, Evelyn Arnold, Dorance Grange and Harold Wicks (Margie Blumer speaking for him, as Dopey). Marie Schmidt was toastmistress.

The program closed with a colorful duet, "Some Day My Prince Will Come," by Elsie Thiemann and Howard Schoenwetter, who sang from the queen's throne. The queen's processional was led by the eight freshman girls who serv- the banquet.—Marian Waterman.

MARGIE BLUMER IS NAMED "MISS KLEMME"

Will Represent Klemme As Queen Candidate At North Iowa Music Festival

Margie Blumer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blumer, and a Junior in the local high school, was elected by the student body as Miss Klemme. She will represent us at the Music Festival to be held in Mason City some time in June. The festival will probably be carried on about the same as last year. Every school that has a band entered in the festival may also have a candidate entered. The girls will be entertained to a luncheon at noon, and will ride in front of their band in the parade. The queen will be crowned in the evening.—Marian Waterman.

EIGHTEEN TO GRADUATE FROM K. H. S. AT COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY

Graduation Will Leave Vacancies In Many Activities

Eighteen seniors will receive diplomas at the graduation exercises for the Klemme High School class of 1939 Thursday evening, May 18. W. R. Hamilton, president of the Hamilton School of Commerce in Mason City, will give the commencement address. His subject will be "Youth's Opportunity." Mr. Hamilton is one of the most popular speakers in north Iowa, and it was necessary to put in an early bid to secure his services for this occasion.

Graduation of this year's class leaves several vacancies in the student activities of the school. Four regulars of the basketball team, Captain Grosshuesch, Kluckhohn, Katter, and Wicks, will leave openings hard to fill. Gibbs and L. Stille have been valuable reserve men. The four basketball regulars have also been mainstays of the baseball team. V. Stille has been a member of the squad.

The Shamrock Times, student section of this paper, loses its editor and assistant editor through the graduation of LaRayne Stille and Doris Johnson. Eugene Kluckhohn, Harold Wicks and Mildred Patterson have also been on the staff.

Evelyn Arnold is the only regular band member to be graduated. She has also been active in vocal work, as have Doris Johnson and Mildred Patterson.

Cecil Katter, who transferred from Hayfield High School last year, brought some good grades with him and collected some even better ones here to place himself in first position for scholarship honors. He will deliver the valedictory address Thursday evening. Doris Johnson was a close second in the scholarship race and will give the salutatory speech.

The last class to graduate from the old school building is one of the largest in the history of the school, only two other classes having had more students.

Fans Rout Tunnel Gas

WASHINGTON, — Three nine-foot fans remove 300,000 cubic feet of air a minute from the Wavona tunnel in Yosemite National Park to prevent the accumulation of carbon monoxide, a poison gas from automobile exhausts. The air is drawn through three shafts, the longest 500 feet from the mountain top.

Birthday Party For Margaret Medaus Saturday

Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Medaus, enjoyed a birthday party Saturday in honor of her fourth birthday. A number of her little friends were present to enjoy games and a lunch with her.

DEFENSE
Chin Up and Out

Best indication of U. S. reaction to Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech has been Washington's rush to strengthen both military and economic defense, theoretically against any aggressor but obviously against the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo entente. Sample moves:

Economic. Nevada's Sen. Key Pittman boldly offered a bill permitting the President to block American shipments to Japan or any other violator of the nine-power treaty. Plainly designed to rush a decision on U. S. neutrality policy, the bill brought a quick answer that Japan would be "forced" to strengthen its bonds with Germany and Italy if congress passed the bill.

Army. Secretary of War Harry Woodring offered a bill to hasten retirement of over-age and unfit officers, because "we are the only power which has not recognized the need for younger men in command." Next fall, it was announced, aging Gen. Malin Craig will be succeeded as chief of staff by 58-year-old Brig. Gen. George Catlett Marshall. Meanwhile a door closed behind the vast arms expansion program as orders were issued to keep secret the number of war planes ordered and delivered, and to discharge all aliens working in private plants which fill munitions orders.

WAR'S WOODRING

Navy. Engineering, ordnance and construction - repair departments may be merged in one of several navy department streamlining moves. Other naval developments: (1) Maritime Commission Chairman Emory S Land asked more power to requisition or purchase ships for national defense; (2) about $9,000,000 was asked to recondition five over-age battleships; (3) agitation began for a $5,000,000 naval air research station at March field, Calif.

Transportation. President Roosevelt recommended 26,700 miles of new national highways to care for growing peacetime traffic and meet defense requirements. The plan's essence: Five east-west and seven north-south arterials would be built, free from the tolls proposed under an earlier super-highway plan.

EUROPE
Boomerang

Viewed in retrospect, the biggest results of Adolf Hitler's infamous Reichstag speech took place before that speech was ever made. In that frantic week of anticipation when war seemed more imminent than any time in 20 years, jittery nations found courage to choose sides, commit themselves and forget traditional animosities. Sample: Democratic Britain and Communistic Russia discovered both their geese might be cooked unless they got together.

If Der Fuehrer's conciliatory refusal of President Roosevelt's peace plea broke the European tension, its stern reassertion of German determination did not allow lesser nations to forget that tension. Russia, Britain and France hastened their triple entente as the foundation for a continent-wide network of lesser pacts. The Soviet wooed Poland, Rumania and Turkey. Britain also wooed Turkey, hoping to cement Bulgaria, Rumania and Greece in a Balkan entente. In the Baltics, Poland reasserted its determination to stave off German demands on Danzig and pressed mutual defense negotiations with Finland, Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Members of the new triple entente would agree to protect Europe's four neutral states, Belgium, Switzerland, Holland and Denmark.

The biggest certainty in European diplomacy appears to be French-British military aid against Germany if the Reich presses its demands against Poland. The second biggest certainty is that Russia will also aid Poland, the latter nation being another that was jarred by Hitler's speech into such fright that animosity toward the Soviet is forgotten. Thus the Reichstag speech has served as a boomerang, hastening the "encirclement" which Herr Hitler fears and hates. History may therefore mark April 28 as the day Germany carried a good thing too far, and the day anti-Nazi Europe began barking back.

RELIEF
Election Coming Up

For three months an economy-minded congress has sought means of returning relief to the states, thereby destroying WPA, slashing federal appropriations and making the U. S. only a money allocator and general overseer. Until late April President Roosevelt had commented on the new program no more than to endorse a ban on politics-in-relief. Then, however, he asked congress for a $1,723,000,000 appropriation to meet relief needs during the 1939-40 fiscal year, of which $1,477,000,000 would go for WPA. Tacitly, therefore, he spanked reform measures proposed by South Carolina's Sen. James J. Byrnes and Virginia's Rep. Clifton Woodrum, making it plain that he wants WPA kept intact and moreover is opposed to Republican plans for decentralizing relief.

RELIEF SINCE 1935

High points in the message: (1) continued high volume unemployment is due largely to a 500,000 annual influx of new workers; (2) relief needs will remain high until the U. S., like the rest of the world, has undergone "a process of readjustment, particularly in connection with production and distribution of goods;" (3) retainance of present formula on federal-state division of WPA costs (20-25 per cent by the states) is essential; (4) the new government reorganization plan will result in WPA economizing, whereas return of relief to the states would result in "inefficiency and confusion through lack of co-ordination and uniformity."

Though $1,477,000,000 for 1939-40 WPA relief is far from a high-water mark (see chart), congressional historials recall that for the past three years deficiency appropriations have been needed to fill WPA's empty coffers before year's end. Carefully making no accusations, they nevertheless reflect that next year is election year, when smart politicians will know better than to slash relief rolls for economy's sake.

PEOPLE
In the Army Now

In 1915 handsome, 18-year-old Anthony Eden joined the British army, became its youngest captain and won the military cross for gallantry. Today, at 41, he is regarded as Britain's coming man of politics, a likely successor to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain. Deserting parliament for the moment, he has joined the London Rangers regiment for a "freshener" course, thus stimulating British military interest. Assigned to the rank of major, which he won in the war, Mr. Eden refused command of a battalion.

AVIATION: ### Success Story

Eighteen years ago a drug-store clerk named Jack Frye began spending part of his $25-a-week salary learning to fly. Handy at the throttle, he soon became a transport pilot and naval reserve officer. But Jack Frye yearned to try the business end of aviation. In 1930 he and Paul Richter, whom he had taught to fly, got their fingers in big-time aviation by merging Aero Corporation of California with fast-growing Transcontinental and Western airlines. By 1934 Jack Frye had become TWA's president, and by this spring his firm was flying 33 twin-motored ships over 6,236 route miles between New York and Los Angeles. Aided by Paul Richter and several unidentified associates, the one-time drug-store clerk bought an estimated 45,000 shares of TWA stock from New York's Lehman Brothers and Chicago Financier John D. Hertz, finding himself major owner of one of the nation's major airlines. Only parallel is the case of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World war ace who last year bought Eastern airlines.

PHILIPPINES:
Problem Child

Less than a decade has passed since the U. S. fought Philippine independence demands, but tables have a way of turning. Given congressional assurance of early freedom, Philippine President Manuel Quezon hardly had time to exult before Japan turned imperialistic, swaggered into China and began grabbing off every piece of unprotected real estate within Asiatic waters. Since Japs already hold a strong commercial position in Manila, moreover since even a double-strength U. S. Pacific fleet might not be able to hold the islands against sudden attack, many Americans believe their nation should leave the Philippines before getting involved in war. Added impetus is given by U. S. agriculture's resentment over concessions to Filipino sugar.

Sensing that the U. S. was anxious to pull stakes, Manuel Quezon last year appealed to President Roosevelt and won an administration-sponsored proposal calling for political independence in 1946, the 25 per cent tariff being increased by 5 per cent a year until wholly effective in 1961. Since President Quezon will not be able to attend hearings this year, the bill is being tabled until next session. When he does arrive, Mr. Quezon will be offered an even stronger deal which members of the Senate committee on territories and insular possessions have already accepted unanimously, albeit secretly. The deal: If Filipinos will cut political ties with the U. S. in 1942, current 25 per cent tariff rates will continue until 1946 as under the administration bill. Then rates will jump 10 per cent annually until the U. S. washes its hands of the whole affair in 1953.

Still officially unannounced, the substitute bill (suggested by Maryland's Sen. Millard E. Tydings) has been hushed for fear Japan may sail into Manila immediately, confident the U. S. does not care to defend the harbor Admiral Dewey stormed so heroically in 1898.

BOLIVIA:
Democratic Dictator

Forbears of Bolivia's 35-year-old President German Busch came from the country which supplied his baptismal name, but for two generations Busches have been loyal Bolivians. In 1935 German Busch emerged from the Gran Chaco war with Paraguay to find his country's government in horrible shape. Friendly to labor and business, boasting strong Catholic support,

BOLIVIA AND BUSCH
His plan may work.

Youngster Busch became provisional president in July, 1937, when Col. David Toro's "socialistic" state was toppled. Last May he was constitutionally re-elected, beginning a task from which lesser men might have turned away.

Plagued by Naziism and Fascism, bankrupt and facing possible revolution if Bolivia's three Chaco war parties (Liberal, Republican, Socialist Republican) won the May legislative election, President Busch surprised the world by announcing a new type political animal, dictatorship to prepare for "a real democracy."

Observers give German Busch a good chance of succeeding. Having canceled the election, dissolved his congress and abolished constitutional guarantees on the plausible assumption that restive Bolivia does not deserve democracy at this moment, Colonel Busch is the world's first dictator to (1) invite "patriotic" criticism of his regime; (2) reject his cabinet's resignation; (3) view Fascism and Naziism "with pain," and (4) promise an election five to eight months hence to let Bolivia decide its own destiny

HEADLINERS
MARQUESS OF LOTHIAN

Born 57 years ago as plain Philip Henry Kerr, Lord Lothian takes Britain's No. 1 diplomatic job next summer when he becomes ambassador to the U. S. A charter member of Lady Astor's allegedly pro-Nazi "Cliveden set," he began advocating appeasement in 1934 by urging "elementary justice" for Hitler via negotiation. As wartime secretary to ex-Premier David Lloyd George, the marquess became a British "Colonel House" and has remained in close advisory positions under subsequent McDonald and Chamberlain regimes. He advocated "treaty politics" as against "power politics." Americans will find him an advocate of Britain's resuming token war debt payments. Bachelor, twice an earl, once a viscount and four times a baron, he gained his titles in 1930 by inheritance from a distant cousin.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—In the village of Woodbury, Ky., the son of a Czecho-Slovakian immigrant was commended by his teachers for his excellent drawings of ships at sea. He had never seen any big ships, but liked them and had a good idea of what they looked like. Today, tooling the United States fleet of around 300 ships down into the Pacific, Admiral Claude Charles Bloch has converted his youthful artistic urge into a vast and precise knowledge of ships and their behavior—particularly fighting ships.

Churned Butter And Latin; Now Churns Oceans

Erect, ruddy and vigorous, quietly emphatic, the 60-year-old commander-in-chief of the fleet is a rarely spotlighted personage of tremendous responsibilities—technical, naval and administrative—as he quietly moves from Norfolk, not only his vast array of battle wagons, but 60,000 officers and men, nearly 1,000 planes and all the gear necessary for maintenance, operation, communications and fighting requirements.

On July 3, 1898, not long out of Annapolis, he was an ensign on the Iowa when Cervera's squadron of Spanish warships made its historic dash from Santiago harbor and was destroyed by Admiral Sampson's blocking forces. He was cited for "meritorious service" in rescuing Spaniards from burning ships of Admiral Cervera's squadron. In the World war, he commanded the transport Plattsburg and won the navy cross for distinguished service. During his 42 years' service on land and sea, he has held many high posts in the navy.

As a boy, the churning was his household chore. His brothers, now Louisville physicians, recall that he used to study his Latin book while churning and that he paced the "amo, amas, amat" to the beat of the plunger. They teased him about that and always found him ready for a fight if the provocation was sufficient. At any rate, studious, reticent and artistic, he followed his boyhood dream over far seas.

THE title of this particular article may well be the effective slogan of the modern world and the end of war if the words of Dr. Robert A. Millikan are to be taken at their face value. Addressing a dinner of the Merchants association in New York recently, the famous physicist said:

Not Too Proud, But Too Scared To Go to War

"It was the fear of the bombing of London and Paris that prevented the beginning of another World war last September. The peoples of all countries, including the dictatorships, are coming more and more to the realization that such another war can only bring death and destruction to everybody — the end of civilization, not the world domination which the demagogic leader promises."

All Greek mathematicians to the contrary, Dr. Millikan believes that Achilles will overtake the turtle. That is, fleet-footed science has just about caught up with human stupidity, in spite of the latter's long head-start, and, with its command of new energies will romp on by into the "world of tomorrow," where there will be no war or rumors of war.

Dr. Millikan is possibly the world's most persistent champion of the social salvation inherent in scientific advance, and believes that his runner will break the tape ahead of "international wickedness, stupidity and folly." He believes that machines make jobs, rather than destroy them, and that the only way out is straight ahead.

Every once in a while he parachutes down from the stratosphere companionship of Einstein, Planck, Heisenberg et al, to bring a message to the market place—always hopeful, and usually a roundhouse swing at the demagogues and meddlers who cramp the scientists' style.

He leaves wide open a zone of Divine intervention if anything goes wrong in the laboratories.

A Nobel prize winner, chairman of the executive council of the California Institute of Technology, Dr. Millikan is an active liaison between the lay and scientific worlds, assuring both that everything will come out all right. Garnering many medals and prizes, enjoying world fame, he would have a lot to lose in a world crack-up. But his optimism is doubtless no mere "wishful thinking."

★ Good Screamer Works

By Virginia Vale

THERE'S no telling where the current wave of matrimony that is sweeping Hollywood will stop. Practically all of the movie colony's famous romances either have landed their participants at the altar or will do so soon.

Of course, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. rather startled the general public with his selection of a bride; the charming Mrs. Mary Hartford was what would be called, in racing circles, a dark horse.

When Kate Smith celebrated her ninth anniversary as a radio star she sang the four songs that she presented on her initial broadcast: "I Surrender, Dear," "By the River St. Marie," "Dream a Little Dream of Me," and "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone." When making up her program for her first broadcast she put in that last number because she felt none too sure that she'd be a success on the air.

KATE SMITH

Too bad a fortune teller couldn't have told her that she would lead the popularity polls for years as the possessor of the best voice in her field.

The next time that you hear your favorite screen heroine let out a piercing scream, the chances are that it will be Sarah Schwartz who actually does the screaming.

She is Hollywood's prize screamer, capable of curdling any audience's blood when she really puts her mind on it.

The other day Director James Whale was making a scene in "The Man in the Iron Mask" in which Louis Hayward, as King Louis XIV, was about to be attacked by assassins as he rode along in his coach. A good screamer was needed, so Sarah Schwartz was sent for, joined the milling throngs, and screamed her head off when Director Whale gave the signal. She's been doing that sort of thing for years, and works pretty regularly—earns more, in fact, than many a would-be singer who tries to make musical sounds.

It looks as if Bette Davis would be receiving another "Oscar" when the Motion Picture Academy Awards are handed out for this year. "Dark Victory" is the picture in which she turned in such a grand performance that even the people who never liked her work before are now dancing in the streets and telling all their friends about it.

Felix Knight, the young tenor who has climbed so far and so fast as a radio star, is so enthusiastic about his vocal teacher that he has established two scholarships, enabling two young singers to work for a year with Mebane Beasely.

"He took me," says Knight, "with almost no voice to speak of and shortly increased my range more than an octave." So now, each year, two more young singers will have the opportunities that Knight had.

If you listen to Jack Benny's Sunday night programs you're acquainted with "Rochester," his Negro servant. You can see him in "Gone With the Wind," as "Uncle Peter"; you probably saw him in "Jezebel" and "In Old Kentucky." His name is Eddie Anderson.

You've seen Bill Robinson, the great tap dancer, in pictures with Shirley Temple, of course. But did you know that they are good friends, and that he telephones her several times a week, no matter where he may be. He called her from New York recently, just before he went on the air—he talked to her mother, and asked if Shirley might be allowed to stay up late enough to hear his performance. Let's hope that she did; it was a good one.

ODDS AND ENDS—Gabriel Heatter, host of "We, the People," presented Kate Smith with a gift in honor of her radio anniversary—a charm bracelet with miniature gold microphones dangling from it . . . Radio fans have been complimenting Martha Raye on the improvement in her vocal arrangements, not knowing that it's her new husband who does them . . . They're making a terrific effort to make the public hail Bobby Breen as "Bob" . . . "Information Please" will reach the screen, as a series of RKO Pathe News reels.

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND THE HOME

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 35:5-7; Ephesians 5:15-21; 6:1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT—Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee. Leviticus 10:9.

A home is more than a house, yet people live as though it were not true. They build attractive houses, fill them with comfortable furnishings, and think they have a home. But no matter how they may live, if God is forgotten, pleasure becomes the chief object in life, and money is desired because it buys pleasure. Intoxicants are freely used both outside and inside the home, apparently with no thought of their destructive influence.

Alcohol burned in a stove produces heat, in an engine it produces power, in a man it produces drunkenness and disease, and in the home it produces sorrow, suffering, and ultimately destruction. Why should decent and intelligent people in America supinely submit to the devastation of this juggernaut, the liquor traffic? What are you doing about it?

The lesson for today presents three factors which make for happiness in the home.

I. Loyalty to Family Standards (Jer. 35:5-10).

When the traditional standards of a family are good and right in the sight of God, they afford a splendid rallying point for the younger generation. The Rechabites were obedient to the instructions of their forefathers. The prophet had subjected them to a test (not a temptation, for he did not expect them to fall) in the presence of the princes and in the great city of Jerusalem. They were surrounded by the luxury and customed luxury and temptations of the city, and now the prophet would test them further by saying, "Drink ye wine." But they were not afraid to be thought old-fashioned or out of date, for they knew that the customs of their fathers were good (see Jer. 6:16), and they stood by them.

To depend on that which is old and noble in the past of our nation or family, is a sign neither of narrowness nor ignorance, but rather of wisdom and strength. What are the family standards will your children mine look back to? What of the little baby who lay in his buggy while the young mother helped her husband pick out the bottle of medicine in the store window which he went in and bought? When such things my heart burns within me against this wicked business which destroys all of the finer men and in their homes.

II. Accuracy in Daily Living (Eph. 5:15-21).

"The Greek word rendered 'circumspectly' (v. 15) may be rendered closely and simply rendered 'accurately.' The thought given is that of painstaking attention to details in order a sense of their importance and remembrance not only in the home but in particular of the duties of the Christian's walk" (Moule).

Every phrase in this section of the lesson is overflowing with meaning, but we cannot here refer to them at all. Note the temperance admonition. The man who walks according to it will be "wise" (v. 15) and will be "be filled with the Spirit" (v. 18). The inaccurate walker is a fool (v. 15), and one of his follies is to be in being "drunk with wine" (v. 18). But there is far more in the passage. Spirit-filled people understand the will of God and therefore redeem the time. They cultivate the delightful spiritual exercise of the religion known as hymn singing. Have you tried that lately? Gather the family or friends around the organ or piano. Turn off the radio for a few minutes. Open the old hymn book and sing. Don't overlook thankfulness in Eph. 5:20, and then try that golden rule.

III. Unity in the Home (Eph. 6:1-4).

A united family is obviously impossible where one member of it gives his time and money and life to booze. You know and I know that it just does not work. Think of the havoc thus wrought in the lives of the parents, particularly in the lives and characters of the children.

Let Christ reign in the home and there will be unity. Children will realize that it is right to obey godly parents. They will honor and cherish father and mother, and God will reward them for it (vv. 2, 3; also Exod. 20:12). But what if the fathers will be wise enough not to provoke their children to wrath. Much of the trouble in our homes is caused by disobedient children, but sometimes I think even more of it is caused by unwise parents. Yes, children need nurture and admonition, but that can be done in kindness and with constructive firmness if we seek the Lord's help. Father, mother, let me plead with you. Do you permit no interest in business, social life, or even church work to come between you and your fellowship with your children. That is the biggest job and your greatest opportunity.

The Royal Bedchamber, occupied by the Duke of Windsor when, as Prince of Wales, he was a guest at the Greenbrier hotel in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where his grandfather, Edward VII, while he was Prince of Wales, also visited in 1860.

Then the prince entered a boat on the Canadian side of the river, was rowed across, mounted the wooden steps of the cliff and stepped on the soil of the United States as "Baron Renfrew," the incognito which was preserved while he was a guest of this country. New York city gave the "baron" a tumultuous reception with a torchlight procession through the principal streets of the city, a visit to Barnum's museum and a great ball at which the crowd was so great that the floor of the ballroom collapsed. A crew of carpenters was called in to repair the damage and in their hurry entombed a fellow worker under the new flooring. He was freed only after his frantic tapping beneath the floor revealed his plight and threatened to break up the party.

The prince next went to Boston where there was another round of gay parties in his honor. There he was introduced to Ralph Farnham, 105 years old, a soldier who had fought at Bunker Hill. He also visited Harvard a few days later and met Longfellow, Holmes and other American literary notables. Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago were visited in turn with stops at various places en route.

The prince finally got to Washington and went to the White House to call upon his friend, President James Buchanan, a man of marked democratic traits which were most attractive to the royal visitor. As a relief from the interminable handshaking which was his fate in the national capital, the prince frequently stole away from receptions to play ten-pins in a private bowling alley with Buchanan's charming niece and White House hostess, Harriet Lane.

Visits Washington's Tomb.

While the prince was in Washington Buchanan accompanied him down the Potomac to Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington. Because of the prince's fondness for ships, the trip was made in a boat and en route the royal visitor took the tiller ropes and skillfully steered the boat to its landing place. At Mount Vernon the prince stood bareheaded before the tomb of George Washington, and later planted a chestnut tree beside it in tribute to the "greatest rebel of all time."

To rest up after the round of social events which had been given in his honor everywhere, "Baron Renfrew," at the suggestion of Buchanan, went to the favorite summer resort of Washington society — White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. (then Virginia). But, as it turned out, he didn't do much resting. For the entire population of the resort turned out to greet him and plans were immediately made to hold a grand ball at which the flower of Southern society would be presented to the royal visitor. The gay young prince did nothing to discourage the party and while arrangements were being hurriedly made, he amused himself by riding about the countryside.

He attended the county fair which was then an important event in Virginia. A great admirer of horseflesh and beautiful ladies, it is little wonder that a beautiful woman bareback rider at the fair caught his attention. His hurried courtship of this talented performer is one of White Sulphur's many gay traditions, and legend has it that the bareback rider rose to the pinnacle of her profession on the strength of her harmless but enthusiastic flirtation with His Royal Highness.

As for the ball, the records are meager but it was apparently the most brilliant in the early history of this famous resort. Fifty-nine years later, another Albert Edward visited it. This Prince of Wales later reigned briefly as Edward VIII and then abdicated his throne for the love of a beautiful American and became the duke of Windsor of today.

In 1919 this second Prince of Wales crossed the Atlantic and after a triumphal tour of

The duke of Windsor, photographed at the Spring House in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., which he visited in 1919, when he was Prince of Wales.

Canada, went to Washington to renew his friendship with Woodrow Wilson. The President was very ill at the time and confined to the bed in the White House which had been used by Edward VII when he visited President Buchanan there. However, he was received in the Presidential bedchamber and an interesting account of that visit is recorded in Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's book, "My Memoir," published recently by the Bobbs-Merrill company. Like his grandfather, the Prince of Wales was taken to Mount Vernon to visit the tomb of Washington but, unlike his grandfather, who went by boat, he motored there, accompanied by Vice President Thomas R. Marshall and Secretary of State Robert E. Lansing.

Princely Resemblances.

Just as there is an amazing similarity between the two princes of Wales (as a glance at the pictures accompanying this article will show) and a similarity in their temperaments and tastes, there is also an interesting similarity in their visits to this country. Both were accorded tumultuous welcomes wherever they went and both won the hearts of Americans with their simple, democratic manners. And like his grandfather, the later Prince of Wales also escaped from the round of gayety to rest at the White Sulphur Springs resort.

In the case of the younger man, however, there was no official incognito during his visit there. Officials of the Greenbrier hotel, where he spent a three-day weekend, recall that he merely expressed the wish to be left alone, to be permitted to come and go as he chose and to have nothing done in the way of official celebration. The prince spent his time in sport—golfing, swimming, rid ing and hiking.

KING GEORGE VI

During the visit of Edward VII to Boston, he made such a favorable impression upon the people of that city (the very city which had once been the "hotbed of treason" to his great-grandfather, George III!) that the duke of Newcastle, a member of his retinue, wrote back to England, "If the prince remains here much longer, there is the danger of his being nominated to the presidency and elected by unanimous consent."

Although that is something of an exaggeration, of course, the favorable impression which the royal visitor had made upon the American people was confirmed by a letter which President Buchanan wrote to Queen Victoria. In reply, the queen, according to Laura C. Holloway in her "The Ladies of the White House," acknowledged "her sense of the cordiality of his reception by the President in a letter in which the dignity of an official communication is altogether lost in the personal language of a grateful mother thanking a friend for kindness done her first-born child —it is the Queen's English employed to express the sentiments of the woman." She wrote:

"Windsor Castle
"Nov. 19th, 1860

"My Good Friend:

"Your letter of the 6th. ult. has afforded me the greatest pleasure, containing, as it does, such kind expressions with regard to my son, and assuring me that the character and object of his visit to you and to the United States have been fully appreciated, and that his demeanor and the feelings evinced by him, have secured to him your esteem and the general goodwill of your countrymen.

"I purposely delayed the answer to your letter until I should be able to couple with it the announcement of the Prince of Wales' safe return to his home. Contrary winds and stress of weather have much retarded his arrival, but we have been fully compensated for the anxiety which this long delay has naturally caused us, by finding him in such excellent health and spirits, and so delighted with all he has seen and experienced in his travels.

"He cannot sufficiently praise the great cordiality with which he has been everywhere greeted in your country, and the friendly manner in which you have received him; and whilst, as a mother, I am grateful for the kindness shown him, I feel impelled to express, at the same time, how deeply I have been touched by the many demonstrations of affection personally toward myself which his presence has called forth.

"I fully reciprocate toward your nation the feelings thus made apparent and look upon them as forming an important link to connect two nations of kindred origin and character, whose mutual esteem and friendship must always have so material an influence upon their respective development and prosperity.

"The interesting and touching scene at the grave of General Washington to which you allude, may be fitly taken as the type of our present feeling, and, I trust, of our future relations.

"The Prince Consort, who heartily joins in the expressions contained in this letter, wishes to be kindly remembered to you, as we both wish to be to Miss Lane.

'Old Put'

MOST Americans think of Israel Putnam as the New England hero of two thrilling escapes. One was during the French and Indian war when a providential rainstorm put out the fire which the savages had kindled to torture him. The other was during the Revolution when he avoided capture by the British by riding his horse at breakneck speed down a long flight of stone steps. But these were only a few of "Old Put's" adventures.

During his busy life he saw action on many fronts—from Montreal in the north to Havana in the south and from Boston in the east to Detroit in the west. They began in 1755 when he served under Sir William Johnson against the French; they continued when he enrolled in Rogers' Rangers in 1758, was captured by the Indians, sent to Canada as a prisoner and freed by exchange the next year.

Then he accompanied a British naval expedition against France's allies, the Spanish, in Cuba, where he was in the thick of the fight when the English stormed Morro Castle.

He had hardly returned home when Pontiac's war broke out in 1763 and he accompanied Colonel Bradstreet on the expedition to raise the Indian siege of Detroit. In 1772 he was a member of the Company of Military Adventurers who visited the Lower Mississippi and West Florida to look over lands promised the Colonials who had served in the French and Indian war. Nothing came of this so Putnam returned home in time to become one of the heroes of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Navajo Bill

THE Navajoes were holding a fire dance. White men were not welcome at this important ceremonial so there were hostile mutterings among the young braves when they saw a "pale-face" looking on. Suddenly a young buck, his face distorted with a frenzy of hate, dashed out of the circle of dancers and, brandishing a long knife, bounded toward the white man.

But before he had time to strike, a lariat shot out from a group of Indians near by, settled over the young brave's shoulders and jerked him to the ground where he was soon trussed up so tight that he could not move. The lariat had been thrown by the great chief, Manuelito, and he had thus saved the life of his good friend, Dr. W. N. Wallace, otherwise known as "Navajo Bill."

Wallace served in an Indiana regiment in the Civil war, then went west. He landed in Portland, Ore., where he became a doctor and practiced his profession until tuberculosis forced him to go to Arizona. There he became acquainted with the Navajoes.

One day a little Indian girl fell into a campfire and was badly burned. The skill of the "white medicine man" saved her from becoming a cripple and from that time on his position among the Navajoes was secure. They adopted him into the tribe, gave him a Navajo name and he became a close friend of the great Manuelito. It was that friendship which saved his life at the fire dance.

The Mad Poet

TWO months before McDonald Clarke died he wrote this autobiography: "Begotten among the orange groves, on the wild mountains of Jamaica, West Indies. Born in Bath on the Kennebec River, State of Maine, 18th. June, 1798. 1st. Love, Mary H. of New London; last Love, Mary G. of New York; intermediate sweethearts without number. No great compliment to the greatest Poet in America—should like the change tho'; had to pawn my Diamond Ring (the gift of a lady) and go tick at Delmonico's for Dinner. So much for the greatest Poet of America."

If that sounds a bit "goofy" to you, it's no more so than much of the poetry he wrote. That's why he was called "The Mad Poet." At the beginning of the Nineteenth century he was "constantly seen on Broadway, his blue coat and military bearing, enhanced by his marked profile, making him a conspicuous and striking figure. It was his hobby to fall in line with all the belles of the city and to commemorate their beauties and worth in verse. However well-meant these effusions on the part of the poet they were annoying. His poems helped to support him, but the number of editions and present scarcity show that he must have eked out the revenue necessary to supply his humble wants, by subscriptions or the charity of publishers and friends."

From 1820 to 1841 he issued eight books of poems. Then the "Mad Poet's" adventure in living came to a tragic close on March 5, 1842 A policeman found him on the street in a destitute and apparently demented condition and took him to jail for safekeeping. The next morning he was found drowned by wa ter from an open faucet!

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

NO EXODUS

There are several good sensible reasons for a condition at Des Moines which, since it is without precedent, isn't entirely understandable to those interested only in the traditional spoils of political victory. There has been no great exodus of state employees to make room for an equally great influx of replacements. Instead there has been a careful elimination of many seemingly unecessary jobs. Where replacements have been necessary selection has been made on th ability to do the job as the first consideration. There are going to be replacements, of course; a great many of them as the months pass. But Republicans have shown no disposition to pitchfork workers in and out of office just for the empty satisfaction of making changes.

MAKING HISTORY

Another reason why the customary patronage processes cannot apply is in the gradual tightening up of loosely organized offices and departments heretofore free from budget restrictions. Doubting Democrats have been twanging the harp for attention to an "increased budget." This increased budget accusation as directed at the legislature and administration is a half-truth that boomeranged so promptly that it has been abandoned. Included among the five departments now under budget control for the first time are the highway commission, board of assessment and review and the motor vehicle department. These departments supported themselves from fees collected and their expenditures were limited only to their collections. Naturally they spent freely since their budget was not set by the legislature They are among the largest of the various state departments but their annual totals were not scrutinized by ernest legislators as closely as those institutions which did not collect funds. Their presence in the 1939-40 budget creates an illusion. Their expenditures were always large but have never before appeared on the budget. The 1937-38 budget made no mention of an expenditure of more than $5,000,000 by the highway commission yet that amount was spent. By bringing this commission under budget control more than $1,000,000 was cut off the total.

NO TAX INCREASE

No increase in the state tax levy is contemplated yet the 48th General Assembly was able to guarantee the full credit for homestead exemption. War veterans were assured full tax exemption in the computation of homestead tax credit. It was found possible to increase old age pension funds by $1,500,000 thus forestalling a possible decrease in the monthly pension check due to continued increases in the number of pension eligibles. Funds were made available for modernizing buildings at state institutions to the extent they will not be viewed as fire traps.

These many advantages were not made possible by tapping new tax sources but by plugging leaks. Legitimate cigarette dealers who pay stiff license fees are protected from the cigarette boot-legger by new legislation which should net the state $800,000—and costs the consumer nothing extra. As far as it has progressed consolidation of departments is revealing astounding opportunities for huge savings. It was truly, as some lobbyists grumbled, "a taxpayers' legislature."

OPENS SEASON WITH ONE CAST . . . ONE FINE FISH

The fishing season opend with a bang in north Iowa Monday morning when nimrods were out early in quest of the members of the finny tribe. "Stub" Lewis deserves some sort of recognition or a medal for some sort of record or other for the first day of the season. On the first cast "Stub" hooked a nice 4 pound northern pike while fishing in the Iowa River near Klemme. That was certainly a good start.

. . . and Eckard Zeidler gets the feather-bound diploma for capturing the biggest fish. Ek's northern pike weighed seven pounds . . . and that is a good fish on anybody's stringer!

THE LOW DOWN ON THE MATTRESS RACKET

We have often said that "it pays to read the advs." One of the most interesting advertisements we have run for some time appears in this issue of the Times. We refer to Wellemeyer's ad in which he tells some facts regarding re-built mattresses. Just another instance where it pays to investigate before you buy.

Mr. Wellemeyer gives some very interesting information on mattress rebuilding, just the other side of the story and which we urge our readers to give at least a few minutes of their time in reading what our home town merchant has to say about the "mattress racket." Mr. Wellemeyer gives some information not generally known by the average buyer.

KEEPING KLEMME BEAUTIFUL

Klemme is perhaps one of the "best kept" towns in this part of the state, acording to strangers who visit the town for the first time. Recently a teacher applied for a position here because she thought this was the cleanest little town of anywhere she had visited. Just another instance where it pays to keep a town looking beautiful.

If the beauty of the town will attract teachers, certainly it will attract others to our little city.

Every property owner can do his bit in keeping Klemme beautiful. A few dollars invested in trees and shrubs and planted on vacant lots by the owners, will make an otherwise eye-sore look clean and attractive and your neighbor will soon catch the spirit Try it.

MR. "EYE" DOUBTS OUR ABILITY

Last wek we suggested in this column that a Column Reader's Convention should be held at Clear Lake for Mr. Eye and The Ink Spatter. In the Globe-Gazette Tuesday, Earl Hall, who conducts the Eye Observing Column printed our article followed by this comment:

"Sounds good. But who'd furnish some fish? From what I hear about Jergie's fishing, I feel quite sure it would have to be somebody else—unless we could be satisfied with canned salmon."

That statement is a challenge to our chief hobby! That calls for a duel. We challenge Mr. Eye to a fishing battle! We'll stuff his honery hide so full of fish that he will smell like a mackerel the rest of his life. Here's the proposition We will both fish, at the end of one hour on the lake we will bring in the fish. We'll eat every fish Earl captures—fried or raw—if he'll eat every fish we capture—also fried or raw! Mr. Eye will be so busy eating fish we caught that he will be days behind writing up his column.

. . . we like fish . . but to be sure of having a meal of fish . . . we will help Earl eat OUR fish.

What say, Mr. Eye?

HELLO, FOLKS!

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Swanson, who live on a farm two miles east of Klemme, are parents of a baby girl, born to them on Monday, May 8th.

SHOW IN RECORDS WHY PROFITS VARY

Jim made money on his quarter section farm last year. His neighbor across the road, farming the same number of acres, just about broke even.

What farming practices put Jim in the high-profit class? This secret is unravelled from the farm accounts kept by members of the five Iowa farm business associations in 1938, an interpretive summary of which appeared in a recent issue of the Iowa Farm Economist.

Kept More Livestock

Jim kept more livestock than his less successful neighbor. He raised more hogs, kept more cattle and hens. He did more business and handled this larger volume with about the same amount of labor.

The number of livestock was particularly important in 1938 because feed costs were low in relation to prices of livestock products.

More Efficient Stockman

Second, he handled his livestock more efficiently. He selected the more profitable kinds of livestock under the 1938 market conditions, maintained healthy flocks and herds and used balanced rations to get economical gains.

Third Jim planned ahead to produce a quality product and have it ready for the market during the seasons when prices were highest.

Assuming that Jim was in the high profit 160-acre farm class, he was awarded $1,460 for his year's labor, while his less fortunate neighbor in the low profit class suffered a $280 loss.

The streamlining of state departments will continue on for many months and the shifts will be always toward fewer job holders and lowered administrative costs. It began immediately after the legislature completed the necessary legislation and produced such amazing results in its early stages that it has become a trend and a policy to be extended and further developed under Republican leadership. While it was about its streamlining program, the legislature applied the remedy to its own operations for the purpose of modernizing and speeding up legislative procedure.

Avery Theatre

Garner, Iowa

CHARLIE MARKS, Prop.

All Work and No Play Makes Jack a Dull Boy

This is one of the most popular theatres in this section, bringing the world's greatest stars of the screen to this community and merits the most liberal patrongage of the public It constitutes one of the most important organizations of the community which brings social entertainment and trade activity to the city.

In making a review of the progress of this section of the state there is no institution more popular or more worthy of extended mention than this well-known theatre. It is one of the truly progressive theatres of this part of the state and because of the high class productions shown, it enjoys a large patronage not only Garner but from all the surrounding territory

Offering high class feature pictures which include in their cast the world's greatest stars, it is not strange that this theatre has become so popular Mr Marks has made special efforts to secure only clean and wholesome productions and it can be readily seen why this theatre has merited success.

The Avery has good sound equipment, good ventilating and heating systems which make it warm in winter and cool in summer. The seats are comfortable and here is an ideal place to rest and forget your troubles while being entertained.

Are You The Owner?

DO YOU HAVE A CLEAR TITLE?

In the early years of settlements of all communities the question of the title to property always caused a certain amount of confusion. The Pilgrim fathers in 1620 at what is now Plymouth, found it necessary to establish some sort of claim against the Indians, who usually cleared land titles with tomahawks instead of abstracts. The Puritans gained their titles by a grant from the English Government, but were forced to maintain them by the liberal use of gunpowder. They soon found it expedient to devise some method of protecting the title to property from other colonists, so in 1627 they set up a system of recording transfers of land by requiring that deeds be written into books of the colony. Since that time, as the Nation began to become more settled, cities began to be established, with the pyramiding of land values and vast increase in the number of property transfers, the simple recording of title became inadequate, and various methods have since been introduced to supplement it.

While this community has had its experience at this feature of settlement, today confusion has been done away with through the efficient service of modern abstracters. The people of Hancock County, especially the home owners and investors realize the importance of the service of the Hancock County Abstract Company at Garner, incorporated over twenty-five years ago, with a capital stock of $25,000.00 which insures above all responsibility.

The title plant of the Hancock County Abstract Company consists of systematic entries of every instrument or proceeding on record which in any way affect real property. This includes deeds, mortgages, mechanics liens, judgments, affadavits, estates, bankruptcies and other documents and proceedings. All matters of record affecting the particular piece of property under consideration, or the owner thereof, are found in the files of their title plant. Our advice to those who contemplate the purchase of property or the loaning of money, is to secure an abstract prepared by this company and thereby assure themselves of getting a dependable and intelligent title service.

When your needs require the preparation of an abstract, be certain that your abstract, which is after all only a history of your title as disclosed by the official records, is compiled by a reliable and dependable company, and then have it examined by a competent attorney upon whose opinion you can rely.

Do you know whether or not the title to your property is marketable? Many titles prove to be clouded by the innumerable defects that are possible in this day and age. It is not good business for anyone to assume this risk when the cost of title assurance is so reasonable. The Hancock County Abstract Company will be glad to assist you in any way possible.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

At the May meeting of the unit held at the home of Miss Lydia Bock the local Auxiliary voted the amount of five dollars to be used in carrying on the work of the recently organized Army for the Control of Cancer.

This had been endorsed by the county organization of Auxiliaries in April.

Plans were made for Memorial Day and for the sale of poppies.

Poppy Day will be observed throughout the United States on Saturday, May 27, with the wearing of the memorial poppies in honor of the World War dead, Mrs. A. H. Etchen, president of the Adams-Schaefer Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, announced at the meeting. The observance will be led by the Auxiliary women who will distribute poppies on the streets during the day.

Plans for the local observance of Poppy Day are being completed by the Adams-Schaefer Auxiliary Unit under the leadership of Miss Lydia Bock, Unit Poppy chairman, aided by a large committee. Volunteer workers from the Unit will offer poppies on the streets all day and will receive contributions for the Legion and Auxiliary welfare and relief work among the disabled veterans and dependent families of veterans.

Poppies for distribution here have been ordered from U. S. Veterans' Administration facility in Des Moines where disabled veterans have been given employment through the winter and spring making the little flowers. They are expected to be worn more generally than ever before on Poppy Day this year.

WHERE THE TOUGH JOBS GO

Britt Paint & Body Shop

Phone 211 Britt

If the skilled physician could do with the human body what the skilled auto mechanic does to the wrecked machines, there would be but few deaths in traffic mishaps. It is really surprising what a firm which specializes in expert body rebuilding can do One sees a wrecked car being towed in with the body badly caved in, axels bent almost double, wheels smashed, fenders caved, body crumpled, and wonder why the owner went to the expense of the tow in.

Most of this kind of work goes to the Britt Paint and Body Shop. Here the car is taken in hand by experts on body and frame repairing. The axels are straightened and trued, the wheels are repaired if possible, or new one substituted.

The body cave-ins are hammered out, the fenders are straightened. The car is turned over to the painters who match the color so perfectly and apply the paint so skillfully that even an experienced eye could not detect the damaged part.

Like every expert who is proud of his skill, they spare no pains with their work and every job is given most painstaking care There isn't a house in the country that equals their work and prices. If you find the slightest defect in their work, send it back and the Britt Paint and Body Shop will do it over without question or quibble

'Not Worth a Rap' Came To Us Many Years Ago

We often say a thing is "not worth a rap," meaning it is worthless. Most of us imagine that the phrase refers to a rap on the knuckles or a rap on the door knocker. But actually it originally referred to something quite different, and if we wish to be pedantic we would say, "not worth an R. A. P."

This phrase came into our language in a curious way, says Pearson's Weekly. More than a hundred years ago unscrupulous traders in India discovered that worthless coins which were being manufactured in Ireland could be traded to the natives and exchanged for good Indian rupees, annas, and pice, the local currency.

The government took steps to stop the practice, but not before many firms had suffered substantial losses. As the ledgers in which all transactions were entered were headed R. A. P. (for rupees, annas, and pice) it stood to reason that these sheets were worthless.

Among traders an R. A. P. sheet was known as a "rap"—the letters being run together in somewhat similar manner to the way we speak of £ s. d. as l s d, and so when anything was worthless it was the custom to say "not worth a rap."

AROUND K. H. S. ASSEMBLY

This is the last week our Shamrock will be published. We want to thank all the members of the staff and others who helped our school paper have a successful year.

The freshmen regret that the school year has gone so fast. We hope that the remainder of our school days will be like our freshman year We have enjoyed having the present faculty members as our teachers.

The English I class has been giving reports on various topics. Some of them are: diamonds, diesel engines, termites, Typhoid Mary, The Lost Battalion, and baseball.

The general science class has finished the science book.

A girls' small vocal group was organized the past week. Those taking part in it are Elsie T., Elsie W., Marian W, Dorothy B., Jackie K., Luella T., Ellen K, Marie S and Gertrude G. This group will sing for Commencement. Jackie Kudje will play a violin solo the same evening.

Elsie Ward had another perfect speed test paper in typing Her score was 42 words a minute.

What Oh, it can't be, but I guess it is. The Juniors broke their record and went on a steak fry last Thursday at noon, between the work in the gym for the Junior-Senior banquet.

BLOW 'EM UP AND BUST 'EM
by
BARSWICK

A new discovery by Miss Greiner: In the cupboard of the Home Ec room a three month old doughnut was discovered by Miss Greiner. It was given to some boys and we think a bad case of indigestion should follow.

The Bars-Wick column has blowed up and busted, right smack in the center.

All that stands between us is a teacher in the garb of a dictator. They say we have to go to court to get reconciled, but that's funny, we said we don't. But then a teacher is a teacher. I think the explosion came about over an argument about picnic day, something about ice cream or other.

This explosion has been coming on for weeks, that is why we have had very little in our column, every time we thought of something we started to erupt and had to shut right down.

One day there was a funny joke thought up by Bars, I knew something was going to happen, but in it went, and up we went. Bars was confined to the basement and Wick to the attic.

Bars remaining because his head was larger than the hole in the cement. Wick had a pair of wings and a sky hook, which he enjoyed very much. Then there was the teacher, of course not found yet.

At the Junior-Senior banquet, Harold represented Dopey. For once, he couldn't tell us where to get off, but Margie did a good job of helping him along. He must have had a touch of "Dopey fever" when he wrote this column. No one seems to get too much sense from it. But then, is called Nonsense.

Human Body Is the Most Complicated of Machines

Your body is one of the most interesting machines ever seen; a machine so complicated that the chief wonder is that it does not give trouble more often, says Tit-Bits. It contains about 2,500,000 pores—about 3,000 to the square inch—and the human skeleton has more than 200 bones! All the blood in your body is pumped through your heart once every minute, and your heart beats about 70 times a minute, or 100,800 times a day. The average person can hold about 230 cubic inches of air in the lungs, and at each breath about 25-30 cubic inches is inhaled and exhaled. Most men breathe about 18 times a minute; women slightly faster.

Your body has more than 500 muscles and about an equal number of nerves and blood vessels, and your normal temperature is 98 6 degrees Fahrenheit. Every day your body throws off about four pints of water: 20 ounces from the skin, ten ounces from the lungs and 50 ounces from the kidneys. In addition to this you lose about half an ounce of nitrogen, an ounce of mineral salts and eight ounces of carbon.

To counteract this waste the average person takes in about 5½ pounds of food and drink a day, which is almost a ton in a year.

Our forefathers drew their water supply with the old oaken bucket, burned tallow candles, waded deep snow to secure their fuel and never enjoyed plumbing and heating advantages, or refrigeration service. Today, the cold storage locker service is available to farmers and town people alike, and is doing a great deal to enable farmers to enjoy their own fresh meat the year round at the lowest cost, as well as many other foods. The rental charge is very reasonable, and the convenience and food saving is great. Rent a locker on your next trip to Garner and enjoy better living. Foods stored here are kept at the proper temperature and are well preserved, clean and sanitary. The use of the cold storage locker service promotes better health.

SLEEPING SICKNESS NOW MOST SERIOUS

THREAT TO HORSES

If history repeats itself, outbreaks of sleeping sickness among horses and mules will be very widespread this summer. The consequences are apt to be disastrous to horse owners unless they take advance precautionary steps to protect their animals.

sleeping sickness lies in a new type of vaccine which was used with exceptionally good results last summer. In territories where horses were vaccinated with this new vaccine by veterinarians, a large percentage obtained immunity to the disease. The vaccine is now being released to veterinarians on a national scale for the 1939 season, and if owners have their horses immunized early enough, it should act as an effective curb on the disease in territories where it is used.

A case of sleeping sickness. Note the eyes and mouth, the braced legs, and depressed appearance.

It is estimated that upwards of 170,000 cases occurred in this country last year. The disease is caused by a virus, which is believed to be carried by mosquitoes, flies, and other insects. Within the past few months it has been found that some cases of human sleeping sickness demonstrate the same virus which causes sleeping sickness in horses.

Principal hope for control of equine

As an added precaution, owners should keep their horses protected against mosquitos, flies, and other insects in every way possible. Horses should be kept out of low pasture, should be kept in the barn at night, should be equipped with nets while working, and they should be sprayed with insect repellant.

Color and charm from a Victorian flower garden are recaptured in the purple and green silk print that fashions the dress centered in the picture. Shirred detail gives a softly flattering line to the bodice and sunburst pleating in the skirt. The two-tone grosgrain girdle is accented by a nosegay of flowers repeating the theme of the silk print.

Speaking of millinery that has gone sweetly feminine, take a look at the demure velvet-tied bonnet which the young modern to the left in the group is wearing. You can tell at a glance that this quaint model is inspired by the lines of the bonnets of Civil war days. Which goes to show that old fashions are repeating in new fashions this season, which is really a striking characteristic of trends running throughout the entire gamut of present modes. As to the charming dress she wears it is made of a "sanitized" silk print as are also each of the other frocks shown, this being a new process that deodorizes and keeps your materials antiseptic (germ free and germ repellent). The print glorifies a fuchsia color theme. Pleating at the top of the sleeves is released to puff the shoulders and the skirt is cut with a becoming swing flare.

The printed silks fashionable for evening wear are simply gorgeous, the wallpaper-design flower motifs are in some instances almost overwhelmingly enormous, achieving an effect of imposing elegance. Another important trend is toward rustling plaid taffeta for formal party frocks.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Gives Timely Advice on Planning Meals for Languid Appetites

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

AS THE weather begins to get warmer, many families develop a finicky attitude toward food. They come to the table with little appetite and claim that nothing tastes good. Before you reproach them, however, give some thought to the type of meals you are serving. Do they contain an abundance of crisp, succulent greens which tempt the eye and the palate and furnish important minerals and vitamins? Do they include juicy fruits with their refreshing flavors and appetite-stimulating fruit acids? Have you cut down somewhat on carbohydrates and fats? Or are you still offering enough energy foods at each meal to supply the fuel requirements of cold winter days?

A carefully chosen diet is an excellent remedy for the let-down feeling that both children and adults often experience at this season. For science has discovered what food substances are necessary to promote appetite and digestion, to help maintain buoyant health.

Obtaining the Appetite Vitamin

We know for example that when the appetite is poor, there may be a deficiency of that part of the vitamin B - complex which nutritionists call $B_1$. There is both experimental and clinical evidence that this vitamin is essential for the maintenance of a keen appetite. In addition, it is also required for the normal functioning of the digestive tract, so that it must be provided in sufficient amounts if food is to be utilized to best advantage.

Among the foods which supply this vitamin are whole grain cereals, bran, eggs, milk, peas, beans, carrots, spinach and cabbage. It is also found in many fruits, though usually in lesser amounts. In general, a most satisfactory way to insure a liberal intake of the appetite-promoting vitamin is to include in the diet generous amounts of whole grain cereals, milk, vegetables and fruits. As these foods likewise contribute many other necessary substances, they rate a prominent place in the dietary.

Foods That Build Blood

It is also extremely important that menus for finicky eaters should be rich in iron. For this mineral is necessary for the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood—and it is the hemoglobin that carries purifying oxygen to every cell in the body. Iron-rich foods include liver, eggs, whole grain cereals, dried fruits, and green, leafy vegetables. I have repeatedly urged the generous consumption of green, leafy vegetables, and I cannot too strongly emphasize their importance as a source of iron, as well as other essential minerals; and vitamins.

Keep the Diet Laxative

Another piece of advice that warrants repetition is my frequent recommendation that you include in the diet adequate amounts of bulky foods. These are necessary to help promote normal elimination. If your menus contain too many highly concentrated foods, irregular health habits may result. And that in itself may be responsible for a feeling of lassitude and a lack of interest in eating. Here again fruits and vegetables are important. Together with whole grain cereals and breads, they constitute our most important source of bulk or cellulose.

Get Plenty of Milk

Milk is another food that should be used generously, because it contains such a wide assortment of protective substances. It is our foremost source of calcium, which is required for the teeth, bones and for sound healthy nerves. And it contains every known vitamin in varying amounts.

If your family does not care for milk as a beverage, make frequent use of cheese which is essentially milk in concentrated form. And use milk freely in sauces and for making desserts. It can also be incorporated in nourishing cream soups, to be served for luncheon or supper. Follow the soup with a salad made from crisp greens and including a protein food, such as cheese, nuts, or hard-cooked eggs. And top off with a fruit dessert. This type of meal appeals to the appetite and provides substantial amounts of minerals and vitamins.

Salads Twice a Day

A crisp appetizer salad makes a good beginning for the main meal of the day. A combination of watercress, dandelion greens, lettuce or shredded cabbage, with fruit, or a small amount of a savory fish paste will intrigue the most reluctant appetite. And when the salad is served at the beginning of a meal, you can be sure that it will be eaten before the hunger is satisfied.

Another way to get additional vegetables into a meal is to mold them in gelatin and serve as a dinner salad. Or an assortment of fruits can be treated in the same way and used as a combination salad and dessert. If prepared gelatin desserts are used, a wide variety of color and flavor combinations can be achieved with very little effort; and children will eat them with relish.

You'll be surprised to discover how quickly interest can be stimulated by serving familiar foods in a new way!

8. By what authority may the President of the United States call an extra session of congress?
9. What relation would your sister's father's stepson's mother be to you?
10. How long is the heart of the average adult?

The Answers

1. A pride.
2. The first is a type of cyclone. A tycoon is an important person in business.
3. No. Nicotine is colorless; the yellow is tobacco tar.
4. Most people keep a sponge in the bathroom, which really is the skeleton of a very energetic animal, usually found by divers in the sea.
5. Thomas Jefferson was the author of the phrase "entangling alliances."
6. "Drive slowly" is better English, although "Drive slow" is generally accepted as correct.
7. The Naval observatory says that no light is received from the sun when it is 18 degrees or more below the horizon, and during those hours there is no hour that is regularly the darkest.
8. The Constitution provides for this. Article II, section 3, says: ". . . he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them . . ."
9. Your stepmother.
10. About five inches.

SAFETY TALKS

Driving Too Fast

OF THE 28 states which published fatal traffic accident summaries for the year, 21 classified more drivers as "exceeding the speed limit" or "driving too fast for conditions" than were charged with any other kind of improper driving.

All 28 states combined, says the National Safety council, in its 1938 edition of "Accident Facts," reported about 18 per cent of the drivers in fatal accidents and about 9 per cent of the drivers in non-fatal accidents were in this category.

Making a Practical Valance for a Bed

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A SMART new house it was, and all the curtains and slip-covers were made by following my sketches in Book 1, SEWING, for the Home Decorator! But when we came to the second floor it was my turn to get a few pointers.

The treatment of each of the two principal bedrooms was quite different. One was very simple with a lovely old quilt used for a bedspread; the other was in flowery glazed chintz with strong accents of bright greenish blue. Both beds required a valance that would not be removed with the spread at night.

MATTRESS

Here is the flowered bedspread and the small sketch shows you how the valance problem was solved. As my clever young hostess pointed out, this is really a bright idea because the valance and its foundation make a cover for the springs in case they are not the boxed type.

With the help of Book 1, you can make many of the things you have been wanting for the house. Book 2—Embroidery and Gifts, is full of ideas for ways to use your spare time in making things for yourself or to sell. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books, the quilt leaflet illustrating 36 authentic embroidery stitches will be included FREE. Address, Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

BUY A POPPY!

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

Saturday, May 27 is Poppy Day in Klemme and throughout the United States Millions of little red poppies will be worn in honor of the World War dead. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be contributed for the welfare of the war's living victims, the disabled veterans, their families, and the widows and orphans of the dead.

Members of the Adams-Schaefer Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary will be on the streets here early Saturday morning with baskets of poppies made by disabled veterans at the U S. Hospital at Des Moines. They will ask everyone to put on a poppy as an individual act of tribute to those who gave their lives in America's defense, and to contribute something toward the Legion and Auxiliary work for the disabled veterans and dependent families.

500 have been purchased by the local unit.

The Auxiliary will be assisted by the junior members and by the girl scouts.

More than 100,000 women will be in Saturday's Poppy Day army, distributing flowers in memory of America's more than 100,000 World War dead. They will ask no price for the poppies but will give them for any contribution the wearer feels able to make. Every penny of the money contributed will go into relief and welfare funds of the Legion and Auxiliary, where it will work for needy veterans and veterans' families during the coming year.

ENGAGEMENT OF KLEMME GIRL ANNOUNCED AT AMES

The engagement of Miss LaVohn Larsen, Klemme, and Mr. Marvin Isvik, of Jewel, was announced at the Iowa State College campus last Friday evening, when Miss Larsen was hostess at a party at the Sigma Kappa sorority.

The engagement was announced on a slip of paper concealed in white hats in little maroon colored hat boxes which served as place cards. The tables were decorated for the occasion and bouquets of flowers were numerous.

At the same time Miss Larsen was entertaining at the Sigma Kappa house, Mr. Isvik was entertaining his fraternity brothers at a similar party at the Delta Tau Delta house where the old custom of passing out the cigars was observed.

Miss Larsen graduated last spring, while Mr. Isvik will graduate in June from a course in Agricultural Engineering.

METHODIST BIBLE SCHOOL OPENED MONDAY MORNING

The vacation Bible School opened Monday at the Klemme Methodist Church with an enrollment of about forty pupils. Rev. Wm. Zabilka, who supervises the school expects the enrollment to increase.

Teachers selected for the work are Elsie Ward, 1st and 2nd grade; Margaret Veenstra, 3rd and 4th; Harriet Gibbs, 5th and 6th, and Eula Veenstra, 7th and 8th grades.

The school is conducted each day, except Saturday, from 9:00 to 12:00 noon.

BUY A POPPY

When the Memorial Poppies go on sale this week end, buy one and help along a good cause. The poppies are made by disabled Veterans and are sold all over the United States just before Memorial Day.

Ray Jorgenson, Jr. Appointed To Important Post By Congressman

KLEMME BOY WILL ENTER NAVAL ACADEMY IN JUNE

Fred C. Gilchrist Names Local Youth To Midshipmens' Training School

Ray Jorgenson, Jr., Klemme, was notified Monday by Hon. Fred C. Gilchrist, Representative of the 8th Iowa District, that he had been appointed to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, where he will report for duty in June, provided that he can meet the physical and mental requirements for entrance.

Ray, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, graduated with highest honors from the Klemme High School last spring, and during the past year attended the Mason City Junior College where he took an engineering course, and was prominent in atheletics.

The appointment carries with it one of the highest honors that can be given a young man, and Ray, Jr. is fortunate in being named as one of the few Iowa boys to this important post.

BASEBALL PRACTICE HELD TUESDAYS AND THUSDAYS

Local baseball bugs, for the past several years, have talked much of organizing a baseball team. . . but nothing has come of it but just talk.

This year, however, the boys have talked a little oftener and a little more earnestly, with the result that several practice sessions have already been held and more are scheduled.

Every Tuesday and Thursday evening there will be practice. Several promising candidates are already hard at work, but more men are needed.

This Thursday night will be the next practice and it will be held at the schoolhouse. Everyone interested is urged to be present.

LAST COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES IN OLD SCHOOL DRAWS FULL HOUSE

Several Awards Given As Eighteen Seniors Graduate

A capacity house attended the commencement exercises at the high school gymnasium last Thursday evening when eighteen seniors, one of the largest classes in the history of the school, received their diplomas. Mr. W. R. Hamilton, president of the Hamilton School of Commerce in Mason City, gave the commencement address, entitled "Youth's Opportunity." The comments on this address during the past week have been many and favorable.

Scholarship awards for the boy and girl ranking highest in scholarship were granted this year to Cecil Katter, the valedictorian of the class, and to Doris Johnson. the salutatorian. These awards came from Waldorf College in Forest City and Luther College in Decorah. The Upper Iowa University four-point scholarship based on character, scolarship, leadership, and participation in worthwhile activities went to Ruben Grosshuesch, with LaRayne Stille as first alternate. Marvin Stokesbary received the Josten literature medal. Josten scholarship medals were also presented to Cecil Katter and Doris Johnson.

Students who had been neither absent nor tardy during the year had their names read. They were Norman Albee, Helen Suckow, Elizabeth Goll, Esther Tiggeman, Caroline Schwartz, Melvin Coobs, Aaron Wille, Billy Zabilka, Frederick Bell, Evelyn Arnold, Mildred Patterson, John Schwichtenberg and Ruth Stille. Ruth Stille has been neither absent nor tardy in her ten years of school.

Following presentation of the awards, Miss Irma Merritt presented the eighth grade diplomas. The following students received them: Betty Etchen, Calvin Grosshuesch, Jr., Eugene Haberkamp, Elwyn Jacobs, Robert Jahnke, Leonard Kaduce, Louis Klotzbach, Dean Merkel, Caroline Schwartz, Edward Peck, Robert Bamman, and Roger Bamman.

Mr. H. F. Jost, president of the board of education, gave high school diplomas to the following eighteen seniors: Evelyn Arnold, LeRoy Bamman, Stella Barz, Ronald Gibbs, Ruben Grosshuesch, Doris Johnson, Cecil Katter, Eugene Kluckhohn, Lester Neuberger, Morris Neuhring, Mildred Patterson, Ruth Ridder, Virgil Stille, LaRayne Stille, Marvin Stokesbary, Irene Suckow, Chester Ward, and Harold Wicks.

First Of Outdoor Movies Will Shown Here Saturday Night

NEW RULING

MUST BUY PROPERTY BEFORE JUNE 1 TO QUALIFY

Iowa homestead purchasers buying after June 1, Tuesday faced delay in qualifying for homestead tax credits as a result of a changed interpretation of the law.

Those who become homesteaders through purchase of property after June 1 of the year will be unable to obtain homestead tax credits on the taxes levied that year and payable the next, an opinion by Atty. Gen. Fred Everett's office said Tuesday.

Only those who buy before June 1 and file an application before that date can obtain the credit on the tax payments of the succeeding year, the opinion written by Asst. Atty. Gen. John Mulroney said.

The ruling is based on the requirement that all applications for credits must be on file by June 1, a provision of law.

Since purchasers after June 1 cannot make application before the deadline, they can apply only in the next year and obtain payments of the second year after that of purchase, the ruling holds.

FUNERAL SERVICES WILL BE HELD THURSDAY FOR MARCIA CARPENTER

Marcia Jean Carpenter, 7 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Carpenter, 310 Thirteenth Street, S. E., Mason City, died at a Mason City hospital about noon Monday, following a major operation and a short illness.

Surviving are the parents, Mrs. Carpenter of Mason City, and Mr. Carpenter who is in California, two sisters, Jo Ann and Janice Dean, her grandparents, Mr. Joe E. Johnson of Klemme, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Carpenter of Goodell, besides many other near relatives.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon from the Major-Randall funeral home in Mason City and will be conducted by Rev. Harry Herlein, former pastor of the Goodell U. B. Church. Burial will be in the Klemme Cemetery.

Girl Scouts Spend Day At Mason City Training Camp

Fifteen Klemme girl scouts with their captain, Mrs. Earl Schaeffer, went to Mason City, Saturday, for an all day outing and training. Upon arriving, the girls had to find their troupe and patrol number in the woods, after which they were divided into groups and each group cooked their own dinner. In the afternoon the girls were divided into six groups where they studied the following: Photography, Nature, Handiwork, Camp Craft, Chorus, and Dramatics. Later in the afternoon they all gathered on the hillside where a fine program was enjoyed.

Drivers for the day were: Henry Galbreth, Elaine Buntenbach, Mrs. Schaeffer and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson.

OPEN AIR THEATRE GREATLY IMPROVED FOR THIS SUMMER'S SHOWS

High Class Pictures, Modern Machines Will Be Used Here

The first of Klemme's "open air" movies will be given on the movie lot on Saturday evening of this week. The show grounds have been greatly improved this year and will make an enjoyable place to spend the evening.

Mr. L. C. Boehnke, who has put on the shows so satisfactorily here the past few years, has again been engaged for the season. Mr. Boehnke has two modern projectors and runs a continuous show. The films are of the highest type and the pictures have been especially selected to please the movie going patrons here.

The first show will include a feature starring Jackie Moran and Marcia Mae Jones in "Barefoot Boy." In addition there will also be the popular comedy feature.

The shows have been put down to the low price of 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children. Ordinarily the same show would be 25 cents. The summer shows are sponsored by the Civic Club who have appointed Mr. Wellemeyer as manager.

LARGE CROWD AT ANNUAL COMMUNITY, SCHOOL PICNIC

The Klemme Schools came to a close for the year with the annual community, school picnic held at the Klemme park, with a large crowd present to enjoy the annual get-to-gether and to congratulate the high school graduates who would be together for perhaps the very last time in a group.

Following the picnic the Klemme and Meservey high school baseball teams met on the local diamond, Klemme winning 11 to 2

Klemme Couple Will Live At Seattle, Washington

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Koerner and baby left last week for Dow City, Iowa, where they will visit with relatives until this week end, when they will leave for Seattle. Washington, to make their home. A brother of Mrs. Koerner, and his small son will accompany them to Seattle where Mrs. Koerner has a sister and brother-in-law. The men will be employed in electrical work.

New Drivers Licenses Will Be Available This Week

The new drivers licenses will be issued this week end from the Sheriff's office. The fee for obtaining a license is fifty cents. Those who now have a license may have them renewed without examination, unless a stub has been taken off due to a violation.

Officials urge that you apply for your license at an early date.

EUROPE:
Forgotten Patient

Early May found Poland the No. 1 source of European trouble, but the cancerous sore had spread so far afield that Poland's woes were almost forgotten. Specifically Germany wanted Danzig (whose 385,000 population is 96 per cent German) and a 15-mile-wide path across the Polish corridor to East Prussia. Far more adamant than her protectors, Britain and France, little Poland bravely let her foreign Minister Josef Beck reject the Reich's demands bluntly. Next she gave dictatorial powers to President Ignace Moscicki and stoically awaited whatever fate might be shoved down her throat by the machinations of Europe's five powers. President Moscicki watched his nation's troubles spread into the following hopeless confusion:

Anglo-French solidarity, highly touted after the Czecho-Slovakian and Memel crises, had broken down completely for want of purposeful direction. While Britain swerved back to appeasement policies and outspokenly urged Poland to surrender Danzig, thereby courting Italo-German friendship, France bluntly rejected an Italian offer to settle the Mediterranean problem. Meanwhile both Britain and France tried with left-handed diplomacy to make Russia defend Polish integrity. The Soviet took a sensible course, standing aloof from any commitments. Having fired Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov, who had been leading the treaty conversations, Russia gave vacillating France and Britain a choice: Either sign a double-barrelled military pact for joint protection of eastern European nations, or Moscow would isolate itself and leave the democracies to stew in their own juice.

As is their wont, Rome and Berlin took advantage of this confusion. At Milan, Foreign Secretaries Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano expanded the axis into an outright military pact which resulted directly, London learned, from France's refusal to arbitrate the Mediterranean problem with Italy.

Adolf Hitler once wrote (in Mein Kampf) that "an alliance whose purpose does not include the intention to wage war is meaningless and worthless." Observers thought the new Italo-German pact held that purpose as a threat which would have three sorry results for the democracies:

(1) Premier Mussolini would intervene in the Polish-German quarrel just as he did in the Czech crisis last September, using his nominal friendship with individual Anglo-French statesmen to help force a plebiscite in Danzig and lead to a repetition of the notorious Munich settlement.

(2) As his reward, Mussolini would win German help in breaking up Yugoslavia, now torn by southern Serb and northern Croat autonomy moves which are strongly reminiscent of the late Czecho-Slovakia's troubles. Marching in to "keep peace" and expand his political domain, Mussolini would add to the Balkan domination he began by seizing Albania.

(3) Another reward would be reemphasis of Germany's promise to help Italy win Mediterranean claims from France, including a free port at Djibouti in French Somaliland, domination over the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad, joint control over the Suez canal and an adjustment regarding Italians in French Tunisia.

LABOR:
FDR Dog House

In 1922 a half million U. S. coal miners struck from April 1 to September 6. In 1939 about 360,000 soft-coal miners went out again, not to celebrate a seventeenth anniversary but because C. I. O.'s John L. Lewis ordered it. Reason: C. I. O.'s United Mine Workers demanded a closed shop to protect itself against threatened "raids" by a rival A. F. of L. union. Guided by U. S. Conciliator John R. Steelman, employers and C. I. O. representatives argued one month to a stalemate, operators offering as their "final" proposal a checkoff system under which mines would remain an open shop but dues would be levied against both union and non-union workers. C. I. O. rejected this and by May 1 some 460,000 workers were idle. Meanwhile the nation faced its worst coal shortage since 1922.

Pressed by public opinion, President Roosevelt finally decided his conciliator should get tough. Lectured Mr. Steelman to weary conferees: "I insist that you bring this matter to a civilized conclusion. It ill behooves grown men . . . to seriously contemplate open warfare . . . The American public will not stand for a state of insurrection brought about by an industry involving a vital minority of our population."

A few days later settlement appeared imminent; certainly not permanent, but the simple type of settlement John Lewis has offered all along and which thus far had received no consideration. Four times before the 1937-39 contract expired, U. M. W. A. proposed that it be extended until a new agreement could be drawn up. Only hitch is that by sponsoring such a temporary truce (obviously in public interest) the President is unavoidably siding with C. I. O. against employees. Already in the dog house so far as business is concerned, this would hardly win him any friends.

ASIA:
Up the River

Twenty-two months ago China's capital was Nanking. Japanese aggression pushed it westward up the Yangtze to Hankow, next backward into Szechwan province and the ancient walled city of Chungking. Playing a retreating game, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek knows that the deeper he can draw Japan into his bailiwick, the easier will China's resistance be.

CHINA AND HER CAPITALS
Japan is prepared to follow.

But Generalissimo Chiang did not expect what happened next.

Into Chungking (normally 635,000 population) swarmed 1,500,000 refugees, in itself a grave problem. Then one day 45 Japanese war planes swarmed over Chungking, dropping incendiary bombs and demolitioners, more than 100 in all. When the smoke cleared China could count 5,000 casualties, a ruined capital and temporarily blasted morale. Germany and Britain found their embassies destroyed. For all concerned it seemed best to move the capital-on-wheels again, this time 150 miles northeast into Chengtu, whose normal half million population will automatically double overnight.

Peace-loving Chengtu might well regard this official invasion as a death sentence. General Chiang probably hopes an off-the-river capital may break his bad luck jinx, but Tokyo thinks otherwise. Despite British protests that Chungking's bombing was purely terroristic and without a definite military objective, Nippon's warriors announced their death planes were prepared to follow China's capital wherever it may roam.

SCIENCE:
Atomic Power

Albert Einstein once said that to find the nucleus of an atom was like going out on your porch some dark evening and firing a gun in the hope of hitting a duck. A few years later science developed atom smashers which turn out neutrons (uncharged particles in the atom's nucleus) with little trouble. By bombarding a new element called uranium with neutrons, scientists disintegrate uranium and get another element, actino-uranium. Bombardment of this with neutrons produces more neutrons and thus creates an endless chain of explosive power.

Thus, said the University of Chicago's Dr. A. H. Compton, is the long-sought goal of atomic power being brought nearer man's practical use. Addressing the southwest section of the American Association for Advancement of Science, Dr. Compton made dramatic news by forecasting that a quantity of atomic power the size of a pinhead may some day propel an ocean liner from the U. S. to Europe. Potentially capable of revolutionizing heat and transportation methods, atomic power—like fire—could be both a blessing and curse. Sample curse: It could fire a gun several thousand miles.

Dr. Compton's claims are not dreams. Unrelated, recent experiments in both Europe and the U. S. have started from the same assumption and led to the same conclusion. The assumption: Production of heat and light in the stars is a radioactive process, therefore man should go about unlocking atomic power by artificial radiation. The conclusion and problem: To find out whether theories regarding the source of solar and stellar power can be made practically effective on earth.

In the late Sixteenth century Sir Walter Raleigh developed a light war vessel called the cromster, described in Henry Culver-Gordon Grant's Book of Old Ships. After a 1903 storm, one A. W. Drinkwater walked down the sands of North Carolina's Roanoke island and found the hulk of a ship barely jutting out of the sand. This spring came another storm, baring more of the vessel to watchful Mr. Drinkwater. One hundred CCC youths bent to their shovels, excavated the hulk and found what Mr. Drinkwater and the Roanoke Island Historical association thought was an important discovery. Recalled was Sir Walter's famous "lost colony" which disappeared there in 1584. Since the newly discovered boat checked perfectly with measurements of a Raleigh cromster, might the long-buried ship have some connection with the lost colonists?

With Approach of Warm Weather, C. Houston Goudiss Advises Extra Care in Storing Foods in the Home

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

IT IS the proud distinction of America's food industries that notwithstanding the infinite variety of perishable foods which are constantly available, and regardless of the distances they have been transported, even the most delicate foods are delivered to the consumer in a fresh, wholesome condition, with all their fine flavor unimpaired.

The secret of this modern miracle is refrigeration. Vast sums of money have been invested in long trains of refrigerated cars, thousands upon thousands of refrigerated trucks, refrigerated warehouses and refrigeration equipment in stores. All this has been done for a single purpose: to keep food fresh and at its best until it reaches the home.

At this point the responsibility shifts to the homemaker. And if she falls down on her job, then all previous efforts to keep food free from spoilage have been in vain.

Homemaker's Responsibility

As guardian of her family's health, one of the homemaker's most important tasks is to see to it that all food is safeguarded against contamination until it reaches her table. This means that perishable foods must continue to be refrigerated properly in the home. For only in this way can they be protected from the ravages of micro-organisms which are always ready to attack foods when conditions are favorable for their growth.

Two essentials are necessary for satisfactory food preservation in the home. First, perishable foods must be stored at a temperature of from 40 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit—never at a temperature higher than 50 degrees. Second, the right degree of humidity must be maintained. Too much moisture will encourage the growth of bacteria; too little will dehydrate fruits and vegetables and make them unfit for consumption.

Home Care of Foods

Both requirements are met by a good household refrigerator; and the homemaker who appreciates the importance of keeping foods sound and wholesome will regard an efficient refrigerator as an investment in good health. It is especially necessary that the food supply be properly refrigerated during the warmer weather of spring and summer, in order to prevent the consumption of dishes that may have become contaminated without any marked alteration in appearance, taste or odor.

Highly Perishable Foods

Milk is often regarded as the most perishable of all foods, because it is an ideal medium for the growth of bacteria. It is, therefore, essential that this splendid food be kept at low temperatures at all times. It should be put into the refrigerator as soon as possible after it is delivered, and kept there until the moment it is to be used. Milk should never be allowed to stand at room temperature for any length of time. For it has been demonstrated that when it is held at 40 degrees—an ideal temperature—before delivery, then allowed to stand at a room temperature of 75 degrees for an hour and a half, and again refrigerated, a rapid increase in bacteria occurs.

Other types of protein foods also present a favorable medium for bacterial growth when they are held at temperatures higher than 50 degrees. These include meat, fish, meat broths, gelatin, custards and creamed foods. It is advisable to keep these foods, as well as the milk supply, in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

Fruits and Vegetables

Fruits and vegetables soon lose their moisture content unless they are protected against warm, dry air; and they are likewise subject to the action of micro-organisms which result in decay. But when stored in a modern refrigerator, these mineral- and vitamin-rich foods can be kept in perfect condition for considerable periods, thus making it possible to take advantage of favorable market offerings.

Guarding Against Mold

As a rule, warmer weather also increases the problem of combating molds. For given moisture and warmth, molds will grow on almost anything. However, the most hospitable hosts are acid fruits, such as oranges, lemons, berries or tomatoes; sweets, such as jams and jellies; bread and meat. While molds are physiologically harmless if eaten, they definitely spoil the taste and appearance of food.

Mold growths can be killed by boiling. They are retarded by the dry circulating air of an efficient refrigerator. It is to allow for air circulation that berries should be stored uncovered—if possible, spread out so that the air can reach more than just the top layer.

Frequent inspection of all food supplies, including those in the bread box, and the prompt elimination of any items showing signs of mold, will help to keep it from spreading.

Constant vigilance on the part of the homemaker in caring for foods on hand will avoid a needless drain on the food budget and will safeguard the health of every member of the family.

Questions Answered

Mrs. D. N. M.—In general, nuts are rich in both protein and fat, and for this reason, they may be used interchangeably with meat in the diet. They are also considered a good source of vitamin B.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Refrigerator Deodorant.—Put a piece of charcoal on one of the shelves of the refrigerator. It acts as an absorbent for all odors and purifies the air.

Make Shakers Work.—To keep the metal tops of salt shakers from corroding, cover the inside with melted paraffine. While the paraffine is cooling the holes may be opened with a pin.

Hot Water Marks.—Should you spill hot water on a polished table and it leaves a mark, rub it gently with spirits of camphor and finish off with a gentle rubbing of furniture polish.

Easy on the Curtains.—Before washing net or lace curtains, steep overnight in a tub of cold water to which has been added half a cupful of ammonia. This draws out the dirt without soap and rubbing. Next morning rinse the curtains and squeeze through warm suds.

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. You won't have to endure constipation, you can avoid it. Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

League of Reformed Drinkers, Founded in '90's, Was Unique Among American Organizations

National convention of the Keeley League at Harrisburg, Pa.

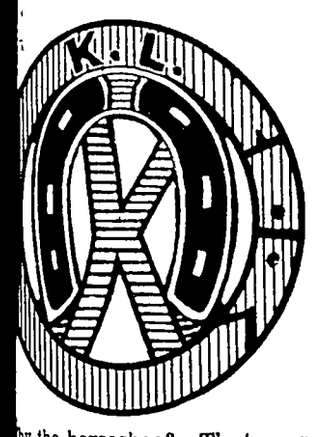
MONG the many thousands of clubs, societies, associations, leagues, federations and the like which have been organized in this country there once was one that was olutely unique. It was composed exclusively of men who been drunkards and at one time it had a membership of e than 30,000. Moreover it had auxiliaries in which the es, mothers and sisters of its members were enrolled.

held national convens attended by thousands elegates and its national state officers were men d in politics, the profess and literature. Instead eing ashamed of the fact they had been drunks, its members honestly itted it, but they took e in the fact that they conquered Demon Rum, s John Barleycorn. And symbol of that fact they e in the buttonholes of r coats this emblem:



hy the horseshoe? That was use this league was founded blacksmith shop in the little of Dwight, Ill. And thereby s the tale of the National ley league and the man who responsible for its organiza—a "horse and buggy doctor" ed Leslie E. Keeley.

orn in Potsdam, N. Y., in , the son of an old-fashioned ntry doctor, young Leslie ley came west in the late 1850s studied medicine for a time er a Doctor Littlefield in rdstown, Ill. In 1860 he end Rush Medical college in cago and was in his second r when the Civil war began. volunteered for service as a ical cadet and was assigned duty at Jefferson Barracks, r St. Louis. He was soon e an assistant surgeon and ed in command of the medistaff there. Then he was proed to surgeon and ordered active service as a brigade ical director on the staff of eral Wright's third division of Army of the Cumberland.

hen the war ended young ley resumed his studies at h and was graduated in 1866. settled in the little corn belt n of Dwight, Ill., and became uccessful country doctor which to his appointment as divial surgeon of the Chicago & n railroad.

hile in the Union army, Dr. ley had become interested in estigating the various effects alcohol and was soon conced that drunkenness was a ase that could be cured. So began to experiment. He d that alcohol attacked cer- nerve forces and being an erienced chemist he estabed a laboratory and began his earches to discover a drug or bination of drugs which uld combat the power of alcoeople of the community in ch he was practicing regardhim as a dreamer, an "imctical visionary." Alcoholism a moral, not a medical, prob-, they declared. But a young h chemist recently arrived in erica thought differently. John Oughton was his name and he employed as a pharmacist a Dwight drug store in the building in which Dr. Keeley had his office.

An 'Impractical Visionary.'

Oughton became interested in Keeley's researches and soon he was assisting the doctor in trying to compound the medicine which would hold John Barleycorn in check. Finally in 1879 came the announcement that they had been successful and that a cure for alcoholism had been found. At first the people of Dwight were incredulous, but when some confirmed drunkards around the town, to whom life had little to offer, "took the cure" and found that it worked, skepticism changed to belief in its efficacy. Soon inebriates from the surrounding country were offering themselves for treatment.

At the end of two years Keeley was able to establish a small sanitarium, drawing his patients largely from Chicago whose "gin mills" were turning out more and more drunkards every year. Requiring capital to operate his rapidly growing institute, Keeley entered into a partnership with Oughton and Maj. Curtis Judd, who was engaged in the mercantile business in Dwight.

Keeley's plan of treatment for alcoholism was an innovation. Whereas the oldtime asylum for inebriates was a place of horror with its straitjackets and other forms of restraint, Keeley's institute was a place for voluntary patients where they met the doctors on a basis of mutual concession of responsibility for a cure. During the eighties further research and experiments developed new methods of treatment and by 1890 the institute began to attract public notice.

The next year occurred the incident which led to Keeley's becoming a national figure. Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, heard that a country doctor was curing men of drunkenness. He sent a reporter to Dwight. The newsman came home and wrote up what he had heard. Not convinced, Medill sent another reporter. Dr. Keeley said to him: "Please tell Mr. Medill to send me six of the worst drunkards he can find and in three days I will sober them up and in four weeks I will send them back to Chicago sober men; and, unless of their own volition, they will never seek liquor. At any rate they will never have need or necessity thereafter."

Medill's Experiment.

The challenge was met. Mr. Medill declared:

"I selected a half dozen of the toughest products of alcoholism which the Chicago saloons were able to turn out. The experimental cases were sent down to Dwight, one at a time, extending over a period of several weeks. And in due time they were all returned to me, looking as if a veritable miracle had been wrought upon them. They went away sots and returned gentlemen.

"But I did not stop with the half dozen specially selected cases, but sent down to Dwight a number of inebriate acquaintances to take the treatment. When I had then become convinced that drunkenness was a disease, the result of imbibing a poison and that a medicine had been discovered which released the victim from the irrepressible thirst, and that it restored the man to normal health of both body and mind, I felt it to be a duty which I owed to humanity to make known the virtues of the Keeley cure as fast and as far as it was in my power."

Newspapers throughout the United States began writing up the institute and soon the quiet little town of Dwight was overwhelmed with visitors and patients seeking treatment. A boom developed rivaling the scenes of present-day oil discoveries. Soon it had become the most famous village of its size in America and the saying "gone to Dwight" became a familiar part of the argot of the day.

As the demand for the treatment grew, it was found necessary to supplement the facilities of the parent institute. A far-flung system of branch institutes in principal cities grew up, totaling at one time more than 60. Dr. Keeley carried his treatment abroad and institutes were established in London, Liverpool, and other foreign cities.

The League Is Founded.

As more and more patients flocked to this little city, an organization of "graduates" of Keeley's institute was formed who began to hold reunions to proclaim their victory over Demon Rum. Out of this grew the National Keeley league with its 359 local lodges in every state of the Union and its membership that exceeded 30,000.

The members of the league had qualifications for doing the most effective kind of temperance work. Knowing the danger of social drinking they were able to caution the beginner and knowing the growth of the habit they were well equipped to admonish the moderate drinker to stop while he could still control himself.

When Dr. Keeley died in 1900 at the age of 68, the work which he had pioneered had made him internationally famous. The town of Dwight was known throughout the continent. Dr. Keeley was fortunate in that the value of his discovery brought him public appreciation during his lifetime. While the majority of those who took the "cure" remained cured, there were naturally some backsliders. Dr. Keeley himself said: "I cannot give a man a moral will. His Creator does that. But if he has not sinned away that moral will entirely, I can help him to say no!"

All things considered, he did more for the victims of inebriety than anyone had before or since. Moreover, the change that has developed in the past half century in the attitude of society toward the drinking man—of regarding him as a person afflicted by a disease rather than as an unregenerate sinner—is largely due to the teachings of Dr. Keeley. Some time perhaps the social historians will "discover" this country doctor whose pioneering temperance work entitles him to as much, if not more, credit than some of the politicians whose names adorn the pages of history and the value of his contribution to the nation's progress will be more widely recognized than it has been up to now.

COL. A. J. SMITH

One of the league's most famous presidents was Col. Andrew J. Smith, himself a "graduate" of Dwight, Colonel Smith introduced the treatment into the Soldiers' home at Leavenworth, Kan., when he became governor of the home and it was also administered at soldiers' homes at Milwaukee, Wis., Hampton, Va., Los Angeles, Calif., and other cities. In fact, at a time when the soldiers in our army were noted for being almost as hard-drinking as they were hard-fighting, an institute was established exclusively for the use of enlisted men at Fort Leavenworth.

Old-timers still living in Dwight remember Dr. Keeley as a man of wide human sympathies and a confirmed sense of justice. He was a large man physically, over six feet tall, of commanding presence, a natural leader who believed in equality and insisted that the men who took the treatment should form in "line" without any distinction as to wealth or social position.

The story is told of a wealthy English nobleman who approached Dr. Keeley on the subject of getting private treatment after arriving. He was mildly and politely refused. He applied again with the same result. The third time he said:

"Dr. Keeley, I don't want to go into line with the rest of these people. I am a man of wealth and family and will give you a thousand dollars if you will administer me this treatment privately."

Dr. Keeley replied: "My friend, I cannot do what you ask. But never mind. Get right into 'line' and if you behave yourself for a couple of weeks, you will be just as good as any of the other patients."

The aims and purposes of the National Keeley league, according to an article which appeared in the American Journal of Politics in December, 1882, were set forth in its constitution as follows:

"To further the cause of temperance among all people by curing the drunkard of the disease of intemperance and preventing the youth of the country, by education and example, from contracting it. To bind together in one fraternal band, all who have taken the Keeley treatment for liquor or other diseases; to extend the knowledge of the Keeley remedies; to establish state and auxiliary leagues and by medical, moral and Christian methods, by the help of Almighty God to discourage and annihilate the use of liquor as a beverage in any way that may seem opportune, or the occasion may demand."

Just as do other organizations, so did the National Keeley league have its own publication. It was called the Banner of Gold and it circulated among the thousands of graduates of the Keeley institute. An interesting feature of this magazine was the poetry which appeared in it, written by nationally-known poets.

Indicative of the fact that "gone to Dwight" was a by-word in the nineties is this poem by Nixon Waterman which appeared in the Banner of Gold:

SINCE PAPA'S BEEN TO DWIGHT

My papa's awful happy now, and mamma's happy, too,
Because my papa doesn't drink
the way he used to do;
And everything's so jolly now—
'tain't like it use to be,
When papa never stayed at home with poor mamma and me.
It made me feel so very bad to see my mamma cry,
And though she'd smile I'd see the tears a hiding in her eye;
But now she laughs just like we girls and never cries a mite,
And sings such pretty little songs
—since papa's been to Dwight

You ought to see my Sunday dress, it's every bit all new;
It ain't made out of mamma's dress the way she used to do
And mamma's got a pretty cloak all trimmed with funny fur,
And papa's got some nice new clothes and goes to church with her.
My papa says that Christmas time will pretty soon be here,
And maybe good old Santa Claus will find our house THIS year.
I hope he'll bring some candy and a dolly big and bright;
He'll know where our house is I'm sure—since papa's been to Dwight.

Long-Haired Sheriff

COMMODORE PERRY OWENS, born in Tennessee in 1852, went to Texas in the early seventies and spent 11 years there as a cowboy before becoming foreman of a cow outfit in New Mexico. He wore his hair long—almost to his waist—and carried his six-shooter on his left side, the butt pointing forward. Old timers in the Southwest were doubtful whether such a "show-off" had "real sand."

They found out he did have when, singlehanded, he killed three Navajo Indian cattle thieves. Then the people of northern Arizona decided he was the man to clean up the outlaws in their section and elected him sheriff of Apache county in 1887.

He broke up a band of 16 cattle rustlers after killing Ike Clanton of Tombstone fame and two others and capturing his brother, Finn Clanton, leader of the gang.

But his greatest feat was his single-handed fight with four members of the Blevans gang, one of the factions in the famous Pleasant Valley war. In this fight, which took place in Holbrook, Perry killed three of the four, including Andy Cooper, one of Arizona's most dangerous gunfighters. It was one of the most desperate encounters at close quarters in the history of the state, not even excepting the famous fight at the O. K. corral in Tombstone.

Refusing re-election as sheriff, Perry became a special agent for the Santa Fe railroad, later express messenger for Wells-Fargo and then a United States marshal. He gave up his man-hunting work in 1900 and became a business man in Seligman where he died in 1919.

First in Yellowstone Park

WHAT an adventure it must have been for the first person who saw the Yellowstone! John Colter, who for three years had served in the famous Lewis and Clark expedition, was the lucky man. He had just left the party and established himself with the expedition of Manuel Lisa from St. Louis who traveled up the Missouri river to trade with the Indians.

A fort was established at the Big Horn and John Colter was sent ahead to notify the red men. With courage typical of that period, he began his lone expedition into territory never before trod by even the most courageous trappers and pioneers of the time.

Informed by the Indians that ahead lay a territory that was bedeviled and that they would not penetrate it, his curiosity and his adventurous spirit impelled him to explore it. He was well rewarded for records show that, in 1808, he went through and then completely encircled what is now Yellowstone national park.

Alone, he saw before any other person, the boiling springs, towering geysers and strange mineral deposits. Not only was he a pioneer among white men, but more adventurous than even the red men, being years ahead of them in risking existence in a land where the earth trembled and groaned, spouted fire and hissed steam.

When Colter returned, he told such an amazing story of smoking pits and the smell of brimstone that the men of the fort laughed at him and told others what they thought were ridiculous stories of "Colter's Hell." It was several years before anyone else had the courage to verify his discovery.

First Arctic Explorer

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN is famous for a long list of achievements but one more should be added to the list—that of patron of the first American voyage of Arctic exploration.

Early in the Eighteenth century the English parliament offered a reward of 20,000 pounds to anyone who proved the existence of the fabled Northwest Passage to Asia. A British expedition set out in 1746 but failed to find it.

Then Franklin helped outfit the 60-ton schooner, Argo, which set forth in 1753 under the command of Capt. Charles Swaine. Sailing in March, the Argo encountered ice off Cape Farewell, but finally succeeded in entering Hudson's strait in the latter part of June.

Here the ice packs were so high that Swaine was forced to give up the attempt to penetrate further westward and to turn back to the open sea again. He then carefully examined the coast of Labrador before returning to Philadelphia where he arrived in November.

The next year he made a second voyage of discovery in the same vessel. Again he was unsuccessful and returned in October with the loss of three men, who were killed on the Labrador coast. But even though he had failed, he had won the right to the title of "First American Arctic Explorer" and, as Carl Van Doren, Franklin's latest biographer, says: "Here were the beginnings of a long chapter in the history of American adventure."

Mrs Mary Mutch and daughter, Ada, and son, Will, and Mr Claude Elliot, of Grundy Center, visited Sunday afternoon with Dr Dulmes and family Dick Dulmes accompanied them home for a visit with his grandmother at Grundy Center for a week

Mrs Lena Schroeder, accompanied by Mrs W F Pavey and Miss Alys Burz took Miss Marion Irvine, Klemme teacher, to her home near Traer, Saturday, where Mrs Schroeder visited Mrs Pavey visited at Mt Auburn and Miss Burz visited at Cedar Falls and Waterloo over the week end

Melvin Nordberger was at Des Moines on business Monday and stopped at the Veterans' Hospital for a visit with Ed Jacobs Melvin comes back the good report that Ed is now able to walk around and is feeling a lot better Ed was out of doors for a short time Sunday, the first time he has been out since going to the hospital last winter.

Rev Wessels, of Burt, Iowa, was visiting with old Klemme friends Monday Rev Wessels, now retired, was a former Methodist minister here, moving from Klemme in 1910. He was greatly impressed with the fine appearance of the town, the many new homes, the fine business section with a paved street and the general neat appearance of the town in general

Mr and Mrs. Walt Thada, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lewis and Miss Lenora Larson left early Sunday morning for McFarland Lake wilderness camp in northeastern Minnesota near the Canadian border for a week's outing and fishing The camp where they are located is about 35 miles north and east of Grand Marais, Minn We expect to hear of some big lake trout, as well as brook trout being caught by this Klemme delegation

Mr and Mrs R. A Jorgenson were at Clear Lake, Sunday, where they enjoyed a picnic dinner at the State Park with Mr and Mrs Lyle Liebendorfer, Miss Enid Forbes and Ray Jorgenson, Jr. of Mason City; the Misses Margaret Keuthe and Viola Hoppe, and John Jones of Waverly, and Bob Liebendorfer of Clinton. Miss Keuthe and Bob Liebendorfer will be married at Preston, Minn., on June 1st Bob is a nephew of Mrs. Jorgenson

The Klemme Fire Department answered a call early Monday evening when a fire broke out at the W F Pavey shop.

Mr. Pavey was doing some welding on a hay press wehn the machine caught afire and the blaze threatened his building. The hay press was pushed out into the street and the blaze put out with chemicals before the fire truck arrived.

"Bread Is Our Best Food"
MILK MAID BREAD is The Best Bread, Baked Fresh Daily by

Garner Bakery

OTTO LEHMAN, Prop.

Phone 134 Garner, Iowa

Since our civilization began, bread has been an important part of human food and, in recent years, physicians have endorsed it as a food of extreme value because of the high content of protein and carbohydrates which it possesses. Both of these elements are most essential to the health and well being of the human body. Both are obtained from wheat, however, and of equal importance is the fact that a very material change has been made in the ingredients of bread in the last 15 years. A large percentage of milk is now used in its composition, which, as recently as 15 years ago very little if any was included In fact this practise has increased the food value of the average loaf of bread from 25 to 50 per cent over that of a decade ago

THE GARNER BAKERY has kept pace with the baking business in both baking equipment and methods From the time the mixer starts until the bread is offered to the public, every effort is made to supply its patrons with a product made under the most satisfactory conditions possible They feature "MILK MAID" bread, made of purest and richest flour, milk and other ingredients, and contains a high content of milk They are just as expert in the production of cakes, pies, rolls and other bakery products which are baked daily and which are distinctive in both quality and taste

Try a loaf of "MILK MAID" tomorrow, and you'll be convinced of its superior quality

Bread is the best food—and "MILK MAID" is the best bread

For

DRUGS, PRESCRIPTIONS, COSMETICS, PAINT, GLASS and WALLPAPER

Few people realize the splendid service rendered by their druggist and the many hours of service available when their need is greatest. Show your appreciation by trying your druggist first.

Botsford Drug Co. carries a complete stock of drugs, stationery, cigars, school supplies, and all the other thousands of articles that you would expect to find in a first class drug store. Your druggist carries more individual items than any other mercantile establishment. While many articles carried by your druggist are very seldom used he stocks these items so that you may have access to them at any time when your need is greatest. Few people really appreciate the long hours and inviting efforts and care that your druggist must put in, in order to give adequate service.

BOTSFORD DRUG CO. IN BRITT is equipped to give you prompt and efficient service and prescription work is a specialty, great care being taken with each individual prescription. Every prescription is compounded from the purest drugs the market affords. Why not try this drug store first.

When meal time catches you in Britt stop at the Coffee Shop and enjoy a good meal at a most reasonable price. The Coffee Shop is known for good food—lunches, ice cream and beverages—a reputation sustained by the community as well as motorists and the traveling public. Here the management selects the food, scours the market and accepts only the best. You will find that the modern equipment and the utensils are kept scrupulously clean. There is never a question of sanitary laws at the Coffee Shop. The courtesy and attention of the attendants is a feature that receives more than passing notice from the patrons.

It is not necessary to order a whole meal—the patrons are assured of the same attention for a lunch as for a well appointed dinner here. It has been said that the way to man's heart is through his stomach. It makes no difference whether you live to eat or eat to live, you can be most conveniently served at the Coffe Shop in Britt. Therefore, we deem it most fitting and proper that we, in this business review, direct the special attention of the readers to THE COFFEE SHOP AT BRITT.

Premier Has Done the Lion's Share of Work

A photograph of the Australian premier with his wife and their children appeared recently in a Danish newspaper.

"Prime Minister Colonization was the title of the picture. The story below the scene went to say: "Australia is a very thinly populated country. The English government is therefore doing everything possible to promote colonization, and excellent work in this direction has already been accomplished by the Australian prime minister (Mr. Lyons), who is seen here with his wife and children."

He should have the prize award!

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's people of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely may be accepted as evidence of satisfactory results. And favorable public opinion supports the opinion of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorders and for relief of the pain and worry caused by such disorders.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide confidence than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

By Virginia Vale

THERE'LL be a bit of faking about Principal Production's "Way Down South," but it's not the fault of the producer, Sol Lesser. The story of the picture is laid in Louisiana; it deals with plantation life in pre-Civil war days. One of the high lights of the picture is a sugar cane festival, the autumn celebration that marks the completion of the harvesting season. Lesser ordered a freight car of Louisiana sugar cane, and thought things were all set, when the California bureau of agriculture stepped in and stopped it at the border. Seems that "foreign" cane can't be brought into the state.

So native cane from near Bakersfield will be used instead. It is neither so heavy nor so tall as the genuine Lousiana article, but the art director will take care of that.

Everything else about the picture is genuine. Bob Breen and the 50-piece Hall Johnson choir have been

Peggy Ann Garner, a six-year-old native of Los Angeles, won out over 100 other children in tests to find just the right child to play the part of Carole Lombard's daughter in "Memory of Love." She is inexperienced, but she has charm and her tests were good, so she was signed up to appear with Miss Lombard, Helen Vinson and Katherine Alexander, starting, perhaps, on the road to fame.

Of course, this matter of being a movie star isn't half so much fun for a child as other children are likely to think it is. Irene Dare, (another six-year-old) who is working in "Everything on Ice," can testify to that. She rises at 6:30 every morning, practices skating until eleven, then has a ballet lesson for an hour. After lunch she has a dramatic lesson, then another hour of skating practice, although she is an accomplished skater. Her spare time is filled with fittings for costumes and tests for hairdressing and make-up.

PAUL THINKS IN WORLD TERMS

LESSON TEXT—Romans 1:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.—Romans 1:16.

"I see chaos . . . only one thing will stop this coming chaos . . . a sweeping spiritual revival. Unless we have such a reawakening of religious forces we shall have a depression within the next 10 years that will make the last one look like a Christmas eve program." So wrote a prominent business advisor recently, as quoted in the Practical Commentary. His view is shared by others not only in business but in governmental circles. Religious leaders, some of whom until recently were presenting glowing pictures of the beautiful fellowship of the peoples of the earth in a modernistic faith which is far from the gospel, are now either silent or prophets of despair. Faithful witnesses for God have long seen the approach of this day, and like prophets of old have warned the people to turn to God. God still lives. The good news of the gospel has lost none of its redeeming power. The Light of the World is ready to shine in the darkness. Now is the time to preach

I. The Gospel (vv. 1-6).

Paul knew himself as the bond-slave of Jesus Christ, recognizing that he had been set apart by God for the exalted purpose of preaching the gospel. The word itself means "good news," that is, any good news. But because there is but one bit of good news in the world entitled to a place of supremacy, it has come to mean the good news of the grace of God in Christ Jesus.

Note the three points made by Paul. First, it is "the gospel of God," good news from God. "Humanly speaking, from every reasonable standpoint, God can have only one message for fallen, rebellious men—a message of judgment and death. If there is to be good news from God, then God Himself must undertake to change the relationship between man and Himself so that He will be able to bestow His richest blessings upon men. This is the good news, that God is undertaking to save men from the judgment and doom that man deserves" (Wilbur M. Smith).

Then observe that this salvation was prophesied beforehand (v. 2). This gospel we have is not something suddenly prepared to meet an emergency. It was prepared before the foundation of the world (Eph. 1:4; Rev. 13:8). And in verse 3 we read that the good news is "concerning his Son." He is the only Saviour and unless it is concerning Him that we are to speak, the news is not good news.

II. The Gospel for the Whole World (vv. 7-15).

Religious cults flourish only where conditions prosper them. "Buddhism, we are told, succeeds best in warm climates. Mohammedanism flourishes among people of low culture. The gospel of Christ breaks through all barriers of geography, climate and race, and has proved itself to be equally adapted to men of 'all nations' " (LeRoy M. Lowell).

Paul was called to preach to Greek and barbarian, to Jew and Gentile, to the wise and the unwise, to every living soul. What is more, he regarded himself as a debtor to them, and that is the spirit that brings forth a sacrificial determination to make Christ known to the ends of the earth. Let us recognize that we too are in debt to the whole world because we have the gospel that men need. Then in Christ's name let us as honorable men and women pay our debt. Perhaps some who would not wait overnight to pay the grocer for what he has delivered, have never felt the slightest compunction about standing in debt to all men for the preaching of the gospel.

III. The Gospel for the World's Salvation (vv. 16, 17).

Paul was not ashamed to take the gospel into the very heart of that ancient world, the magnificent city of Rome. Had he come with some new philosophy of life which had no power to transform men, he might well have been ashamed, but he knew that what he had would meet the deepest needs of humanity for deliverance from sin and sorrow and eternal death. He knew that the need of the "up and out" was the same as that of the "down and out" —namely, the redeeming grace of God—the gospel which is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (v. 16).

Why should we who follow Christ be so timid when Paul could be so bold? Certainly we should not speak to men about this good news in an apologetic, "hope-you-won't-mind" attitude. Men need Christ. We know Christ will meet their every need. Let us not be ashamed to tell them about Him in the home, in the church, in the office, on the street, in America, in China, in Africa, yes, even to the very ends of the earth.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT SEWING CIRCLE

LITTLE girls will look so sweet and feel so cool in No. 1738, which includes a simple little frock, gathered onto a shoulder yoke extended to cover the shoulders—and a fetching bonnet to shade the eyes. As you see from the diagram, this pattern is as easy as possible to make, and every little girl in your life should have half a dozen frock-and-bonnet styles like this, in different colors. Choose dotted swiss, lawn, linen or gingham.

Charming Apron-Frock.

A practical daytime dress that has a dainty look about it, as well as a very figure-flattering line, is yours in No. 1740. The fluttering sleeves, set in at a scalloped, slanting shoulder line, are as cool and unhampering as possible. The princess skirt, cut to a high waistline in the front, can be adjusted to just the snugness you want, because it ties with sash bows in the back. Such a pretty dress, and so easy to make,—of gingham, lawn, seersucker or calico.

The Patterns.

No. 1738 is designed for sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 2 requires 2⅞ yards of 35-inch material, panties included; 2½ yards of ricrac. For tie strings of ribbon on bonnet, 1 yard is required.

No. 1740 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 5⅓ yards of 35-inch material; 3 yards of braid or bias fold.

Farms — City Property
Clear Lake Cottages

A wealthy banker once told me the secret of his success. It was very simple and very obvious, and yet so few people follow the recipe. It was "Buy when everyone else is selling; sell when everyone else is buying." Did you ever stop to think that this applies very pointedly to land and city property.

There are unmistakable signs that point to 139 as a year in which a great amount of home buying and investing will be done. From many points of the country come reports that both farm lands and city properties have been almost at a standstill until recently. The result has been that the price of real estate has been, up until the last year, at a low point, but is steadily increasing. In other words, the public has been on the "selling side" and up to this time most of them are still on that side.

This is the time to buy a home or investment, while prices are still lower than in good buying times. Freeman & Kenyon has choice farms, city properties and Lake Side Cottages listed that are real values, and can be handled on reasonable terms, and will prove good investments. Now is the time to invest with safety. "There is no safer investment on earth than the earth itself." For quick action list your property with Freeman & Kenyon at Clear Lake.

llowing is the obituary read the pulpit by the Rev. Cal- Grosshuesch: alter Leo Thada, the sixth of Karl Thada and his wife, s (nee) Theeler, was born h 18th, 1884 near Ventura, . He received baptism in the John's Lutheran Church, and ig his boyhood days received religious instruction there. Af- completing his course in the ic school, he remained at e for a time and then went to ha, Nebraska, where he com- d a course in Automobile hanics.

Obituary

e then opened a garage at nton. He was married to Miss a Baughn Erickson of Mason , September 16th, 1915. One , a daughter, Jeanne, was to this union. After spending year on a farm at Shell Lake, , Mr. and Mrs. Thada return- to Thornton, where he again ged in the garage business. In they moved to a farm at Cen- Point, Iowa, and the following to Goodell, where Mr. Thada ucted a store for seven years. r spending another year on a at Thornton, he came to mme in 1930, where he conduct- a dry goods and grocery store the time of his death.

r. Thada was mechanically in- d, and spent much of his spare on various mechanical inven- s that he hoped to improve and ect. The most successful of e is a mouse trap, on which he red a patent, and which he ufactured here at Klemme ng the past year.

r. Thada was a successful bus- s man, well known and liked ughout our community. We say of him that: "He was ev- body's friend." As a member he Civic Club he proved his interest in every undertaking for the benefit of the community. He had positive religious convictions, was a friend of the church and gave liberally for the support of all christian causes. Those who knew Mr. Thada most intimately, admired most of all his spirit of forgiveness. "To forgive and to forget" whatever wrongs he suffered, seems to have been his life's motto.

Last Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Thada with friends motored to Hoveland, Minn., where they spent a few days at a Lake Camp. Mr. Thada enjoyed his outing, spending most of his time in his favorite passtime, namely fishing. On Friday morning, when about to leave for home, he suffered a sudden heart stroke, which proved fatal.

He died at the age of 55 years, 2 months and 8 days.

Surviving him and mourning his death are: his wife, his daughter, Mrs. Ed Thompson, Klemme; his aged mother, Mrs. Agnes Thada, Thornton; 3 sisters, Miss Natalie Thada Thornton; Mrs. Sylvia Barber, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Bertha Pollock, Garner; 3 brothers, Oscar Thada, Canada; Harold Thada, Thornton; Arthur Thada, Thornton, and many other relatives and friends.

One sister, Mrs. Hattie Bailey, preceded him in death.

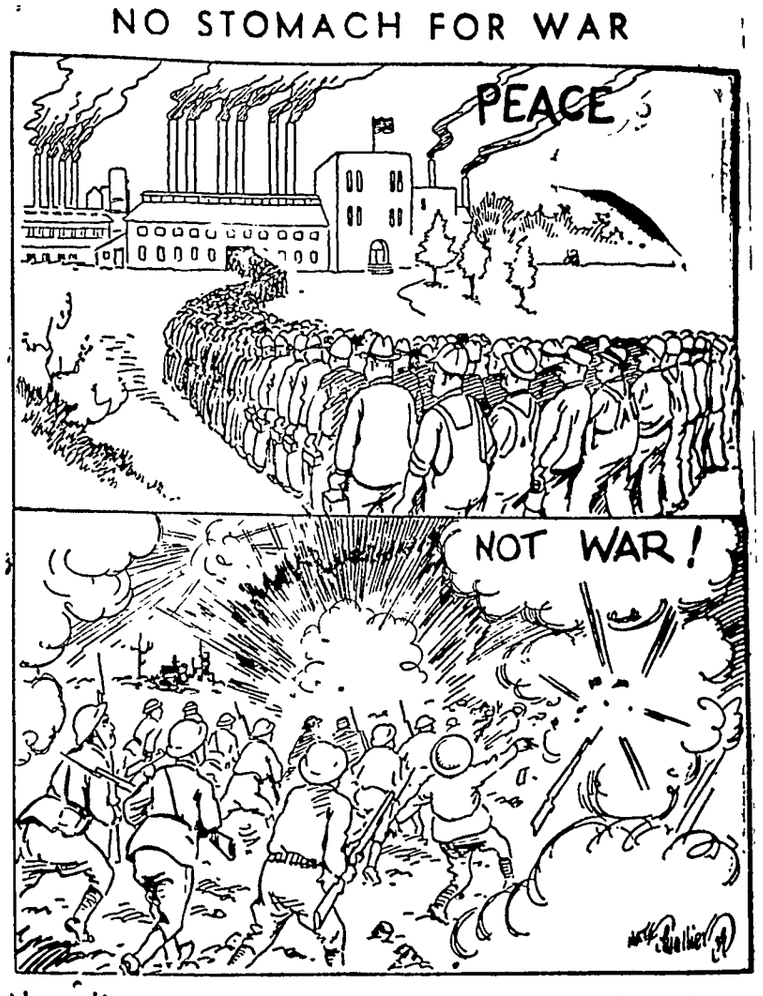
NO STOMACH FOR WAR



News Item: "I want to make it plain that American industry has no stomach for war."—Howard Coonley, President of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Rev. Zabilka Tells Of Union Of All Methodist Churches

One of the most significant events in American Protestantism took place at Kansas City, Mo., on May 10th when the three Methodist bodies—The Methodist Episcopal Church, The Methidist Episcopal Church South, and the Methodist Protestant Church were united and declared one, with the name, "The Methodist Church." The united church has a membership of approximately 8,000,000.

The Methodist Protestant was organized in 1828 and was a split off of the M. E. It was started by a group who felt the bishops had too much power and hence the Methodist Protestant never had bishops until the delegates from that church elected two at the Kansas City Conference.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South was a split from the M. E. in 1844 over the question of slavery. That church had bishops.

The uniting conference consisted of 900 delegates representing the three churches, but much of the work of union had been done by committees previously.

The new church will continue annual and general conferences. There were also set up six Jurisdictioal Conferences. Five are geographically located, Northeastern, Southeastern, North Central, South Central and Western. The sixth or Central is for Negroes. In this arrangement the Central Jurisdictional Conference will elct its own bishops (negroes), be governed by them and they will not need to compete with the white element.

The North Central Jurisdictional Conference will include the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota and will be supervised by six bishops. Bishop J. Ralph McGee will supervise Iowa and South Dakota and will live in Des Moines, Iowa. Each jurisdiction will elect its own bishops and they will serve in the jurisdiction electing them.

The outstanding element in the uniting conference was the spirit of good-will and compromise. Only once or twice during the whole session was there the least bit of uncharitableness. The sirit of unity was very noticeable throughout. The greatest achievement of the union of the three Methoist bodies, which has been going on for many years, was not merely bringing Methodists together but other religious groups also. The Evangelical and United Brethern Churches are well on the road to union. The Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches are negotiating union. Also the Presbyterian North and Presbyterian South. Several others have committees doing the ground work for union. There are also the echoes of a Methodist, Congregational, Presbyterian, and some smaller denominations union. Several of the Lutheran bodies are working on union also.

The creeds of the churches were harmonized so none needed to be changed in spirit. The united church took a strong stand against war, the liquor trafic and intemperance, and loose moral standards. It also condemned child labor, pledged support to social security, farmers' rights, and conscientious objectors to war.

Several matters were carried over to be decided by the first general conference of the united church which will meet next April.

Large Crowd Attended Annual Memorial Day Program Tuesday

AGED KLEMME RESIDENT DIED FRIDAY AT MASON CITY HOSPITAL

Funeral Services Held Monday For Mr. Kropp At Reformed Church

Funeral services were held Monday at 12:30 p. m. for Mr. Kropp, who died Friday at a Mason City hospital where he had been a patient for a few days Mr. Kropp, who was living with his daughter, Mrs. Rosendahl, fell last week Tuesday and fractured his hip, the accident attributing to his death.

Interment was in the Garner Cemetery and arrangements were in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service. Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch gave the funeral sermon at the Klemme Reformed Church and read the following obituary which tells of the life of Mr. Kropp:

Obituary

Henry Kropp was born on Christmas Day, December 25th, in the year 1844 at Luerdissen, Lippe Detmold, Germany. He received baptism and was confirmed in the Evangelical Church. During his youth he was apprenticed to a tailor and after he had served the required number of years, he found employment in various shops in Germany. At the age of 26 he came to America where he opened a shop at Holstein, Mo.

He was married to Mrs. Louise Henschen, Nov. 8th, 1872. Six children, four sons and two daughters were born, of whom one died in infancy and another son, August died in 1916.

In the year 1903 Mr. and Mrs. Kropp moved to Garner, where they lived on a farm with their son, August, for about three years. He then opened a tailor shop in Garner. (It might be of interest here to say that Mr. Kropp handtailored the suit which he now wears.) His wife preceded him in death in November, 1915.

After closing his shop in Garner, he made his home with his children. He spent about 3½ years with his daughter, Mrs. Lewis Cook, at New Knoxville, Ohio. Four years with his son, Carl, in Wisconsin, four years with his son, Paul at Leonard, Minn. During the last 11 years of his life he lived with his daughter, Mrs. Louise Rosendahl, at Klemme, Iowa.

Father Kropp was a loyal and faithful member of the church. His children had the privilege of a true christian home, and were instructed in the fundamentals of the christian religion. During the days of his extreme old age Father Kropp suffered under ailments so common to the aged. His sight and hearing gradually failed, until it was almost impossible to carry on a conversation with him. He longed to be released from the burdens of his life, and often prayed that God might call him to his heavenly home. On Tuesday morning, while arising, he fell and fractured his hip. He was immediately taken to the Mercy Hospital at Mason City, where he passed away at 10 o'clock Friday morning, May 26th, 1939.

He attained the age of 94 years, 5 months and 1 day.

Surviving him and mourning his death are his children: Mrs. Louise Rosendahl, of Klemme, Ia.; Carl Kropp, Clintonville, Wis.; Mrs. Lewis Cook, New Knoxville, Ohio; Paul Kropp, Leonard, Minn.; 8 grandchildren; 10 great grandchildren.

SPECIAL SERVICES IN PARK HONOR VETERANS

Lew Lewis One Of Two Remaining Civil War Veterans In County

The day was ideal for the holding of the annual Memoriad Day Services, and a large crowd gathered at the Park Tuesday to hear Rev W. E. Dye, of Goodell, deliver the address in which he paid special tribute to the veterans of past wars. The program was under the auspices of the Klemme American Legion and Auxiliary.

Civil War Veteran

Klemme was one of the few towns in the state that was privileged to be honored by having present a veteran of the Civil War. A place of honor was reserved at the speaker's stand for Mr. Lew Lewis, Klemme's Civil War veteran.

Mr. Lewis of Klemme, and Mr. A. A. Johnson of Corwith, are the only two remaining Civil War veterans in Hancock County.

Special music was provided by the Klemme School Band which appeared in natty uniforms of green and white, and directed by Mr. Batchelder.

Services at the cemetery were in charge of the Legion and Auxiliary. Graves were decorated by the Auxiliary ladies and the Legion gave their ritual, closing with a rifle salute.

Besides Civil War Veteran Lew Lewis, others of prominence in the parade included Spanish-American War Veteran Henry Jost, World War Veterans, Gold Star Mothers, Auxiliary Ladies, and Mrs. W. F. Missman, who saw service over seas as a nurse in the front lines.

RAIN, RAIN, PLENTY OF IT IN NORTH IOWA PAST WEEK

The long spell of dryness was finally broken in North Iowa last week and plenty of rain fell nearly every night and day from the middle of the week on. Crops are looking fine in North Iowa and there should be ample moisture to give the crops a good growing start.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Three Democratic Candidates Start Pre-Season Campaigns; Toe-Stepping Carefully Avoided

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

POLITICS:
Early Rumblings

From coast to coast extend the great rural regions whose political power has been recognized too late by many an office seeker. More vocal, more government-minded than their apathetic city cousins, America's small towns and farms write three-fourths of all letters to congressmen. They vent an opinion readily on such matters as those destined to determine 1940's election, namely: (1) foreign policy, and (2) agriculture, as related to the U. S. economic, labor and relief problems.

In 1938 serious Democratic reverses in farm states gave rise to a Republican hope: That the nation's midland vote pool will go G. O. P. in 1940. A Gallup poll recently confirmed it, giving Democratic hopefuls the jitters and forcing premature rumblings of next year's campaign. Nobody yet knows whether President Roosevelt will run again (31 per cent of U. S. voters would approve it) but this month three

CANDIDATE FARLEY

Democratic nomination campaigns are taking shape despite wise counsel that the administration had better settle immediately on a man who can be elected, rather than think only of the nominating convention. The campaigns:

Farley. At Mexico, Mo., America's smartest politician told a group of military students that "we are one of the few nations where a man's destiny is in his own hands." Postmaster General James A. Farley's destiny probably lay in the trip he was then taking, a gun-jumping, cross-continent tour in which he placed some 200 delegates under lock and key for himself or the man he chooses to run for President. Carefully avoided was any statement that might offend either Mr. Roosevelt or Vice President Garner, but Jim Farley was sizing up matters as a good politician should. A Roman Catholic probably could not be elected President, but Mr. Farley's 200 votes might easily make him vice presidential nominee.

Garner. Never has a southerner been elected President, the more so today because Negro voters almost furnish a balance of power in several northern states. But John Nance Garner's campaign manager has concentrated in south and southwest states to line up 200 delegates for the aging Texan whose intense popularity is the year's No. 1 political phenomenon. If a secret agreement exists between Democrats Farley and Garner, the tactics thus far bear it out. Each has studiously avoided an invasion of the other's stamping grounds, and though neither has spoken there is every indication that they see eye-to-eye. Both advocate economizing, and both looked with alarm on the President's "purge" last fall. Since a northern Catholic cannot hope to carry the South, and since a southerner might have trouble in the North, nothing could be more logical than a union of Garner and Farley forces.

McNutt. In 1940 a million college students will cast their first votes, and newly organized Student Opinion Surveys finds their choice (17.7 per cent) is Indiana's ex-Gov. Paul V. McNutt, now high commissioner to the Philippines. Meanwhile, from Indianapolis, Manager Frank McHale is busy broadcasting that Mr. McNutt is the only Democrat who can carry Indiana and is therefore a powerhouse throughout the northern states. Hurrying back home from his Pacific post, handsome Mr. McNutt is the first Democrat to actually open his 1940 campaign. Significantly, however, he has taken no cracks at Messrs Roosevelt, Farley or Garner; a vice presidency (which is the most likely berth for him) is no longer to be sneezed at after what is happening to Cactus Jack Garner.

BUSINESS:
Distribution

In 1870 about 75 per cent of U. S. workers were producing goods, the other 25 per cent distributing them. By 1930, reports the Twentieth Century Fund, production efficiency had increased so much that only 50 per cent of U. S. workers were needed for this phase. Meanwhile distribution had absorbed the other 25 per cent, accounting for half the jobs. A possible conclusion: Distribution may be costing too much. A possible rebuttal: Men must eat, and men kicked out of production by labor-saving machinery must turn to distribution jobs or starve. Though this raises per item cost to the consumer, every man benefits by a higher living standard.

Breaking down a sample year's total sales volume, Twentieth Century Fund found 1929's finished goods cost $66,000,000,000. Of this, $39,000,000,000 (or 59 cents on the dollar) went to distribution. This meant that production, which employs half the man power, gets less than half the revenue. Of the total 1929 distribution cost, $13,000,000,000 went to retail distribution, $7,000,000,000 to wholesalers, $9,000,000,000 to transportation, another $9,000,000,000 to manufacturers' distribution costs.

Smallest item of all was advertising, which (contrary to popular misconception) cost less than $1,000,000,000 and probably paid its way by giving consumers a better buy for their money.

EUROPE:
Peacemaker

"There are knots in European politics, but recourse to the sword is, perhaps, not necessary to cut them. Nevertheless, there is need that these knots be untied once and for all because sometimes a hard reality is preferable to a long uncertainty."

Benito Mussolini's statement referred specifically to two "knots," his own demands against France for concessions in the Mediterranean, and Germany's demands against Poland for Danzig and a slice of the Polish corridor. This offer to resort to conciliation in place of war gave heart to France and Britain, but they probably forgot that Signor Mussolini's speech fitted perfectly into a chain of events which matches with the pattern created last autumn at Munich.

IL DUCE

At that time it was Mussolini who "counseled" Der Fuehrer to talk things over at Munich. Hitler won concessions and Italy's reward was German support in Spain and Albania. This spring Il Duce again appears as Europe's peacemaker just a few weeks after the Rome-Berlin axis has been cemented into a military pact. Frightened France, realizing her Mediterranean argument with Italy is one of the "knots," will probably untie it and persuade Britain to appease once more by conceding Germany's right to Danzig.

Today's most likely solution of the Danzig problem is a plebiscite with League of Nations sanction, in which Danzig's 96 per cent German population will make quick work of an international crisis.

Trend

How the wind is blowing . . .

VOTING—Los Angeles' Judge Ben Lindsey recommends voting age should be reduced from 21 to 18 because today's youth "is the most moral . . . intelligent . . . hopeful the world has ever seen."

EXPORTS—First quarter U. S. armament exports totaled $20,405,195, which was 42 per cent more than last year's similar period. Reason: World preparedness.

AGRICULTURE—AAA is making aerial photographs of 215,192 acres of farm land in 16 central and western states to check farmer compliance on crop control programs.

RELIGION — A new Austrian Nazi order requires official sanction of all personnel changes in Catholic church clergy, also reserving the right to pass on who shall study for the priesthood or enter a religious order.

TAXATION:
Rehash

No. 1 surprise of this season's economy minded congress is that the senate should vote $1,218,666,000 for farm purposes. To the White House—not economy minded—this was also a surprise, so much that administration pressure will probably make congress "buy" its farm appropriation by sitting all summer to figure out new taxes. Reason: The President charges congress broke its promise not to vote any special appropriations without providing new taxes to meet the cost. Last year's parity payments of $212,000,000 (compared with the senate's current $225,000,000) were voted under similar circumstances and left a big hole in Mr. Roosevelt's budget.

Capitol Hill's two major tax figures are Mississippi's Sen. Pat Harrison, chairman of the upper house finance committee, and North Carolina's Rep. Robert Doughton, whose ways and means committee must originate all tax legislation. Generally speaking they agree with the President on one fundamental: That levies on low incomes shall not be raised. They therefore agree also that any tax revision this session must be merely a rehash of present upper-bracket levies. Less mutual is another White House principle, that government income must not be lowered. But congress, having invited deficit with its farm bill, has little choice. Revenue can hardly be lowered now.

With several weeks' debate still ahead if tax revision comes this session (it should, because corporate taxes yielding $1,300,000,000 expire next December) some solution like this is possible: Abandonment of the undistributed profits tax and retention of capital stock and excess profits levies; creation of a flat 18 per cent corporate levy instead of one varying, as at present, from 16½ to 19 per cent; lower rates for corporations making $25,000 or less. Proponents expect the rehash would touch business for $2,000,000 a year more than at present—not much in actual cost but a lot in principle when next year's election is considered.

NAVY:
Beef Stew

Fresh Argentine beef is barred from the U. S. by sanitary regulations, which is one major reason why Argentina disrupted the Pan American conference at Lima last December. But canned beef ("willy") is not barred. President Roosevelt made news recently by asking congress to permit the navy to buy its canned beef from Argentina at 15 cents a pound, 8 cents less than American beef. Moreover, he said, the Argentine product is better.

At Buenos Aires, Argentine Foreign Minister Jose Cantilo thought Mr. Roosevelt's taste for South American beef was "a fine gesture which may become an important precedent in friendly relations between the two countries." But at Washington a congress tremendously conscious of the farm vote thought otherwise. Discovering a cause celebre, Illinois Rep. Leo Allen raised visions of congressmen smacking their lips over a beef-tasting contest. Said he: "Many of us believe American beef has no superior. For that reason I am offering a resolution for a committee of five to investigate and determine whether Argentine beef is better."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—An ecstatic young newspaper woman, reporting on Dr. Herbert Feis of the state department, averred that his dreamlit eyes "reflected the soul of a young Shelley." He may look that way, but the chances are that he is thinking of rubber and tin.

His Eyes Reflect Poetry; Mind on Rubber and Tin

John Masefield had some such thoughts in mind when he wrote "Cargoes." This poet, however, scans only trade balances, and his dreams are precise and statistical. Dr. Feis is economic adviser to the state department, and it was he who schemed the barter deal by which we would acquire needed rubber and tin and get rid of the necklace of millstones hung around Uncle Sam's neck in the form of that government-owned surplus of 11,000,000 bales of cotton.

The news from London is that the barter deal is under way, Prime Minister Chamberlain having informed parliament that negotiations have been opened. Wheat also will be included in the bargaining, as England needs both wheat and cotton as much as we need rubber and tin. Here may be a working commodity axis, which Machiavelli so vehemently declared was always more important in the long run than any political axis. And, incidentally, Dr. Feis has read Machiavelli.

He is a hold-over from the Hoover regime, appointed to his present post by Secretary Stimson, who was impressed with the insight and information in Dr. Feis' book, "Europe the World's Banker." He has been used by the department in clarifying confusion and in boiling down vague policies to definite procedure.

Dr. Feis is a New Yorker with a Harvard Ph. D. He was professor of economics at the University of Kansas and the University of Cincinnati and director of research for the council of foreign relations. Like many men given to meditation, he smokes a pipe, blows rings and comes out of the haze with an idea or hunch as sharply defined as if it had been cut by a lapidary.

PHILOSOPHERS getting on in life are apt to think in T-time, as contrasted with our workaday Tau time, both of which are currently explained by E. A. Milne, the distinguished British mathematician. T-time, like tea-time, is stretchable, unlike the swingtime or springtime of youth—all of which was expounded in different terms by the aging Montaigne—and in this time zone there may be written off, or at least discounted, much imminent disaster; and somehow in this temporal king's-x irresistible bodies may meet immovable masses without any bystanders getting hurt. I have known wise old gentlemen who carried their T-time in one pocket and their Tau-time in the other.

Hopes to Bring Human Variables Into Uniformity

Such is the 80-year-old (in Tau time) Lucius N. Littauer, whose $3,000,000 Littauer center is dedicated at Harvard. His foundation was established to "bring about a better understanding among mankind."

It was Mr. Littauer who, as a congressman from New York, sponsored and established the United States bureau of standards. It worked out nicely. Uniformity in machine appliances and spare parts was easily attained. Moving from machines into social adaptations and adjustments, Mr. Littauer found human variables could not—as yet—be calculated like metal variables. Hence his new bureau of human standards at Harvard.

Like the late Chauncey M. Depew, he has been honored by a statue in his own town, during his lifetime. The town is Gloversville, N. Y., where, after his graduation from Harvard, he picked up his father's glove manufacturing business. His later years have been absorbed in his manifold philanthropies, to which he has given many millions of dollars. Thinking in Mr. Milne's long stretch of time, he is calmly assured that, in due time, all will be well with the world, but that "we must oppose absolutism in any guise, from any source."

His father, a native of Breslau, Germany, passed on to him a heritage of Carl Schurz liberalism—which perhaps could be fittingly measured against Fritz Kuhn's importation. Just in passing, he played on Harvard's first football team and rowed on its first crew—back in his Tau-time days.

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Role of Phosph In Nutrition; Tells Where to Obtain This Miner

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE are at least 11 different mineral salts which essential to the structure or functioning of the hu body. But of these, only four—calcium, phosphorus, and iodine—require the careful consideration of the ho maker. That is because a diet which furnishes adeq amounts of these four will automatically provide the oth But when the diet is deficient in any one of these four m erals, disastrous consequences may result.

It is therefore of the utmost importance that every homemaker should know something of their functions, and what foods supply them. In this article, we shall deal specifically with phosphorus.

Versatile Phosphorus

It has been said that if the biographies of the elements could be written, that of phosphorus would be the most interesting of all. That is because there are 14 different ways in which compounds of phosphorus may function in the body. In fact, it is doubtful if any other inorganic element enters into such a diversity of compounds or plays an important part in so many functions.

This mineral is indispensable for all the active tissues of the body and likewise helps in regulating the neutrality of the blood. It is found abundantly in nerve tissue.

Needed for Teeth and Bones

Its most significant role, however, is to team with calcium in giving rigidity to the bones and teeth. Approximately 90 per cent of the total phosphorus of the body and 99 per cent of the calcium are found in the bones and teeth.

Both these minerals are required in generous amounts, but almost twice as much phosphorus as calcium should be supplied every day. Moreover, children should have about one-and-one-half times as much phosphorus as adults, to meet the requirements for growth.

The muscles and soft tissues need phosphorus as well as the bones, and in the dietary of the child, they must share with the bones, the phosphorus that is provided by the food. Hence, the greater need for this mineral during childhood.

Phosphorus and Rickets

If a child's diet is deficient in phosphorus or calcium, or if conditions are not favorable for their proper absorption, rickets will occur. This devastating nutritional disease may result in deformities of the chest and pelvic bones, as well as the more familiar bow legs and knock-knees.

Investigators have spent many years in discovering how to prevent and cure this disease which has made life miserable for so many children and which has far-reaching effects that carry over into later life. For example, adults who have bow-legs or a pigeon breast as a result of childhood rickets, are always self-conscious because of their defects. And motherhood may be far more difficult for young women whose vic bones were deformed by ets in their early years.

A Low-Phosphorus Die

It was found that rickets be associated with a low-phosp us diet, even when the cal content is high. And investiga also determined that there seasonal tide of blood phosp which corresponds to the am of available sunlight. This l the realization that sunli which we now know helps the to manufacture vitamin closely related to the proper lization of phosphorus. And it is well established that ri can be prevented, or cured, diet containing liberal amoun phosphorus, calcium and vit D. Vitamin D can be obta from direct sunshine, but w this is not available in adeq amounts, cod-liver oil, irradi foods, or those fortified wi vitamin D concentrate will su this necessary substance.

Make Use of Sunlight

As we approach the season the greatest amount of suns is available, homemakers sh see to it that not only the dren, but every member of family spend as much time possible in the sunlight. This help to promote the proper uti tion of phosphorus and calc And both teeth and bones benefit, as well as the gen health.

Where to Find Phosphor

Every homemaker should quaint herself with the foods supply phosphorus most abund ly, so that she will be prepare include this mineral in the every day. Egg yolk and d beans are both valuable sou of phosphorus. So are whole g cereals and lean meats. In cereals and meats have thi common—both are rich in p phorus and deficient in calci Whole grain breads are like important for their phosph content. And on a percentage sis, cheese ranks very high carrier of this mineral.

Cocoa also contains a large centage, though it must be membered that, as a rule, small quantities of cocoa are sumed at one time. Many including almonds, peanuts, cans and walnuts, furnish sig cant amounts. And this min is found in dried fruits such raisins, figs and prunes, and much smaller quantities in v tables, such as spinach, cauli er, string beans, carrots and b sels sprouts.

Milk supplies phosphorus, tho not in such generous amounts calcium. However, if you fo the rule of a quart of milk d for every child and a pint for e adult, you will contribute ma ally to the phosphorus and cium content of the diet.

Cup presented by officers of the Royal Welch Fusiliers to officers of the United States Marine Corps in memory of their service together during the Boxer Rebellion.

From August, 1937, until February of last year the same Second battalion of the Royal Welch and the Fourth regiment of the Marines were stationed along Soochow creek, bordering the foreign settlements of Shanghai to guard British and American citizens and property when the Japanese attacked that city.

Revolutionary Service.

The close association of these two military units in 1900 and again in 1937-38 is in striking contrast to the first contact of the Fusiliers with American men-at-arms. That took place more than 150 years ago and they were then enemies instead of friends. For the Royal Welch were among the troops sent to America in 1775 to help subdue the rebellious English colonies on this continent and they served in almost every major engagement of the Revolution, beginning with the Battle of Lexington and ending with the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

Among the defenses erected by that ill-fated British leader, when he was penned up in the Virginia seaport, was a star-shaped fortification on the right of the British line. It is pointed out today to visitors to the Colonial National Historical park as the "Fusiliers Redoubt" because it was held by a remnant of the Royal Welch Fusiliers (who had been decimated during the seven years of warfare in America) assisted by a few British marines. They held this redoubt against three attacks by Washington's French allies under Count Rochambeau and after the siege the French generals gave their unstinted praise to the stubbornness of the resistance which they had encountered there. They could scarcely believe that so few men in this fortification had been able to hold in check their superior numbers. Lord Cornwallis, also, in his official report of the capitulation, paid a glowing tribute to the courage and bulldog tenacity of the Fusiliers.

If the proposed memorial mentioned at the beginning of this article is erected it will be placed here. The first suggestion for such a memorial came from the major of the American Marines who won the admiration and respect of the Fusiliers during the Boxer rebellion—Littleton Waller Tazewell Waller. Major Waller, who was a Virginian, rose to the rank of major general in the Marine corps before he was retired. Before his death several years ago he suggested that the association of the Fusiliers and the Marines, representative forces of the defenses of the two leading democracies of the world, be immortalized in a permanent memorial and that an appropriate place for it would be at Yorktown.

Gen. Richards' Speech.

His suggestion was repeated and given emphasis in an address made this year by Brig. Gen. George Richards, United States Marine corps (ret.) speaking before the annual meeting and dinner of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the State of Virginia, held on February 22 in honor of Washington's birthday, he reviewed the history of the association of these two military units, recalled General Waller's suggestion that the memorial be erected on the field of Yorktown and concluded:

"When, 13 or more years ago, that proposal was made, international politics with the problems of statesmanship—a field at all times not the responsibility of the active soldier—presented not the clear outlines that are today apparent to the vision of our people. This condition then led the followers and associates of General Waller to turn elsewhere lest that memory be lost. We appealed to the talent of the late John Philip Sousa. At the spring dinner of the Gridiron club in Washington, in 1930, there came from the gifted baton of that great composer . . . the last of his many, many military marches, the very last: "The March of the Royal Welch Fusiliers," dedicated to the Marine corps. As the strains of that martial music faded away, from the lips of the President of the United States came his story of the siege of Tientsin, the burden of care and anxiety lifted from the shoulders of that young mining engineer and his associates, how from across 10,000 miles of sea, the might of two great nations had reached afar to say their people in China should not die.

History Repeats Itself.

"That recent reunion at Shanghai of last year—history repeating itself with its revival of the recollections of the like service in North China of 1900—has recalled to the veteran officers of that campaign the almost forgotten and unfulfilled wish of the late Maj. Gen. Littleton Waller Tazewell Waller of Virginia. These veterans wish that under your auspices—under the aegis of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution of his native state, the proposal of one of Virginia's distinguished soldiers, be submitted for the reaction of America's public.

"It is not sufficient that that memory of a common service be preserved only in martial music and solely to the ear of the soldier. It deserves now to be perpetuated in the wider field—to the eye of the public in the chosen way of that departed leader of ours. American public opinion, it is confidently believed, will support the project. More, in its larger sense—in its wider import, measured by the trend and aspect of these times—our people will applaud our effort."

The Royal Welch Fusiliers has one of the most interesting histories of any regiment in the British army. It dates back 250 years—to 1689 when, after the bloodless revolution of 1688 forced James II to flee to France, leaders in the English parliament asked William of Orange, president of the Dutch republic, whose wife, Mary, was the eldest daughter of the deposed King James, to ascend the throne of England. One condition was imposed upon the new ruler. The throne was to be assumed in the name of Mary but William was to administer the affairs of the country.

So the reign of William and Mary began. One of the first acts of the new monarchs was to grant to the people of England, the Bill of Rights.

To protect the liberties granted to his people, William III raised immediately an army of 25 regiments of foot (infantry). One of these, the Twenty-third, was enlisted along the border counties of Wales among the descendants of the ancient Britons who were followers of the Welsh chieftains, Llewellen and his brother, David. It was first known as Herbert's Twenty-third Foot, after Lord Herbert of Chirbury, who raised the regiment, and his cousin, Col. Charles Herbert, who first commanded it.

Baptism of Fire.

When King William took the field with his new army against the forces of James II and his ally, Louis XIV of France, which had been raised to restore the deposed English king, Herbert's Twenty-third Foot had its baptism of fire under the eyes of King William at the Battle of the Boyne on July 1, 1690. Its record of gallantry on that historic field has continued unbroken for 250 years. In recognition of its services in Marlborough's campaigns against the French in the early Fighteenth century, the prince of Wales, later King George I, conferred upon the regiment the title of "The Prince of Wales Own Royal Regiment of Welch Fusiliers," a title which has been shortened to the better known Royal Welch Fusiliers.

Like other British regiments, the Royal Welch have what they call their "battle honours"—names of the most conspicuous battles in which they served emblazoned upon their regimental standards. Among them are Corunna, where the fallen Sir John Moore was "buried darkly at dead of night"; Lucknow, with its memory of the Highlanders, the MacGregors and the Campbells and the thrilling rescue; Blenheim, Inkerman, Ramilles, Waterloo, Oudenarde and nearly a score of others—all bright pages in England's military history.

Although the Royal Welch served throughout the American Revolution there are no names of battles on the soil of the United States emblazoned on the regiment's banner. Ask a Fusilier today why and his reply will reflect the sentiment which makes appropriate the proposed memorial: "Tradition says our predecessors of those days did not wish the memory of our American battles recalled—that is all we know."

Although the United States Marines are a much younger military unit than the Royal Welch Fusiliers, they, too, have a long and honored tradition back of them. The Marine corps is the oldest active armed force in the United States, antedating both the army and the navy. It was organized by the Continental congress on November 10, 1775, nine months before the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Marine Traditions.

The Marines, like the Fusiliers, preserve their traditions by certain symbols or customs. One of these symbols is the sword which their officers wear. It is described in the regulations as "one with a Mameluke hilt, curved or scimitar blade and bright metal scabbard." It came about in this way:

In 1805 a young Virginian named Presley Neville O'Bannon, first lieutenant in the Marine corps, with Midshipman Peck, a sergeant and six privates from the Marines, formed a part of the motley army of Greeks, Turks and Mameluke Arabs which William Eaton, President Thomas Jefferson's naval agent in the Mediterranean, led against the stronghold of Derna, held by Yusuf, bashaw of Tripoli. Yusuf, who had deposed his brother, Ahmet, had been preying upon American commerce and enslaving American sailors. Eaton's plan was to help restore to the Tripolitan throne the former bashaw, Ahmet, who would thereafter respect American rights in the Mediterranean.

Young O'Bannon took part in that epic march of 600 miles across African deserts and in the storming of the fortress of Derna where for the first time in history the Stars and Stripes were hoisted over an Old world fortress. In appreciation of his services, Ahmet presented O'Bannon with a sword with a Mameluke hilt and this sword became the model for the weapon which has been the symbol of authority for Marine officers from that time on. O'Bannon's exploit also is memorialized in the first line of the famous "Hymn of the Marines."

Immortalized by a Dam

BONNEVILLE dam in the Columbia river perpetuates the memory of an adventurous explorer who was both a great success and a great failure. In 1832 French-born Capt. Benjamin Bonneville of the United States army obtained a leave of absence to engage in a fur trading expedition on condition that he explore the trans-Missouri West and obtain information concerning the Indians, the topography of the country and its economic possibilities. Two years later he set out at the head of a party of 110 men.

Commercially his venture was a complete failure. He built forts in such poor locations that the frontiersmen called them "Fort Nonsense." Some were so high in the mountains that they were cut off from the outside by the first snows of winter. But his expedition was successful in that he explored the route through South Pass for wagon trains and mapped the passage of the Columbia river through the Cascade mountains. Moreover he was an able military leader for he did not lose a single man during all his perilous journey through the Indian-infested wilderness.

After his return to the East he met Washington Irving at the home of John Jacob Astor and the result was the book "The Adventures of Captain Bonneville" by that famous writer. The book was a "best seller" of its time but it did not help Bonneville's reputation greatly. He had long overstayed his leave of absence and when President Jackson reinstated him as a captain in 1836 many people protested that Bonneville should have been dismissed from the service instead.

Bonneville proved them wrong by his conduct during the Mexican war, which won for him a citation for gallantry in action. In 1852 he became commandant at Fort Vancouver which stood 30 miles down the river from the dam that now bears his name. He was brevetted a brigadier general in 1869 and died in St. Louis in the spring of 1878.

'A Message to Garcia'

OUT in California lives an 82-year-old retired army officer whose name was once on every American's lips. He is Col. Andrew Summers Rowan, the man who carried "a message to Garcia."

In 1898 war with Spain was imminent and President McKinley wanted to know if General Garcia, commander of the Cuban insurgents, would co-operate with the American forces if an army was sent there. The man chosen to find out was young Lieutenant Rowan.

Rowan proved that the confidence of his superiors was not misplaced. Making his way through the steaming, insect-infested jungle, drinking germ-filled water, living on such food as he could find and in constant danger of capture and execution by the Spaniards as a spy, Rowan found Garcia, got the information he sought and safely made an equally perilous return trip.

Rowan was taken to the White House where he received the thanks of the President and promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel of volunteers. But the thing which made him famous was an editorial, written by Elbert Hubbard, for his magazine, the Philistine, the following year. This editorial, published under the title of "A Message to Garcia," was translated into 20 languages, reprinted all over the world and is one of the best known pieces of English prose ever written.

As for the man who inspired it, not until 1922 did he receive public recognition from his country in the form of the Distinguished Service Cross for carrying the "message to Garcia."

Death Valley Samaritan

LOU WESTCOTT BECK went into Death Valley to seek wealth but almost perished. He stayed there to devote his life to saving others.

Death Valley of the days before good roads and tourist facilities was well named. Hundreds of American adventurers never returned from it. A barren waste with trails that led nowhere, and alive only with crawling lizards and darting poisonous snakes, Death Valley was a treacherous trap baited to lure adventurers with promises of gold.

Beck became known as the "Good Samaritan of Death Valley," piling up rocks and putting signs on them directing prospectors to water holes. He went out searching for those who were known to be lost and guided them to safety.

For 13 years, aided only by Rufus, his Newfoundland dog, Beck braved the hardships of the Colorado and Mojave deserts, as well as Death Valley, and saved between 300 and 400 lives. In 1917, although warned not to by his dog, Beck drank from an infected spring and never recovered from the resulting illness.

Although comparatively unknown today, Lou Westcott Beck is probably one of the most self-sacrificing of all the great American adventurers.

Ink Spots And Spatters

By Jergie

SURE, WE ARE PROUD!

In the Mason City Globe-Gazette, of Monday, May 29, Earl Hall in his "The Day's Bouquet," has the following to say:

"To RAY JORGENSON, JR., OF KLEMME—for winning an appointment to Annapolis. Those who have watched this lad's fine performance and admirable sportsmanship on the basketball court will wish him well as he transfers from the local junior college to the midshipman's academy. If his father, "Jergie" Jorgenson of the Klemme Times, is just a bit visibly proud of his junior, far be it from this department to criticize him."

Thanks for the bouquet, Earl! You bet we are proud of Ray, Jr. for winning the appointment to the United States Naval Academy. And we want to thank all our good friends for their untiring efforts to help Ray Jr. get the appointment, which was given him by Hon Fred C. Gilchrist, of Laurens It would be fine if more boys could be given the same honor, but unfortunately, the appointments are limited to but a few Iowa boys each year.

I-S-A-S

OUR BOUQUET TO THE VETERANS

Our own "bouquet for today" goes to Civil War Veterans Lew Lewis, of Klemme, and A. A. Johnson, of Corwith, the only two living Civil War Veterans in Hancock County. These communities are indeed fortunate to still have with them representatives of the Civil War. . . let us all pause and silently salute these fine old gentlemen!

I-S-A-S

THE FISHING BATTLE IS DEFINITELY OFF

Earl Hall of the Globe Gazette sort of pulled in his horns on the fishing duel. . . so the battle is definitely off and the fishing will be done on friendly terms.

Friday morning of this week, weather permitting, this scribe; Earl Hall, and Frank Knutson, of Clear Lake, will go forth in quest of the finny tribe. Frank will be the referee and will disqualify any blows below the belt, should Earl and this scribe tangle over any fish that might be foolish enough to strike on printer's ink! Frank also will see to it that Earl doesn't use more than two lines . . . Earl may resort to underhandedness in trying to outdo the "Ink Spatterer" and we can't take any chances!

Anyway. . . we have both decided that raw fish aren't so good to eat. . . so Earl will bring a can of sardines. . . just in case!

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

YEAR OLD PROMISES

There is a type of politician who considers a political promise a year old a dead horse. But Iowa Republicans, chastened by a six year famine, now realize how well voters remember and do not propose to risk their present position by taking platforms and promises lightly. The platform as adopted at the state convention in July of last year begins with a statement "more than three times as many people are on the state payroll in and around the state house as during the last Republican administration." The platform further proposes to "simplify the various departments" to "eliminate duplication of effort." Reorganization and consolidation now concluded or under way has already reduced the number on the state payroll to near the 1931 figure. And the process continues.

TAXATION

In a plank referring to taxation and the totals which have increased so rapidly from 1932 on, the Republican platform accepted "the responsibility and pledge ourselves to launch an immediate program both in the legislature and by administrative efficiency whereby this burden will be substantially decreased." This pledge deplored needless spending of money and demanded full value for every dollar expended. This has been accomplished even beyond early hopes in the consolidation of departments and the sharp curtailment of unnecessary jobs. Tendencies toward lower taxes include an estimated $500,000 saving in consolidations alone; farm-to-market roads without increased levies; an annual cut of $75,000 in emergency conservation costs; a million dollar saving in highway commission administration and engineering costs; launched constitutional amendment to prohibit diversion of motor taxes to other than highway uses; plugged loopholes in cigarette law which was costing state about $800,000 annually; made certain county bounties optional; set aside part of use tax collections to guarantee homestead tax credit; arranged for use of part of beer tax receipts for state relief purposes; took a great many unneeded state cars off the road, cut mileage allowance from five cents to four cents per mile and reduced the per diem expense accounts of state employees who hold travelling positions.

AGRICULTURE

Jealous of its traditional role as a champion of agriculture the Republican platform refers to "security of opportunity for that one-fourth of the people who produce the nation's food supply" as a "national, non-political, economic and social problem." Accepting in principle soil conservation and sensible control methods, the Republican party in Iowa has in the past and will in the future resist obvious attempts to place the entire burden of crop control upon Iowa and her neighboring states to the unfair advantage of other sections.

PROMISES REMEMBERED

There need be no apology—yet—for Republican progress. Campaign promises have been recognized. A definite, workable program of farm-to-market roads has been promulgated. Veterans have been assured full homestead tax credit in addition to his soldiers' exemption and are permitted to specify property to which exemption shall apply. Motor transportation for hire has been scanned in accordance with the platform pledge that it be studied in "it's relation to agriculture, industry and other forms of transportation." Licensing and regulatory laws have been strengthened to eliminate the chiseler and recover for the state huge sums heretofore lost. Legitimate local truckers benefit by an extensive overhauling of motor transportation regulations. There has been no inclination to overlook promises given solemnly and undertaken courageously. Most important of all, this has been accomplished without an increase in the state tax levy.

TAG ENDS

Highway patrolmen will welcome this. . . . . heavy boots and tight uniforms for summer will soon give way to dressy slacks and oxfords. . . . . the executive council is not confining its investigation to the lease for the liquor warehousee and Store No. 1 in Des Moines but to all liquor store leases in the state. . . . . several Iowa buck privates may wake np one of these days to discover themselves colonels. . . . . Governor Wilson may name the heads of the several veterans' organizations (American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Spanish-American War vets, G. A. R., etc) as members of his military staff. . . . . current Federal debt total $40,204,272,046.70 . . . . . your share $309.26.

Gambler at Cards Is Most Superstitious of Persons

There is no more superstitious person than the gambler at cards. Where skill is often at a discount and chance at a premium, the gambler seeks every means to attract to himself the fairies of fortune and to ward off the imps of ill-luck.

Should he drop a card to the floor all the cards will run against him; a cross-eyed player at the table will be the sole winner, he that lends money to a fellow player will win, but he that borrows will lose. To sing while playing cards is to sing away one's luck; to walk round one's seat and then sit on a handkerchief is to invite good fortune

The gruesome superstition, widely held at Monte Carlo, that all who sit down to play immediately after some unfortunate loser has committed suicide will win, stretches back to heathen days, when every disaster was supposed to be followed by a compensating piece of good fortune.

The Nine of Diamonds is called the Curse of Scotland, and no gambler from north of the Tweed likes to find this ill-omened card in his hand. One explanation is that it got its name from the fact that the order for the massacre of Glencoe was signed by the earl of Stair, whose family shield bore nine lozenges resembling diamonds.

Song Birds, Game Birds Fear Enemy of Air, Old Jim Crow

Song birds, game birds and waterfowl fear a black enemy of the air—Jim Crow, the thief. No sportsman ever has spoken a good word for this bird The farmer has no use for him In fact, he doesn't seem to have a friend in the world.

But why all this murderous attack on old Jim Crow? Some persons believe he shouldn't be killed, for, after all, he is just one of Nature's "bad boys" trying to get along. He has at least one useful habit, destroying cutworms, white grubs and grasshoppers. But even the persons who plead his case have no respect for him. He has been caught in the act of robbing the nests of birds and waterfowl in the nesting season, standing by and watching for his chance to destroy when mother bird or duck leave for drink or food. Jim Crow and his flock have been accused of following the great flights of ducks on the return to the breeding grounds of Canada, taking an "inventory" of all nests made, and later putting on an act of destruction.

Jim Crow's fate is in the hands of a "jury" of thousands of men. Each holds a shotgun.

Museums of the World

New York has its Museum of Self-Made Men, relics of the pioneer builders of America. Parents take their young hopefuls there to show them what can be done if they are ambitious—and lucky London has a little private museum of menu cards, including that of the dinner given in a Belgrade restaurant for the officers who were to go off directly afterwards to assassinate King Alexander and Queen Draga. Oddest of all, perhaps, says London Answers Magazine, is the Rat Legend museum in Hamelin, Germany, concerned with lore of that Pied Piper who took so ruthless a revenge on local parents for stingily dodging his promised payment for luring out all the rats with his magic pipe. Drawings, cartoons, and articles from all over the world are treasured there.

Silk From Shellfish

The finest and most expensive gloves in the world are not woven from silk or from any fibre that comes from a plant, but from the fine hairlike excrescence of a Mediterranean shellfish. It is by means of these that it manages to cling to and crawl along rocky projections, says London Tit-Bits Magazine. The hair is extremely fine, golden in color and very strong, and such a large amount is required for a single pair of gloves that gathering the material alone is an expensive business and only the wealthy can afford the luxury of such gloves. This substance is known all over southern Europe as "golden fleece," and some go so far as to say that it was in search of this kind of fleece that Jason of old sailed the seas.

The Gorgons

In classical mythology the Gorgons were three sisters, Stheno, Euryale, and Medusa, the last named alone being mortal. Each hair was a serpent, their bodies were scaly, their hands of brass, their teeth like tusks, and their glance would turn a mortal to stone Perseus was sent to kill Medusa and bring back her head. This he accomplished by watching her reflection in a mirror, thus avoiding the deadly glance. He gave the head to Minerva, who wore it on her shield, turning to stone those she wished to destroy.

German Potash

The first recorded use of German potash by an American agricultural experiment station was in 1872 on one of the experimental farms of the Pennsylvania State college, says Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. For nearly 45 years Germany furnished America, as well as the rest of the world, practically all of its agricultural potash.

CATTLE PRICES HAVEN'T DROPPED FOR 16 MONTHS

May is the sixteenth month of rising or steady cattle prices, report agricultural economists at Iowa State College. It is the sixteenth month since a major downturn in cattle prices. This is the longest period of its kind on record. The next longest was in 1927 when cattle prices rose sharply for ten months before breaking.

Enough cattle are on feed in the Corn Belt to cause a sharp drop in prices if they are marketed in a flood. Therefore, the economists state that the chances of prices holding present levels are getting slimmer.

Turkey Put to Queer Uses Not Found in Cookery Book

The turkey is put to some queer uses that you will not find in any cookery book. It has an extremely powerful gizzard, lined with a horny substance, forming a natural millstone good enough to grind down the points of lancets and needles. Now there is a constant demand for seals and small gems from Pompeii and Herculaneum, a demand far exceeding the supply. Most of those sold are fakes, cut in Italian workshops. The peculiar dull, semi-corroded appearance of the genuine article is got by making turkeys swallow these fakes, which stay in the gizzard until they are given the final convincing touch, and deceive the expert.

Turkeys' feathers are the finest for arrows used in archery, excepting peacocks, of which the supply is too limited. Only about five feathers from each wing are suitable, and these have the barb on one side only. Their particular virtue is that they stay quite stiff after being glued to the wooden shaft. Even eagles' feathers are too weak for this purpose. Before the value of turkeys' feathers was discovered about a century ago, goose-feathers were used for arrows

The smaller feathers of the turkeys are used for stuffing mattresses; the lighter ones for making brushes for dusting furniture. The Indians of the wild turkey countries weave the feathers into a network made of the bark of the mulberry tree. And turkey feathers are used extensively in making fans, especially in France.—Tit-Bits.

Pietermaritzburg Oldest But One in South Africa

Although it is the smallest of the four capitals of the Union of South Africa, Pietermaritzburg holds the distinction of being the oldest and most historic city outside of Cape Province, for Port D'Urban, as Durban was then called, consisted of but a handful of English when, in 1838, the Voortrekkers founded the town of Pietermaritzburg.

Since that time one hundred years ago, events have passed across the page of history, like shadow pictures on a wall, scenes of hopes and disappointments and constructive effort, says the Christian Science Monitor Today the town is known as "the Garden Colony of Natal," a city of lovely residential streets lined with blue jacaranda trees and well-designed public and private gardens among fine civic buildings.

The early Dutch settlers, called Voortrekkers, came to Natal from the Cape in 1838 Their new town was planned and laid out with spacious streets and an open square. A Volksraad was formed in 1839 a year after the small township came into being, and it received its official name of Pietermaritzburg, after two former Dutch leaders.

Types of Obesity

There are several kinds of obesity, each associated with a particular cause. The type can be determined by observation of how the fat is distributed on the body. There are three types caused by dysfunction of the endocrine gland and in each case the glands are functioning below the normal level. When the cause is in the pituitary gland there are heavy deposits of fat around the shoulders and pelvic girdles, the upper arms and legs will be heavily padded but the wrists and ankles will retain their trim outline. When the thyroid is at fault the fat is uniformly distributed all over the body, the wrists and ankles becoming thick. In hypogonad obesity the fat is concentrated from the waist to the knees, the ankles and the upper part of the body retaining their slimness.

Famous Thorn Bush

According to tradition the famous thorn at Glastonbury cathedral was brought and planted there by Joseph of Arimathea, and was part of the crown of thorns which was pressed upon the brow of Christ. According to tradition it blooms at Christmastime and the possession of a piece is said to insure good fortune through the year. There is also a slip which has grown from a gift from Glastonbury, at the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, now in Washington, D. C.

Soap an Old-Timer

Soap is one of the oldest products used by man, says "Industrial and Engineering Chemistry." Fundamentally the chemistry of the soap reaction is essentially the same as it was in the prehistoric days when the first soap was made by the spillage of melted wax from altar candles on wood ashes, but the methods of manufacture have changed to the extent that a modern soap factory is a model of engineering skill and efficiency.

Message to Garcia

Lieut. Andrew S. Rowan was sent by the United States government with the message to Garcia, leader of the Cuban insurgents, when war between the United States and Spain was imminent early in 1898. Rowan left Washington April 8 and after many hardships reached Garcia's headquarters in the mountain districts of the island May 1. The message was verbal and was not committed in writing, as often has been stated.

WORN TRACTOR TIRES MAY PULL VERY WELL

A tractor equipped with worn rubber tires can pull nearly as heavy a load on firm dry ground as one with new tires.

This comforting observation for the man using tires that are getting old is made by J. B. Davidson, head of the Agricolthral Engineering Department, Iowa State College.

Slips On Grass

When the same tractor is pdlling on green grass or stubble—it's a different story. With stubble or grass footing, the drawbar pull using old tires is 600 to 1,000 lbs. less than when new tires are used.

With light loads—those ranging from 0 to 1,500 pounds—worn tires grip the soil as well as do new ones. With 1,500 to 3,000-lb. loads, worn tires begin to "lose ground" to new, sharp treaded tires.

Retreading Possible

Fuel costs generally rise in proportion to slippage. With light to medium drawbar loads, the fuel bill is the same whether new or used tires are used, but rises when old tires are used on heavy loads, especially on grass and stubble.

Excessive slippage, as that resulting from excessive drawbar loads or a lack of proper wheel weight, is one of the most important reasons why tires may get old and worn before their time. Using water for wheel weights to reduce slippage is a practical and popular practice.

Retreading tires is a service now being offered by several companies at a cost of just about half the price of new tires. But whether this is practical is a question the answer for which rests in the future.

Epworth Leaguers Take Thrills And Spills . . . Mostly Spills

Friday evening the members of he Klemme and Liberty Epworth League drove to Clear Lake and enjoyed a skating party at the Idalo. The floor was rented for the evening and skating was fine as it was not too crowded. Several minor bruises and lacerations were sustained by some of the less fortunate members of the party, but no major catastrophes have been reported as yet.

A Drumhead Court-Martial

Originally the name drumhead court-martial was given only to a summary and hasty court-martial called to try an offense committed on the battlefield or during a march. Most of the forms and ceremonies are dispensed with. The name comes from the fact that formerly such courts-martial were often conducted around a drum used as a table.

RAINED OUT! NO MOVIES ON THE OPENING NIGHT

Because of rain the open air movie program for the summer got off to a poor start Saturday night. Manager Art Wellemeyer thought it advisable not to attempt a show that evening as the weather was threatening and rain drops fell occasionally during the early part of the evening.

A good movie program has been scheduled for next Saturday night, when it is hoped the weather will be ideal for an outdoor show.

The illustration presents three distinct types of frocks fashioned of lace. A new medium for the tailored sheer dress which will be found ever so practical for summer wear, is an interesting conventionally patterned two-tone lace as pictured to the left in the group. Bruyere designed this dress which has a grosgrain ribbon belt and two ribbon bows on the shoulder.

Utterly feminine and charming is the afternoon dress shown in the foreground to the right. Vera Borea designs this lovely frock of a delicate but firm lace that delineates big florals with sheer mesh between. The ruffles around the neckline and on the sleeves are indicative of Paris trends. In this dress of horizon blue lace the ruffles lend a beguiling feminine note with no suggestion of fussiness. For summer afternoon wear and informal evenings, there is wide favor expressed for pastel laces.

An interesting feature of sheer afternoon lace frocks is that many are worn over costume slips in contrasting color. Dark laces, very sheer, are also worn over light foundation slips. The monotone effect that demands a matching color for the slip is equally good style.

The model in the center shows an evening dress designed by Molyneaux. It demonstrates how pleasingly sheer lace yields to pleated treatments. The straight-fitted sheath skirt is finely pleated, and the dramatic balloon sleeves are likewise pleated. The deep square decolletage is noteworthy.

Pleated Skirt in Summer Fabrics

Skirts and blouses are usually on the wane by the time really warm weather sets in and the lightweight suit usually is the only opportunity for continuing this casual style. But not so this year, at least if the prominence of spun rayon, linen and cotton skirts are any indication.

The pleated all-round skirt is especially good in summer fabrics, which may account for the increased popularity, and not only the skirt departments but the blouse and summer sweater departments are preparing for much activity.

The practicality of the skirt and blouse or sweater is undeniable. It is easy to have a number of changes at little outlay and there is less necessity of laundering than with a number of one-piece frocks.

Feminine Frills On Shirtwaists

Sportswear is not being neglected, even among the frills and ruffles of the majority of feminine clothes, and the shirtwaist is making a conspicuous appearance, changed in some cases by the addition of pleated and gathered fullness, but still basically the same.

In some instances this style is seen with additional color contrasts, among them one shirtwaist dress with rose top and navy skirt, another with a pink and white striped top and pink shirt, and others solid pastel shirtwaist frocks with contrasting bright cummerbunds around the waist.

PAUL PLEADS HIS OWN CASE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:40—22:4; 24:14-16; 26:19-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.—Acts 23:1.

"They say. What do they say? Let them say!" So reads the inscription over a doorway of one of the great schools of England. What does it mean? It bespeaks the confidence of a life lived so nobly that the barbs flung out by wicked and slanderous tongues may be faced without fear, in fact, ignored.

The best defense against the attacks of men is the testimony of a good life. Paul had lived such a life, and consequently when the hour came for him to speak in his own defense, he needed but to point to the record. It is significant that his enemies did not deny the facts. They could only cry out, throw off their garments and throw dust in the air while they shouted, "Away with such a fellow from the earth!" (Acts 22:22-24). They did, indeed, manufacture accusations against him, but even the heathen officials knew enough to throw these out of court. The impotent rage shown by wicked men when they run up against the consistent testimony of a true Christian life is one of the strongest of testimonies to the genuineness of faith.

At first glance the portions assigned for our lesson seem somewhat unrelated though taken from the same general narrative. A little study reveals a surprising unity.

I. A Matter of Conviction (21:40—22:4).

Many men and women have no real convictions. They are Republicans or Democrats because their fathers were, and often they have not the remotest idea of what it all means. They are members of a certain denomination because they were brought up in it, and have little knowledge of its teachings and no definite convictions relative to them.

Paul was a Christian because of strong personal convictions of the deepest kind. He was reared in a tradition which made him a bitter persecutor of the followers of Christ, and it was a personal experience of the regenerating grace of God in Jesus Christ which made him into the bond slave of the One he had persecuted. We need more of that kind of know-so and say-so type of faith. Joining a church as one might join a social club means nothing—but following Christ in full and free devotion is everything.

II. A Matter of Authority (24:14-16).

Just as Paul's life was built on faith which was inward, based on personal convictions, it was also a faith that was Godward, based on the authority of His Word. The Jews might call it heresy, but Paul stood on "all things which are written" (v. 14); he had a "hope toward God" (v. 15), and "a conscience void of offence toward God" (v. 16).

Those who ridicule Christianity would have it that faith is really credulity. They say we believe things which we do not know to be true, while hoping that they may somehow prove to be so. A man who reads these notes in his hometown newspaper recently wrote to ask me if I was fool enough to believe the things I wrote. The fact is that we, even as did Paul, have the strongest of all foundations for our faith, namely the Word of God. Men act in faith on the word of their fellow men—their very existence is all bound up in that faith in men whom they hardly know. They believe them, but they will not believe God. I suggested to my correspondent that he read I Corinthians 1:18-25 and 2:14.

Christian faith calls for a personal belief, but that belief is not in any word of man, but in the Word of God, which abideth forever.

III. A Matter of Witness (26:19-23).

Inward, Godward, and now outward in witness—these are the three relationships of Paul's good life. He could plead in his own defense the record of his life, for he had not selfishly cherished a fellowship with God which had lighted and warmed his own soul and then left his fellow man to sit in the chilling darkness of sin. He was obedient to the heavenly vision (v. 19), and preached repentance, faith, and good works to both Jew and Gentile (v. 20), continuing to do so with God's help even in the face of severe persecution.

Some people are just so good that they are "good for nothing." Such men do not reflect the goodness of God. Every attribute of God is an active one. He is love and He does love. He not only is good, but He does good. His children should be like Him. They are not saved only that they may escape hell and enjoy the peace of God. They are saved to serve in the winning of others to Christ. Let us covet such a good life as that which Paul lived. Our bewildered age needs the sanctifying and stabilizing influence of such lives!

CREASE CURTAIN HEMS ¼" WIDE WITH A HOT IRON

Oilcloth Scallops and Red Rick Rack.

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: The curtains I made from your Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, are so smart and modern looking that they have given our living room an entirely new appearance. Right now I need an idea that will pep up my kitchen windows. Everything is up to date but the curtains. They look old fashioned. The color scheme is red and white, but please don't tell me to use red and white checked gingham because I have done that before.—J. B."

Alright, no checked gingham! How about some nice crisp dotted swiss with the widest red rick rack you can find for the edge? Then make a border around the top and sides of the window by pasting scalloped red oilcloth on the window frame, using wall paper paste. Cut the oilcloth in strips first, then mortise the corners by cutting them on the bias. Start marking the scallops at the corners, as shown here, making the center top scallop wider than the others. The tie-backs for the curtains may also be made of the red oilcloth.

With the help of Book 1, SEWING, for the Home Decorator, you can make many of the things you have been wanting for your home. Book 2—Embroidery and Gifts, is full of ideas for ways to use your spare time in making useful things. Books are 25 cents each. Enclose 50 cents for both books, and leaflet illustrating 36 authentic embroidery stitches will be included FREE. Address, Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

VACCINATION IS BEST PREVENTIVE OF SLEEPING SICKNESS OF HORSES

Vaccination is the best method available for controlling sleeping sickness (equine encephalomyelitis) of horses, says Dr. K. W. Stouder, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

Best results in warding off the disease by vaccination may be expected by giving the vaccine several weeks in advance of possible exposure to the disease. Vaccinations should therefore be performed this month and next, in Iowa, to obtain its greatest benefits. It is safe to use on suckling colts and all classes of horse stock.

Few Vaccinated Ones Die

Out of 12,498 horses vaccinated against the disease in Iowa last year, only 121 took the disease and died. Records by the United States Department of Agriculture on 30,000 vaccinated animals showed that one-half of one per cent developed the disease.

The vaccination method makes a large majority of the horses immune 5 to 6 months. The vaccine carried no virus and cannot produce the disease.

The vaccine now used is produced from the embryos of incubating chicks. This vaccine has several advantages over the first used or horse brain vaccine, Stouder says. It can be produced in greater quantities and at a lower cost. It has also proved to be more effective in raising resistanceto the infection than did the horse brain vaccine.

Produces Early Immunity

It seems not to produce as much lowered resistance to the infection immediately after its injection. Therefore, it is safer to use on animals which might be surrounded with the infection. The immunity which the chick embryo vaccine produces occurs earlier after its injection into the body of the vaccinated animal. All these advantages have caused most manufacturers to produce only the chick embryo vaccine recently, and veterinarians in the field favor it as the best known means to protect animals against this disease.

IOWA ELECTRIC COMPANY WINS TWENTY YEAR FRANCHISE IN MAQUOKETA

Granted By A Majority Of More Than Two To One

By a vote of 1,124 YES to 547 No the citizens of Maquoketa, Iowa granted a twenty year franchise to the Iowa Electric Company at a special election on Wednesday, May 31st.

The election was unique in that the City of Maquoketa has owned and operated a municipal electric plant in competition with the Iowa Electric Company for more than fifteen years The municipal ownership advocates staged an intensive publicity and propaganda campaign in an effort to defeat the franchise. The people, however, by an overwhelming majority expressed their approval of the private company and their desire to retain its service

OSCAR, BIG MUSKIE, WILL BE MOUNTED

CLEAR LAKE—Oscar, the "big muskie," whose dead body floated up to the north shore last week, will be mounted according to a report by Ray Butler, superintendent of the state fish hatchery, who took the fish to Arnold's Park last Saturday Oscar was placed in the refrigerator and frozen solid to insure safe keeping until later in the year when H C. Temmert, taxidermist, will have time to work on him. Mr. Temmert, has done some of the fine speciments in the Brown hotel, Des Moines, and Mr Butler is sure that Oscar will look as natural as life when finished. It is hoped to have him on exhibit at the fish hatchery next season.

DWAINE RIDDER ESCAPES SERIOUS INJURY TUESDAY

Dwaine Ridder, of Watertown, South Dakota, who is spending the summer with his aunt, Mrs. C. A. Arnold on the farm southeast of Klemme, had a rather exciting experience Tuesday at noon. Dwaine was unhitching a team of horses on a hay rake in the farm yard when the animals became frightened and started to run. Dwaine evidently grabbed hold of the tongue of the rake to hold on, and then fell under the machine He was cosiderable bruised but no bones were broken.

SUDAN IS HARD TO BEAT FOR PASTURE

Sudan grass will furnish more pasture in Iowa during July and August than any other emergency crop available, says Horace B Cehyney, extension agronomist at Iowa State College. He reports that on good soils and under favorable conditions sudan grass will carry one to two cows per acre during the summer when bluegrass and most other pastures furnish little feed.

This crop is adapted over a wide area and to most soils in the state, he says. Best results, however, are to be obtained when it is seeded on relatively fertile soils that do not dry out to quickly.

Sudan is usually seeded shallow —not over ½ inch—on a well-prepared seedbed, such as one prepared for corn or soybeans, in late May and early June. The rate of seeding is 15 to 25 pounds to the acre It should be ready to pasture 5 or 6 weeks after planting. It is well to delay pasturing until the plants have reached a height of 15 to 18 inches, according to Cheney.

Probe Into Moseley Activities Reveals Race Consciousness; Rome-Berlin Pact Discredited

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RACES:
Semitism

Last October top film executives met Movie Czar Will Hays to discuss how anti-Semitism might be checked insofar as it affects movie revenues. Last November Father Charles Coughlin made a radio speech tempering criticism of Germany's Jewish pogroms by commenting that Communist persecution of Christians was worse. Nazi sources, he said, had told him 56 of the 59 top men in Russia's Communist party were Jews.

This spring came "Equality," a magazine boasting prominent "Aryans" on its editorial board and dedicated to combating anti-Semitism. At the same time Collier's magazine found there was at least enough talk about the subject to justify a popularized treatise by Harvard Anthropologist Earnest Hooton on the Jew's "highly evolved and specialized characteristics of mind, temperament and personality."

Readers of the Hooton article found themselves realizing that Germany's horrible pogroms have at least made America conscious that there is such a problem. This realization became the more acute when Texas' Rep. Martin Dies brought his un-Americanism investigation committee back into session with the following unsavory allegations:

GENERAL MOSELEY
"How strange . . ."

Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, who retired from the army last autumn after throwing sharp shafts at the New Deal, is active in a nation-wide anti-Jewish organization. Moseley joined a drive financed by New York's Dudley Gilbert, who sent "confidential reports" he received from a night club "waiter" to James Erwin Campbell, reserve army captain of Owensboro, Ky. Campbell, in turn, issued reports to "key people" throughout the U. S. Dies said Gilbert had no intention of stirring up race hatred but thought he was doing a "patriotic service in anticipation of a revolution."

Sample Moseley statements reported by the Dies committee:

(1) "The fact is that the most serious problem confronting America today is just this problem of the Jew and how to get rid of his influence definitely—locally, nationally and internationally."

(2) "If the Jews bump me off be sure to see they get the credit for it from coast to coast. It will help our cause."

Notified of the charges, General Moseley abruptly closed his own private "un-Americanism" investigation in California's Imperial valley and flew to Washington in answer to a Dies subpoena. His comment: "How strange . . . that a patriot can discuss openly and frankly the problems involving Irishmen, Italians and Germans . . . but let him mention any international 'isms' or Zionism and their increasing control of America, then he is attacked on all sides . . . even his life may be threatened."

ITALY:
Axis Breakup?

In 1914 the homeland of Julius Caesar broke its triple alliance with Germany and Austria-Hungary because Trentino and Trieste were not forthcoming. Next year Italy went to war on the side of the Allies. European history has a way of repeating itself; Benito Mussolini, who last year saw everything to gain in an alliance with Adolf Hitler, and who has just signed a 10-year "invincible" military pact with Germany, may well be floating helpless against a current he cannot buck. Plainly top-heavy, the Rome-Berlin axis nowadays gets most of its oratorical support from Nazidom; though Mussolini chimes in, almost every speech indicates he would like peace with democracies. Left unspoken are the reasons he fears the man he calls friend. Reasons:

(1) If Balkan Yugoslavia breaks up, the area inhabited by Slovenes is almost certain to be grabbed by Germany from its Austrian outpost, providing the Reich with an outlet to the Adriatic sea and thence to the Mediterranean. Much though Germany's friendship might be valued, Italy cannot afford to let Hitler become a Mediterranean power.

(2) Italians dislike Russians, but both in heritage and ambition Adolf Hitler's nation is like Soviet Russia. An allied Berlin and Moscow would control Europe, a possibility which grows less remote as German-hating Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov retires from office and both Hitler and Stalin cease shouting at one another. Such a pact would leave Italy in the cold.

(3) Strong though her Mediterranean position may be, Italy is still weaker than the combined fleets of France and Britain. Mussolini is also alarmed at recent Anglo-French gains in the Mediterranean, especially their pacts with Greece and Turkey. And though he counted on Spam as an ally against democracies, Mussolini finds Generalissimo Francisco Franco hobnobbing too affectionately with Germany to his own exclusion. Franco hobnobs also with French, Swiss and Dutch bankers, seeking a reconstruction loan neither Italy nor Germany can give. So far as Mussolini is concerned, the Iberian peninsula is a bigger question mark today than one year ago.

(4) Several times the past year Italy has risked war to help Hitler, first in Austria, next in Sudetenland, next in Czecho-Slovakia, then in Memel. Each time the home folks wondered what Italy would get in return, and after one solid year of such risks they have received nothing but barren Albania. If Hitler marches into Danzig and drags Italy into a futile war, Il Duce will risk internal blowup.

Such are possible reasons why French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet met Italian Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano in Rome recently for amicable discussion on French-Italian trouble points. Since modern treaties apparently mean nothing, there is a good chance Italy might junk her new German pact for a settlement with France and Britain. Britain's reluctance to sign a treaty with Russia might be founded on the hope that Germany and the Soviet would get together, thereby alienating Italy.

BUSINESS:
Competition Wanted

Under NRA the government forced industry into collusion, strict price levels being enforced to a point where competing bidders usually found their individually arrived-at quotations identical. But since NRA was invalidated identical quotations have often continued, providing Trust Buster Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, with what he terms prima facie evidence of collusion.

THURMAN ARNOLD

That a government which five years ago fostered collusion now fights it may seem inconsistent, yet a return to orthodox business philosophy has again made men believe that competition is the life of trade. Up before the house appropriations sub-committee, Trust Buster Arnold explained the justice department will need $520,000 more next fiscal year simply to carry on an anti-trust campaign which—after 40 years—"is just getting started."

No violent campaign is planned, Mr. Arnold explained, but five regional offices will be opened (New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Oklahoma City, San Francisco) and such nation-wide investigations as that of the oil industry will be co-ordinated. With individual actions at Madison, Wis., New York and on the Pacific coast, Mr. Arnold's oil inquiry will center on whether producers must not divest themselves of control of the retail filling stations, a practice he charges is collusive in that it holds up prices, stifling competition. Mr. Arnold on oil: "My point is that either we are going to have competition in the oil industry or if that is impossible it has got to go to congress for regulation—one of the two."

SPAIN:
Freedom?

"The law is the logical outcome of Germany's view, voiced ever since the outbreak of the Spanish war, that fighting there is something which concerns only Spaniards."

Such was the Berlin foreign office's comment on February 18, 1937, when the Reich passed a law which forbade German citizens to enter Spanish territory and participate in Generalissimo Francisco Franco's war against Premier Juan Negrin. In May of 1939, two months after the war ended, with 14,000 German "volunteers" just coming home from Spain, Germany got around to repealing the law.

If Europe thought this situation just a bit humorous, it could view with alarm another chapter of German-Spanish relations now being written. In Madrid, while Franco forces announced all German and Italian arms used during the war (bombers, pursuit planes, heavy artillery, tanks, trucks, technical equipment) would be retained, a committee of 12 German tradesmen was en route from Berlin to negotiate an economic and financial treaty with Spain.

FRANCISCO FRANCO

Heading the group was Dr. Helmuth Wohltat who negotiated the treaty with Rumania last March. Observers thought Wohltat treaty-making had reached the pattern stage, for Spain will be treated just about the way Rumania was. Reich contractors will build roads, railways, fortifications and other military establishments for the new Spain. More vital, however, is the general provision for exchange of Spanish raw materials (especially ores and foodstuffs) for German finished products. Thus will Spain be drawn positively into the Rome-Berlin orbit.

While this was going on, Dictator Franco reviewed his much-postponed "victory" parade, then spoke as if his nation were free from Germany and Italy: "We want a great Spain, but we place our dignity above all. We shall not tolerate any attempt against our sovereignty because it would be useless."

AGRICULTURE:
Trouble Ahead

This spring the bureau of agricultural economics forecast a July 1 wheat supply of 1,018,900,000 bushels, only 2,100,000 bushels short of the figure where farmers must vote on acreage quotas for next year. Dry weather in spring wheatlands cut crop prospects, however, and by mid-May Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was able to avoid an embarrassing election-year acreage referendum by cutting the July 1 estimate to only 974,000,000 bushels. A further help: In 1940 farmers can plant 62,000,000 acres to wheat, 7,000,000 more than this year.

A week after this announcement, however, it appeared the administration's farm program is bound for another bogging down, another year like miserable 1934 and 1936. Carefully checking weather bureau reports, Mr. Wallace found early May rainfall in the wheat belt was far below normal, with drouth spreading fast and damage to spring crops already heavy. Percentages of normal rainfall thus far: South Dakota, 36; North Dakota, 45; Nebraska, 59; Kansas, 74; Montana, 55.

Though on the average far better than 1934, conditions were bad enough to make Mr. Wallace name a drouth committee who will aid farmers if the worst comes.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—The muezzin from his tower cries that he can't exactly say that everything is all right, but it might be worse and it probably will be better. That would be Col. Leonard P. Ayres of Cleveland allaying fears of a bear market, in his monthly business survey, a periodic voice as authoritative as any noontide bulletin from the minarets of Cairo.

His Restrained Optimism Hits A Cheerful Note

Colonel Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust company, was a school teacher for many years, and is the author of a book called "The Measurement of Spelling Ability," one of about a dozen of his books on educational subjects. He has written a similar number of books on business and finance, and, in his entire range, from spelling to selling, he has never overlooked detail and he is no offhand prophecier—prophecy being his main line, as contrasted to that of mere market analysis.

He has logged eight major depressions and eight cycles of inflation and deflation, and he gets the feel of the thing, in about the same way a good cook gets the feel of a cook book. He was one of the few financial experts who saw the 1929 blizzard coming, and said so. On October 3, 1928, he wrote: "The golden age of American business has come to an end."

Nobody was paying much attention to the muezzin then. He kept on repeating that the condition of finance was "thoroughly unhygienic," but the wind wasn't right and the words didn't carry down to the market place below.

A native of Niantic, Conn., Colonel Ayres was educated at Boston university, later garlanded with a chaplet of honorary degrees from other colleges. He taught school at Rochester, N. Y., and at Puerto Rico, and in the latter engagement turned his spare time to statistical research, with such success that he became statistician for the A. E. F. in war days—hence his title.

Previous to taking over the banking post in Cleveland, he was a director of education for the Russell Sage foundation, and he had rounded out his career as an educator nicely before starting another in finance. In between the two work zones, he wedged a book, "The War With Germany," written in 1919.

IN THE depth of the depression, a group of Wall Street financiers hired an economist to draft for them a shock-proof and slump-proof plan for the investment of their surplus funds, to assure them security in their old age After diligent research, their adviser found that no such plan was possible, but suggested as an alternative that they put their money in the keeping of some sagacious Chinese financier.

Sino Business Sagacity Seems Highly Plausible

This writer recalled then that several of the shrewdest business men in this country, including Edward Bruce of the fine arts division of the treasury department and the late William R. Murchison, had learned about the care and nurture of money from the Chinese sages of the abacus, and now comes Richard C. Patterson Jr., also schooled in business in China. He retires as assistant secretary of commerce to take a private post.

Back from China in 1927, with half of his allotted span of years still ahead of him and a sizable fortune already in hand, he wished to put in the rest of his life being socially useful. He was commissioner of corrections of New York city until 1932, given a big hand for his effectiveness on the job.

Just a year ago, he became a sort of liaison officer between the department of commerce and the nation's business. In this capacity, he urged a friendly get-together in an "economic clinic," as he thinks part of our trouble is due to a lack of basic facts and sound understanding of economic and business forces.

He was a Nebraska farm boy, routed through the University of Nebraska and the Columbia School of Mines to a successful professional and business career, first as a mining engineer with the J. G. White Engineering company, as a consultant for the DuPonts and later in mining and business ventures in China. He served on the Mexican border and in the World war, a major in the latter, annexing several foreign decorations.

C. Houston Goudiss Offers Practical Ad Regarding First Meal of the Day; S Breakfast-Time Wisdom for Homem

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

IF THERE is one meal that can be regarded as more tant than any other, that meal is breakfast. It come the longest fast and precedes a major portion of the work. Thirteen hours elapse between a 6:30 supper and breakfast, and the body engine requires a new supply before the daily activities are begun. Yet all too freq this first meal is inadequate in food values, and is gobb haste . . . with consequences that may have a far-reaching effect upon health.

Men who set forth after a meager breakfast are licked before the day's work is started. They never seem to get into high gear and they lack the energy to perform their tasks efficiently. Homemakers who find themselves fatigued and irritable before the morning's work is completed may be surprised to learn that their lassitude is due to a skimpy breakfast. And children who go to school after an insufficient morning meal cannot hope to make good grades in their studies. They fatigue quickly, find it difficult to concentrate and easily become cross. Moreover they are apt to experience hunger pangs during the middle of the morning; and when it is time for the noon meal they will either eat too much or will have lost their appetite, thus disrupting the entire food program.

Starting the Day Right

It is therefore essential that every homemaker recognize the necessity for providing a substantial and satisfying breakfast. This is not difficult to do; nor is it necessary to spend a great deal of time in its preparation.

When I hear such complaints as "My family won't eat breakfast" or "They're simply not interested in food in the morning," I suspect that the menus are dull and monotonous; and perhaps members of the household have the bad habit of sleeping so late that there is no time to eat properly.

Both situations are easily remedied, and they are closely linked. For if the breakfast menus are made sufficiently attractive, it won't be difficult to persuade every member of the family to rise a little earlier in order to enjoy a substantial, unhurried meal.

A Model Breakfast

A well balanced breakfast includes fruit or fruit juice; cereal; an egg or bacon; bread or toast; and milk, cocoa or cereal beverage for the children, with coffee for the grown-ups. The egg or bacon may be omitted occasionally, for an egg may be included in some other meal the day. But cereal in some is usually the mainstay breakfast menu, and the many kinds from which to —both hot cereals and cereals.

Hot or Cold Cerea

Some people have the that cereals must be hot to be nourishing. This is a For the nutritive value of a is determined by the grai which it is made and by th ufacturing process—not by er it is hot or cold. we were left to our repose for that night.

"The next day we three were taken out about 11 oClock, and before a number of people our handcuffs taken off and fetters put on in exchange—I was honored with the largest which weighed eighteen pounds eight ounce—As I thought oppertunities might not offer frequently, and seeing some of the delagates present, I took occasion while my irons were rivetting to speak a few words.

"I told them that the ignominious manner in which we were treated without any proof of criminality, or any hearing, without even a crime being laid to our charge, was a reproach to those only who could act in that manner by prisoners of War, under the sanction of a Capitulation—That after a proceeding so unjust I was prepared for any extremity, but desired the persons present to observe that punishment was exercised on us before any enquiery had taken place or any person who might have accused us being confronted with us—some by their gestures appeared to feel for us, but no one utter'd a word, and when our fetters were properly fixed we were remanded to our Dungeon from which the five felons were removed—The light we received was from a grate, which faced the Court of 20 feet square with walls 30 feet high—The prison having been built 60 Years it may be conceived we were subject to one very offensive convenience, in the heat of summer almost suffocating, our door was only open'd to give us water, we were not allowed any candle, and from the first to the last of our confinement we never could find that the Governor or Council had order'd provision of any kind to be made for us except Water with which we were really very well supplied.

"Having been by order of the Governor (with the advice of his Council) prohibited the use of pen Ink and paper, or the converse of any one but our Jailor we had no employment but in our reflections . . .

"August 31st.—Major Hay with other Prisoners from Chesterfield arrived at Williamsburgh, the Soldiers were confined in the debtors room, the officers 5 in Number were put into the Dungeon with us which made the heat intolerable.

"At eleven at night we were obliged to alarm the prisoners in the next cell who pass'd the word to the Guard for the Jailor, our Surgeon being on the point of suffocating an asthma to which he was Subject having seized him at this time with that violence that he lost his pulse for ten minutes, we had tried by wafting a Blanket to draw some air thro' the grate but this was insufficient and if he had not had presence enough of mind to open a vein, he would probably have expired, for the state of the air was such that a Candle with which we had lately been indulged, would barely live if held at the top of the Cell.

"The door of our Cell continuing shut for several days, the poor prisoners Young and old, Men and Women, offered to be lock'd up and debarr'd the use of the court, if we might be allow'd that liberty, which at length we had.

"October 1st. — A Parole was tendered us which having read and duly considered we all rejected, as some people thought a spirit of obstinacy rather than prudence dictated on this occasion . . .

"As we had suffer'd already from the simple assertions of obscure persons, one of whom was John Dodge was well known by several Virginias to be an unprincipled and perjured renegado and as we had experienced the unhumanity of the executive power, It plainly appeared that this parole was offer'd from no other motive than to lay us open to the malice of the first informer, when we should probably have been imprisoned as before, with the additional Stigma of having broken a parole, which it was next to impossible to observe in all its parts.

"October the 9th. The Soldiers were sent from the Jail to the Barrack, where being allowed to cut wood a part was sent to the Jail for us, and even the American soldiers on guard, tho' miserably bare of clothing themselves, used to spare a part of their own fuel for the dressing our victuals.

"On Christmas Day the Soldiers were march'd away to King William County—The weather at this time became so intensely cold, that we could not rise from the floor but continued day and night in our blankets, The scurvy began to make it's appearance, and our legs to swell—The Jailor then concluding we could not survive the severity of the cold in our present situation, took us to an upper room in the Jail, where prisoners had formerly been kept, this tho it had no window but an open grate was more tolerable than the Dungeon, we could light a fire in the Chimney and by sacrificing part of our blankets to stop the grated window and stuff the cracks in the cieling we made a shift to endure in the daytime, at night we were remanded to our Dungeon.

His Captivity Ends

"August 1st. (1780) We were march'd from Williamsburgh—Major Hay and I sent to the Jail at Chesterfield—Captn La Mothe and Mr. Dejean some time in October accepted the parole merly recejected, the are, went to Hanover, the latte- to Coll Clarke but what gh- come of him, I have no ors learn'd."

Thus the captivity of the y Buyer General" in old Wide- burg ended. The severity In treatment was due in lar- laid to John Dodge, whom Ha- calls an "unprincipled am- jured renegado" (a charac- tion, incidentally, which the can historians indorse). ors had been a trader in len whom Hamilton had impr- n- for suspected disloyalty bu- managed to escape and ret it the East. Then, according tch M. Qualfe, in the book "Th- ture of Old Vincennes" (pu- n- in 1927 by the Bobbs-Merril- ill pany.):

"Gifted with a fluent ts- and a pliable conscience, er sought to revenge himself his former adversary by senting to the Virginia au ties that Hamilton at Detro: been guilty of repeated viol: of the recognized laws of wa and of humanity. Relying n this highly untrustworthy it mony, Governor Jefferson cliped to accord Hamilton the treatment due an honorable prisoner of war; instead, he was made the scapegoat of the now odious system of warfare it had been his duty to administer, and was long treated as a common felon; at length General Washington interposed his powerful influence in opposition to this procedure and Hamilton obtained his exchange and was allowed to return to England."

Is History Unfair In Recalling Him as "Hair Buyer General"?

Not only does this distinguished historian (Dr. Milo M. Quaife, secretary of the Burton Historical Collection in the Detroit Public library) show that Hamilton was very unjustly treated while a prisoner at Williamsburg, but he also doubts if history has dealt fairly with the Britisher in perpetuating his "Hair Buyer General" title. Four years ago the Burton Historical Collection was presented with the ledgers and account books of Alexander and William Macomb, fiscal agents for the British government at Detroit during the Revolution. Nowhere in these records, according to Dr. Quaife, is there any reference to the purchase of scalps.

In an interview with Dr. Quaife which Ralph L. Peters of the Detroit News staff obtained at that time, the historian said:

"I am convinced that Hamilton hasn't been given a fair deal—in more modern parlance, he hasn't been given much of a break.

"Now I have no desire to make a hero of Hamilton. It is entirely true that Hamilton, as lieutenant-governor of Detroit, sent out Indian parties to attack the frontier settlements. It is true that these war parties committed innumerable outrages. Those are facts—and they are terrible facts.

"But it seems only fair to point out that, in sending out such parties, Hamilton was doing no differently than Montcalm, Sir William Johnson and many others before him—and as others did after him without receiving the censure that accrued to him.

"There is De Peyster, for example, the man who took command at Detroit after Hamilton had marched to Vincennes and been captured by Clark. De Peyster continued to send out war parties against the Kentucky settlements just as Hamilton had done. The Indians committed outrages—but De Peyster has come down to the present day as pretty much of a popular figure.

Window of Hamilton's cell in the restored Williamsburg jail.

"Hamilton and De Peyster were not responsible for the raiding parties. They were acting under orders. The responsibility rests squarely on the king and the ministry at home. Hamilton and De Peyster were agents of the government, discharging the duties imposed on them.

"Indian warfare was a terrible thing. I certainly have no desire to condone it. Here was the situation, however. England and the Colonies were at war. ### PAUL SOLVES CHURCH PROBLEMS

LESSON TEXT—I Corinthians 1:1-3, 10, 11; 4:14-21; I Thessalonians 5:12-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ.—Philippians 1:27.

Victory over the destructive powers of sickness is achieved by an orderly attack of the problem. The doctor first makes a study of the condition of his patient, observing not only the outward symptoms, but the general condition of the body. He proceeds to isolate and identify the evil forces which are causing the disease, and then he is ready to apply his curative remedies and procedures.

The Church is sick today even as it was in Paul's day. We are in need of the sound advice and the effective example of "Doctor Paul" and therefore do well to apply to ourselves and to our churches the lesson of today. As we do this honestly we may find in ourselves that which is making our own church weak and ineffective. Let us apply the cure even though the process of healing may be a painful one.

I. The Condition.

What's wrong with the Church? The excerpts from the letters of Paul which make up our lesson reveal three fundamental difficulties which exist in essentially the same form today.

1. False Teachers (Gal. 3). This passage is a part of our lesson although not included in the printed portion. It tells us of Paul's masterly dealing with false teachers. Erroneous teaching and the substitution of the philosophies of men for the Word of God are responsible for much of the trouble in the Church. It is decidedly not a matter of indifference what your pastor teaches, what your Sunday School lesson helps teach, and what your Sunday School teachers present to their classes.

2. Divisions (I Cor. 1:10). Sometimes these occur over doctrine, sometimes over church procedure, but all too often over the most insignificant things. Frequently they center around personal likes and dislikes. Cliques and little closed groups have no place in the Church. Man-worship in place of the worship of God will also wreck a church.

3. Contentions (I Cor. 1:11). For some unexplainable reason the people who love a fight seem to want to do their fighting in the Church.

II. The Cause.

The internal troubles of the Church cannot be blamed on its testimony or on its responsibility in the world, and certainly not on its Lord. The real cause of the Church's problems will be found in men and women who are not living as they should.

1. The Contentious (I Cor. 1:11). These are the fighters.

2. The Puffed Up (I Cor. 4:18). They have an exaggerated idea of their own importance.

3. The Disorderly (I Thess. 4:14). Unruly and erratic folk trouble the Church.

4. The Faint-Hearted (I Thess. 5: 14, R. V.). Timid and uncertain individuals limit and hinder God's work.

5. The Weak (I Thess. 5:14). They are feeble in spiritual insight and power.

III. The Cure.

Diagnosis and location of the cause of a disease is practically useless unless a course of treatment is carried out. Consider the steps in the treatment of the sickness of the Church and then apply the remedy.

1. Remember that it is a "church of God" (I Cor. 1:2).

2. Recall and follow the true teaching of God's Word (I Cor. 4: 17).

3. Receive grace and peace from the Father and the Son (I Cor. 1:3).

4. Recognize those appointed by the Lord to be over the church as leaders and teachers (I Thess. 5:12-16).

5. Be ashamed of ungodly misbehavior (I Cor. 4:14).

6. Deal plainly with sin and disorder (I Cor. 4:21). The knife of the surgeon may cause pain but it is often the way to healing.

7. Warn those who are unruly (I Thess. 5:14). The word of spiritual admonition is too often lacking in the church.

8. Comfort and encourage the fainthearted (I Thess. 5:14). Unregenerate man has no patience with such folk, but God does. A note of encouragement needs to be stressed in these trying days.

9. Be patient toward all men (I Thess. 5:15). If you feel that you must be impatient, be impatient with your own faults. Patience is a Christian virtue which has almost been lost in the dizzy, high-pressure age in which we live. Let us cultivate it both in the church and in the hearts of believers.

Great Fortune

To be reconciled unto God, to possess God's favor and friendship, to be at peace with God, is the greatest fortune, bliss and happiness a human being can find on earth.

Pretty Patterns That Are Oh So Practical!

SOMEWHAT formal, so that you can wear it smartly for shopping and runabout, is the wide-shouldered dress with buttons down the scalloped bodice and braid used to give the effect of a bolero. The circular skirt has a charming, animated swing to it. In batiste, linen or flat crepe, it's a dress you'll thoroughly enjoy all summer long.

Indispensable Slacks Suit.

If you're planning to have a lot of outdoor fun this summer (and of course you are) then a slacks suit is an indispensable part of your vacation wardrobe. This one includes a topper with front gathers that flatter your figure, well-cut, slim-hipped slacks, and a bolero with wide revers that you can wear with daytime frocks, too. Denim, gingham, flannel or gabardine are practical materials for this.

The Patterns.

No. 1741 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 ad 42. Size 16 requires 4⅝ yards of 35 inch material with nap. Three yards of braid.

No. 1750 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 ad 40. Size 14 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material for slacks and bolero; ¾ yard for topper.

Spring and Summer Pattern Book.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book, which is now ready. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

COLUMNISTS AND DOC HAND FISH "TKO"

The "fishing battle" between this scribe and Earl Hall of the Mason City Globe-Gazette and refereed by Dr. Frank Knutson, of Clear Lake was conducted peacefully, but ended disasterously for the fish, at Clear Lake early Thursday morning.

A near battle resulted when this scribe woke Earl up in the dim hours of the morning, but we compromised by eating up a couple of Earl's sandwiches while he was finishing the agony of removing his whiskers.

Getting to the battle, Frank Knutson handled the situation like a veteran by keeping both scribes at a safe distance from each other and the only damage was done to the fine array of words that passed back and forth across the waves. As far as the actual fishing was concerned the battle ended in a draw. . . Frank calling a "TKO" technical knockout—when the 11th fish was strung on the line!

We kept our eye on Earl, and outside of him spitting on the bait, messing up our line when we were pulling in a nice pike. . and a few other underhanded tricks. . . Earl really was quite a gentleman. . . even tho' he can't exactly be classed as a fisherman!

The contest will be continued after Earl has had a bit more practice. . . he has all the ear marks of becoming a good fisherman. Frank has kindly consented to again referee the next battle. (The date will not be made public . . at Earl's request.)

I-S-A-S

BICYCLING SHOULD NOT BE DONE ON WALKS. . .

Riding a bicycle is fine, wholesome exercise and sport for the boys and girls of Klemme, but it should be confined to the streets, and not the side walks.

If the boys and girls insist they must use the walks. . . they should be courteous enough to at least give pedestrians half the walk. We have been told that at times a couple of cyclists would ride down a side walk abreast of each other and it was necessary for the pedestrian to step clear off the walk to avoid being struck by the riders.

Try to be a bit more careful, and courteous, bicycle riders!

I-S-A-S

EARL HALL MAKES CONFESSION!

Earl Hall got an early jump on us by writing up the fishing party in the Globe-Gazette Saturday. Here's his alibi:

"My whole claim to distinction on the basis of this particular occasion has to be presented in this statement of fact: I CAUHGT THE FIRST FISH. From that point on Frank Knutson had a disagreeable way of rowing so that practically all the fish were on Jergie's side of the boat.

"Except for the fact that Frank supplied the boat and surrendered his claim to any part of the catch, I really would be a bit miffed at this obvious alliance between him and Klemme's fishing editor."

Then Earl winds up with a final thrust: "I still think the ideal fisherman would be one with the luck of Jergie and the skill of Mr. Eye"

This scribe had really intended to give Earl a break, but as long as he asked for it, we will give that part of the story that Earl seems so anxious to cover up Here are the facts:

Earl caught the first fish, in fact two of them and Frank was also doing alright when WE ROWED THE BOAT! The Ink Spatterer also landed one while doing his own rowing.

Then Earl Hall took over the rowing on one drift and NO BODY CAUGHT ANY FISH! Frank saw that Earl would gum up the works so he took over the rowing on the last drift and then, we, JERGIE, CAUGHT ALL THE FISH! Earl had PLENTY of strikes, but in his unbounded excitement he would fail to set the hook, and the pike would come up and thumb their noses at Earl and go skipping merrily back into the lake!

This thing has developed to the point where it will be necessary to take Earl out on another fishing expedition. Boy, he can sure take it!

ration's farm program is bound for another bogging down, another year like miserable 1934 and 1936. Carefully checking weather bureau reports, Mr. Wallace found early May rainfall in the wheat belt was far below normal, with drouth spreading fast and damage to spring crops already heavy. Percentages of normal rainfall thus far: South Dakota, 36; North Dakota, 45; Nebraska, 59; Kansas, 74; Montana, 55.

Though on the average far better than 1934, conditions were bad enough to make Mr. Wallace name a drouth committee who will aid farmers if the worst comes.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

GESTURE

According to C. Fred Porter, state comptroller, a misleading impression has been created over the steady decline in the property tax levy for state purposes. At its highest point several years ago the state levy created a fund of about $12,000,000 while an additional $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 needed for state administrative costs was collected more indirectly. Many persons now view the decline of the state levy from eleven or twelve mills to its present two mill anual collection as a deciine in the costs of government. This is misleading, Porter points out, because recent shifts in comput ing valuations would make any comparison with a mill levy today as against one of ten years ago false.

SHIFTING BASES

What has occurred is a gradual shift of the tax bases. As far back as 1917, Porter says, a movement was begun it spread the tax base and to lift a part of the burden from the property owner. The state income tax was born in the realization that many Iowans of fair income but owning no real property were escaping their share of the cost of government. Sales taxes and corporate income taxes accomplish exactly the same thing. In the face of these new sources the state levy has gradually declined. This doesn't mean that less taxes are being collected but that funds for state purposes are coming from other sources. These indirect sources include inheritance taxes, cigarette taxes, insurance tax, liquir profits, fees, etc.

HOMESTEAD RELIEF

But even after the so-called three point tax system and liquor profits made it possible to revise the state levy downward these new sources would not have spelled much relief to the owner of home and farm but for a stubborn Republican senate which beat down Governor Clyde Herring's resistance to a veto of the homestead exemption act. Republicans traditionally have been little inclined to practice financial legerdemain but have consistently fathered and maintained a conservative and workable viewpoint based upon seasoned experience.

JOBS ABOLISHED

Another step in the "streamlining" of state departments which between now and July 1 is expected to see many state jobs eliminated, was taken a few days ago when King Palmer, chairman of the state board of social welfare, eliminated ninety-five county emergency relief arministrators. Eighty-five of these administrators were drawing monthly pay checks of from $15 to $25 for delivering a mythical service. In other words they were being paid a monthly total of $1,625, or more that $20,000 per year which was intended for emergency relief. The posts were created by Governors Herring and Kraschel and when the state emergency relief administrator was questioned last fall it was at first denied that any such positions existed. By July 1, Palmer declares, all lost motion and unnecessary overhead expense will be removed from old age assistance, emergency relief and other welfare departments.

BEGINNING TO ROLL

Thus the ball begins to roll in the Republican campaign to cut out useless agencies and reduce the number of employees. According to records in the state comptroller's office there were 1,795 employees in state departments which came under Republican administration on January 2. This does not include state institutions and highway maintenance crews. On May 1, four short months later, this number had been trimmed to 1,716. Including recent reductions by the social welfare board, state officials believe the number of employees has been reduced by approximately 200. Streamlining and consolidation in the several departments now included under Public Safety Commissioner Karl Fischer will produce others. The largest of the state departments, liquor control commission, state tax commission and the highway commission, among others, do not pass into Republican control until July 1. Governor Wilson and other interested state officials insist the trimming will continue just as long as dead wood can be found.

HOW WAS THAT AGAIN?

In addressing a meeting of both young and senior Democrats in Des Moines recently Chief Justice Mitchell of the state supreme court assured all who listened that the New Deal and its Iowa counterpart had performed exactly as scheduled and had accomplished every gossamer objective. The same group a few hours later heard a more temperate address by United States Senator Gillette in which the Senator frankly confessed the New Deal had not really done all the things Judge Mitchell had claimed. It has been difficult for Iowa Democrats to reconcile the two speeches when laid side by side.

AND THIS

President Roosevelt about the same time last week told 900 members and guests of the American Retail Federation that this administration cannot be expected "to alter the principles and objectives for which we have struggled the last six years." Admitting that future generations would shoulder the Federal debt he pointed out that "our national debt after all is an internal debt, owed not only by the nation, but to the nation. If our children have to pay interest on it, they will pay that interest themselves." Many newspaper editors wonder what he meant by that 'if." The only way "our children" can escape paying interest, they have concluded, is via some form of repudiation. In reply to his question as to how the budget can be balanced certain unkind editors have referred the President to one of his own speeches in which he said "you cannot go very far with any real Federal economy without a change of concept of what are the proper functions and limits of the Federal government itself." This speech was made in 1932 and he added that economy cannot be expected from an administration "committed to the idea that we ought to center control of everything in Washington as rapidly as possible." He seems to have answered himself.

to get a foretaste of how ir- ble lovely little girls will look in their dotted Swisses and dotted voiles this summer, take a good look at the three models illustrated. Imported dotted Swiss in rose pink makes the charming and practical frock for the winsome little miss to the left. Pin-tucked net and ruffled lace edging trim the collar, the vestee panel and the puff pockets. A self fabric sash ties in a bow at the back.

The ever-popular imported dotted Swiss voile that works up so beautifully in little girl's frocks, is used for the choice little dress which the member of the young generation centered in the picture is wearing. Fine smocking in bright rose-red decorates the attractively gathered waist. This clever needlework, so gay and so chic, imparts a French air to the simple styling of the frock. Short puffed sleeves and a young round collar are flattering details and in excellent taste.

The important member of the youngest generation seated to the right in the picture, is wearing a cunningly styled frock made of choice pink Swiss organdy with large white embroidered dots. The wide collar, the short puffed sleeves and the front buttoned closing are edged with white Val lace. This diminutive society queen wears a pink satin hair ribbon to match the little bow at her throat.

And here's a final choice bit of news in regard to what fashionable little girls will be wearing this summer. It is all about the adorable sheer little shirtwaists styled in the "baby" type such as are sponsored for grown-ups of sheerest batistes and organdies or swisses or voiles. They are lace-trimmed and hand-tucked to the queen's taste.

Fightin' Irishman

EARLY in the Nineteenth century an Irish lad named Jimmy Shields ran away from his home in County Tyrone. The ship on which he set out for America was wrecked off the coast of Scotland and he was one of only three survivors.

Undaunted by this experience, the boy set out again. An Atlantic gale drove this ship upon a reef off the Carolina coast and Shields, who had been aloft, was thrown to the deck with both legs broken. The boat was wrecked but by an almost miraculous chance he was rescued by a passing vessel.

After recovering from his injuries, he enlisted in the army and fought in the first Seminole Indian war in Florida, after which he headed for the new state of Illinois. There he made a living for a time by teaching French in the French village of Kaskaskia!

Then he studied law, soon passed the bar examinations and within a few years was successively elected representative in the legislature, state auditor and justice of the Illinois Supreme court. At the outbreak of the Mexican war he raised a regiment and fell desperately wounded at the Battle of Cerro Gordo.

Chosen United States senator from Illinois he served for six years, was defeated for re-election and moved to Minnesota where he was again sent to the senate. At the outbreak of the Civil war he was made a brigadier-general and was again desperately wounded in battle. But he survived and was again elected to the United States senate —this time from Missouri. When he died in 1879 Shields had the distinction of being the only man in American history who had served as senator from three different states.

Patriot and Painter

GEN. GEORGE WASHINGTON, besieging the British in Boston, wanted accurate drawings of the enemy's positions. So a young Connecticut Yankee volunteered to get them. He crept close to the British lines and made sketches which pleased the commander so much that he made the young fellow a colonel and his second aide-de-camp.

The young colonel next served as adjutant-general to General Gates and in 1778 accompanied General Sullivan as a volunteer against the British in Rhode Island. When this expedition proved unsuccessful, he resolved to give up soldiering.

He went to London to study under Benjamin West and soon became the favorite pupil of that great painter. When Maj. John Andre, the British adjutant-general in America, was caught and hanged as a spy, the young painter seemed to the British the logical man to be used for reprisal. So they put him in prison. Instead of protesting, the truculent young Yankee boasted that he had been an aide to that "arch rebel," George Washington, and was proud of it.

Only the intervention of his painter friends, West and Copley, saved him from hanging. Lucky for America that they did! Otherwise John Trumbull might never have lived to paint such great historical works as "The Battle of Bunker Hill," "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence," and "The Surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown"!

Franklin's Nephew

WHEN Benjamin Franklin sent his 19-year-old nephew, Benjamin Mecom, to Antigua in the Leeward islands in 1752 to run the newspaper he had established there four years earlier, he wrote to his sister, Jane Franklin Mecom: "That island is reckoned one of the healthiest in the West Indies. My late partner there enjoyed perfect health for four years until he grew careless and got to sitting up late in taverns which I have cautioned Benny against."

Presumably Benny followed his uncle's advice but he was too much of a Franklin not to be restless He soon became dissatisfied, even though Franklin increased his share of the profits, and wanted to "go it on his own." So Franklin sold him the press which he moved to Boston. There in 1758 he issued the first separate edition of Franklin's "Father Abraham's Speech," later famous under the title of "The Way to Wealth."

Unfortunately Benny didn't apply its lessons to himself. He became something of a fop, strutting around in fine clothes instead of sticking to work Failing to prosper, he moved the press to New York in 1763 but had no better success there Then he went to New Haven where he rented a press from Postmaster Parker, whose deputy he became But he failed to make good there as he did later in Philadelphia and Burlington, N. J.

Benny Mecom had inherited his uncle's name but none of his genius for making a success. Finally about 1776, he went mad.

New Fabrics Are Heartily Greeted

Even the sober-sides and plain Janes among us have a way of relegating the darker colors and more serviceable fabrics to temporary oblivion, while we revel in the airiness and intoxicating brightness of the cottons and sheers of the merry, mad spring and summer.

We caper into our dimity blouses and chambray frocks, and plant the gayest of inverted straw flower pots, with cambric blossoms budding at the wrong end, on our unoffending heads. Then, with a disdainful sniff at the exotic musks and slumbrous sandalwoods of our last winter's delight, we turn again to the floral scents.

Play Up Dots in Summer Fashions

Dotted prints are the rage. Such an orgy of dots as are playing up this season, eye never before has seen, and such antics as these dots are playing! The novelty and ingenious effects achieved in dotted tiny, huge and every size between patternings and colorings baffle description. The new and popular twin prints that reverse their colors are going strong as they give dressmakers a chance to work out most ingenious combinations.

Tweed the Thing For Travel Coat

If you are going to the New York fair or the San Francisco fair a coat of tweed's the thing for travel. When it comes to choosing the plaid or the stripe woolen fashion bids you "make it snappy." Choose just as big and as bold stripes or plaids as you please. You will find a coat of handsome tweed your best friend that will prove indispensable on your trip.

Uncle Phil Says:

It Seldom Happens

The best news a pessimist can hear is the coming true of one of his predictions.

A mother can start her son in his infancy to like her cooking, but a bride has not that advantage with her husband.

When you feel sour and cross, look at yourself in the mirror. That ought to be a cure.

Distinctive Difference

Great minds run in the same channel. But a channel is not a rut.

Always behave so discreetly that you will not regret putting your name in your hat.

Dictatorship may do something for democracy yet—through the reaction that results from them.

A Prime Requisite

To influence people for good you must believe in them.

We think American good sense will bring the country through; but can we be sure it is inexhaustible?

He Wouldn't Let Chance Of a Lifetime Pass By

The hero of the story that has been making the rounds is a prominent businessman who had the bad luck to be bitten by a mad dog. He was rushed to the hospital for the Pasteur treatment.

While the antirabies serum was being prepared, the attending physician noticed that the patient was very busy making out a long list of names, and he asked:

"Are those the names of the people you wish notified if your condition should become serious?"

"No," said the victim. "This is a list of people that I'm going to bite if I go mad."—Boston Post.

ASK ME ANOTHER ?

A Quiz With Answers Offering Information on Various Subjects

The Questions

1. What is an alliteration?
2. Claustrophobia is the fear of what?
3. Can anything that has been done be undone?
4. What is the largest number used?
5. What is the date of the flood in the Bible?
6. Is brass mined?
7. What is the difference between being interested and curious?
8. Is there any soda in soda water?
9. Are there any of the books of the Bible in which God is not mentioned?
10. What causes clouds to be colored?

The Answers

1. The recurrence of the same sounds at the beginning of two or more words in a sentence in close succession, as: "An Austrian army, awfully arrayed, Boldly by battery besieged Belgrade."
2. Confined spaces.
3. Try unscrambling an egg.
4. A vigintillion is the highest figure listed in numeration and consists of a numeral followed by 63 noughts.
5. According to Hebrew chronology, the deluge destroyed the earth in 2348 B. C.
6. No. Brass is an alloy of copper and zinc, which are mined.
7. Being interested means to have attention aroused. Curious is generally used to mean a desire to learn that which does not concern one.
8. No. It is properly called carbonated water.
9. The words "God," "Lord" and "Almighty" are not mentioned in the book of Esther, nor is the deity so much as alluded to in that portion of the Old Testament. The deity is not specifically mentioned in the Song of Solomon, but that book is symbolical and the deity is continually alluded to. "God," under one name or another, occurs in all the other books of the Bible.
10. Iridescent clouds are produced in the same way as the colors in the rings around the sun or moon—that is, by the process called diffraction, a modification of, or effect on, light as it passes adjacent to any object. In a cloud the minute water droplets account for the coloring to a great extent.

Our Education

GOD educates men by casting them upon their own resources. Man learns to swim by being tossed into life's maelstrom and left to make his way ashore. No youth can learn to sail his life-craft in a lake sequestered and sheltered from all storms, where other vessels never come.

Skill comes through sailing one's craft amidst rocks and bars and opposing fleets, amidst storms and whirls and counter-currents. Responsibility alone drives man to toil and brings out his best gifts.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

CHAMPION TIRES
FIRESTONE WINS 20th Consecutive Victory In Indianapolis 500-Mile Race

A merciless sun beat down upon the speedway as Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Champion Tires. The blistering brick of the main stretch and the granite-hard surface of the turns and the back stretch put tire safety to the test supreme! Record after record was shattered. Speeds reached as high as 160 miles an hour on the straightaways, as 33 of the fastest drivers in the world waged a breath-taking battle for gold and glory.

Never before in all the history of the motor car have tires been put to such a torturous test. And never before has any tire so firmly established itself as a Champion in construction and performance, as well as in name. Here is dramatic proof of the extra strength which the revolutionary new Safety-Lock cord body provides in Firestone Champion Tires—of the extra protection against blowouts assured by the new and advanced Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process—of the extra mileage resulting from the tougher, wear-resisting rubber compounds in the sensational new Gear-Grip tread.

No longer can there be any question of which tire is safest. One tire—and only one—provides these exclusive safety construction features. One tire—and only one—has been on the winning cars at Indianapolis for 20 consecutive years. Motor car manufacturers enthusiastically adopted the Firestone Champion Tire for their 1939 models. Order your new car equipped with this amazing tire. Or drive in and let us equip your present car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires, the one tire—and only one that is safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

WILBUR SHAW, *the 1939 winner
On May 30th, Wilbur Shaw drove to his second victory in the 500-mile Indianapolis Race on Firestone Champion Tires at an average speed of 115.03 miles an hour Champion race drivers, whose lives and chances of victory depend on tire safety, know tire construction. That is why they select and buy Firestone Tires for their racing cars.

LOCAL GIRL IS COUNSELLOR AT CEDAR RAPIDS HEALTH CAMP

Miss Gladys Zabilka, who graduated from Cornell College June 5th, has been selected as counsellor at Camp Good Health, Cedar Rapids, and is spending part of the summer there. The camp, sponsored by the Cedar Rapids Nursing Association, is located about 7 miles out and is for the underprivileged children of that city.

The children range in age from six to twelve years, both boys and girls and are housed in four cabins or dormitories. Boys 6 to 9, and boys 10 to 12; and the same for girls. Each child stays for two weeks when a new group is brought in.

Special attention is given to health, cleanliness, rest, manners and play. Miss Zabilka, who graduated from a Public School Music course, is also giving instruction along that line. The camp, though out in the woods, has all the modern conveniences of a city home. The camp has a staff of 8 persons, including a trained nurse and a dietitian.

LIBERTY FARMERS UNION HELD MONTHLY MEETING

Tuesday evening June 6 the Liberty Local of the Farmers Union held their regular meeting at Liberty No. 7 schoolhouse. The Farmers Washington Service letter was read which carried the encouraging news as follows:

"The eighteen Senators sponsoring S. 570 in the Senate are organizing to bring this Bill up for consideration and a vote in the Senate in the very near future. Present indications are that it will receive strong support and it may pass the Senate. Such favorable action would likely influence the House Agriculture Committee to reconsider and to report the Bill for consideration and vote in this session." (S 570 is the Non-Partisan Cost-of-Production Bill.)

"Hog-processing-tax-refund—May 15, 16, 17. H. J. Res. 138 and S. J. Res. 66 introduced by Congressman Lemke in the House and Senators Frazier and Gurney in the Senate were up for hearing before the sub-committee of both the House and Senate Agriculture Committees. The hearings were very satisfactory. The entire case was fully reviewed. New testimony was introduced. The witnesses for the measure included the writer (Edward E. Kennedy); Mr. Louis B. Ward; Mr. A. H. Johnson, secretary of the National Farmers Process Tax Recovery Association; Mr. Chris Grell of Davenport, Iowa; ond Mr. Robert Spencer of Monticello, Inidana, vice-president of the National Farmers Process Tax Recovery Association. Hearings will be printed within a few days and will be available for distribution. A copy of the hearing and a copy of the bill can be had by writing your congressman or senator for such copies."

At the conclusion of the business meeting a short program was given as follows:

Review of the book, "Name The Aggressors," by Mrs. H. P. Pike, which traced the history of aggression from the beginning of written history. An interesting report on the Southern visit by Mr. and Mrs. William Ax was given by Mrs. Ax. The pictures which were shown of the south were nicely augmented by the word pictures which Mrs. Ax had formed. A delicious lunch was served at the close of the meeting.—Ruby Wacker.

Madison Township Girl Chosen As Leader In County 4-H Work

DOROTHY HORECKA ELECTED 4-H GIRLS PRESIDENT

During the annual county 4-H girls Rally Day held Saturday, June 10th the election of county officers was held. Miss Dorothy Horecka, a member of the Madison Live Wires Club, was elected president, Lorraine Bredlow of the Liberty Club, vice president; Leora Lundberg of the Madison Jolly Workers Club, secretary and Anna Brunsen of the Bingham Club, historian.

The annual music review was held being in charge of Mrs. Cecil Stille assisted by Mrs. C. D. Daniels. The Madison Jolly Workers Club placed first in the contest and were presented with the traveling phonograph. The Madison Live Wires Club has had the phonograph the past year.

The first annual picture memory contest was conducted by Miss Margreete Tjaden, leader of the Bingham Club. The Liberty 4-H girls club placed first in this contest and were presented with a copy of David Artz's "The Sewing School," one of the pictures in the memory contest.

The Liberty township club also won a copy of one of the pictures in the memory contest for having the largest percentage of mothers present. There was a total of 77 4-H club members and 32 mothers present during the day.

The high lights of the afternoon program were the initiation of Mrs. Lewis Ferguson, formerly home demonstration agent, as an honorary 4-H member and the talk "The Spirit of Democracy" by Mrs. W. S. Pritchard of Garner.

HELLO, FOLKS!

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Elder of Osceola, Iowa, are the parents of a baby boy born to them on Saturday, June 10th. They also have a daughter in their family. Grandma Elder left Tuesday for Osceola to see her new grandson.

Mr and Mrs. Glenn Bridges are the parents of a nine and one half pound baby girl born to them Friday, June 9th. They now have two fine daughters in their family. The little miss has been named Berleen Beryl.

RUTH WILLETS NAMED H. D. A. IN HANCOCK AND WINNEBAGO COUNTIES

Former Teacher At Holstein Will Begin New Work On July 1st

GARNER—Miss Ruth Alice Willets of Union, Monday night was named home demonstration agent for Hancock and Winnebago counties following a meeting of Farm Bureau, Home Project club and 4-H girls' chairmen of the two counties held in the county Farm Bureau office here.

Miss Willets, who has been teaching home economics at Holstein the past two years, will begin her new work July 1, succeeding Mrs. Louis Ferguson, who resigned May 1 after serving for two years as home demonstration agent in Hancock and Cerro Gordo counties.

The change in arrangement, pairing Hancock and Winnebago counties, was announced Monday, and it is expected that one home demonstration agent will probably be chosen to serve both Cerro Gordo and Worth counties.

ELL 4-H BOYS HAVE FARM BUREAU PROGRAM

The Ell township 4-H Boys took charge of the regular monthly meeting of the Farm Bureau in their township. The boys put on the program in the form of a radio broadcast with Quentin Love as their announcer Some of the numbers of the program included a Charlie McCarthy act by Earl Greiman; several short plays; piano duet by Donald and Clifford Greiman; saxaphone solo by Jackie Greiman, accompanied by his sister, Gloria; and the Ell township drum and bugle corps, with eight members, and Elwin Weaver acting as drum major. All of the eight boys are members of the Garner drum and bugle corps. At the close of the meeting the boys served the customary ice cream and cake. The meeting was held on the F. R. Greiman lawn under the direction of the boys club leader, Addis Greiman.

Go To Oshkosh, Wis.

GARNER — Supervisor Frank Schoun and Cy Nelson of Britt, foreman of the Hancock County shop, are at Oshkosh, Wis., to get a rebuilt truck the county has purchased. Mr. Nelson will drive the truck back to the county and Mr. Schoun will go on to Chicago to visit his aged father.

Iowa 4-H club boys and girls carried through projects on more than a million and a half dollars worth of livestock, poultry and crops last year.

NATIONAL MAGAZINE ARTICLE TELLS OF KLEMME PRODUCT

The July issue of "Mechanix Illustrated," a Fawcett publication of national prominence, carried an article in the current issue illustrating with pictures and telling of the effectiveness of the Runway Mouse Trap, invented and put on the market by the late Walt Thada of Klemme.

Two illustrations were used, one showing the ease with which the trap is set, and the other showing a captured mouse. The editor of the magazine comments as follows:

"TRAP CATCHES MICE WITHOUT USE OF BAIT—A novel mousetrap will catch Mr. Mouse without tempting him by bait of any sort. Mr. Mouse has a bad habit of sticking close to the wall during his travels around a room, due to his natural fear of coming out in the open. The trap takes advantage of this weakness. When Mr. Mouse sees the opening of the trap in his path, he will go through it rather than go around it. As he passes through, he trips a very delicate spring, and that is the end of Mr. Mouse."

SULFUR AND SANITATION HOLD DOWN COCCIDIOSIS

The use of 2 per cent of flour of sulfur in the chick ration in addition to sanitation are the most important methods of fighting coccidiosis attacks in chickens, says W. M. Vernon, extension poultryman at Iowa State College.

To be effective as an aid in preventing coccidiosis attacks, the sulfur must be fed right from the start and continued until the birds are 3 to 4 months old.

Thick Litter

The poultryman should use a cheap litter so that a good thick layer may be placed on the floor of the brooder house and changed frequently. A dry litter is much to be preferred. Coccidia eggs shrivel quickly when they are in a dry litter but multiply rapidly in a warm, moist litter.

Vernon also emphasizes as important the use of a sanitary sun porch and the location of chicks on clean ground out in the fields where the chicks cannot get back to contaminated areas.

How Curtains Shrink

It's well, when buying curtains or making them, to take into account the kind of skrinkage that may occur. Fine quality all-cotton white marquisette glass curtains shrink more crosswise than lengthwise, when laundered. But cotton-and-rayon marquisette loses from 10 to 12 inches of length in a 2¼ yard length curtain when washed.

About 73,000 more Iowa farms are in the 1939 AAA program than were in last year.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

See Hope for League Rebirth Under New Russ-British Pact; Must Get Rid of Avenol First

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

INTERNATIONAL:
Rebirth?

Once the white hope of world peace, Geneva's League of Nations buildings are today what one correspondent calls "a stately mausoleum haunted by the ghosts of braver men." In its heyday the League stood for collective security, later watching Japan, Italy and Germany drift away without enforcing the covenant's spirit because such action might "divide Europe into ideological blocs."

Chief reason for League doldrums is its management. A carbon copy of Great Britain's current appeasement cabinet is Secretary-General Joseph A. C. Avenol, who in recent years has filed the machinery of collective security under lock and key.

Black marks on the League's record include Manchuria, Ethiopia, Spain and China. Each succumbed amid ineffectual, insincere League sanctions which were enforced against aggressor nations only if individual signatories found it "convenient." By this spring Mr. Avenol's back-tracking generalship reached a new low. When Albania protested its seizure by Italy, the secretary "forgot" to circulate its SOS among signatories. There was no reprimand, and at its May meeting Mr. Avenol prevented Russia's ambassador to Great Britain, Ivan Maisky, from reading a letter of protest against Czecho-Slovakia's seizure. At the same time he got the council to postpone any discussion of Albania until next September.

LEAGUE'S AVENOL

However, even as the League grows more decadent under Avenol leadership, hope rises for a rebirth of its collaboration machinery. Never a word-mincer, Soviet Russia has enough dislike for powder-puff diplomacy to force Britain and France —the League's other two leaders— into rejuvenating Geneva's halls under the new British-French-Russian mutual aid pact. First hopeful sign is the new treaty's goal of preserving European peace. Second sign: It has been communicated to the League and will possibly operate under the League covenant. But a prerequisite to any such rebirth would be the retirement of Mr. Avenol, whose job rests secure so long as the Chamberlain-Halifax-Hoare-Simon quartet rules Britain.

BUSINESS:
Middleman

Favorite butt of pro-chain store and pro-co-operative movements has been the wholesaler, who in popular notion is excess baggage in the U. S. distribution system. If the middleman could be eliminated, many believe, a bar of soap or pound of coffee would cost John Public substantially less.

To test this theory, New York's Twentieth Century Fund broke down the $38,500,000,000 which U. S. consumers paid in distribution costs for their merchandise during the peak year of 1929. Individual figures and percentages of the distribution cost:

|---|---|---|
| Wholesalers | (18%) | $ 7,000,000,000 |
| Retailers | (33%) | 12,600,000,000 |
| Manufacturers | (24%) | 9,100,000,000 |
| Transportation | (23%) | 8,800,000,000 |
| Miscellaneous | ( 2%) | 1,000,000,000 |

Basic conclusions were that wholesalers did not earn excessive profits in 1929 (groceries, 1.3 per cent; confectioneries, 2.2 per cent; dry goods, 2.7 per cent), and that they remain an essential link in the distribution machine.

DOMESTIC:
Un-Americanism

To freedom-loving but undemonstrative U. S. patriots, the trouble with anti-Communist organizations is that they are pro-Fascist. Conversely, anti-Fascist groups (like the American League for Peace and Democracy) are more interested in promoting Communism than fighting Fascism.

When he began investigating un-Americanism last year, Texas' sincere Rep. Martin Dies won deserved criticism for letting his committee listen indiscriminately to anyone with an ax to grind. But thanks to Martin Dies the U. S. has become acutely aware of "isms" pounding on its doors.

Biggest threat, inspired by Italo-German success and fostered by depression-made malcontents, are the U. S. Fascists. This spring Fascism reared its head when Mr. Dies revealed a strong anti-Jewish movement led by Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley retired anti-New Deal army officer; Dudley P. Gilbert, New York financier, and such Ku Klux Klannish groups as Knights of the White Camellias, led by George Deatherage of St. Albens, W. Va. Blandly admitting his anti-Semitic sentiments, General Moseley has promised shocking revelations concerning Jews in high places before the summer is over.

Greatest handicap to an impartial investigation of un-Americanism is the very stumbling block Mr. Dies encountered last autumn, namely, ax-grinding. Best example, though in this case probably popular with Mr. Dies, was the arrest of Fritz Kuhn, "Fuehrer" of the violently Nazi - German - American Bund, charged with grand larceny and forgery in shortages of $15,000 from Bund funds. Overlooking the fact that Kuhn participated in Hitler's Munich putsch in 1923, has organized 94 active Bund branches and has done nothing to merit confidence of the U. S., critics looked suspiciously (though probably unfairly) at the two men responsible for his arrest. New York's Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia might have realized his many Jewish constituents would relish any anti-Nazi move. New York's District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, a potential G. O. P. presidential candidate, could expect excellent publicity from the case.

FUEHRER KUHN

Said Mr. Dewey: "The indictment shows Kuhn is just a common thief." Answered Fuehrer Kuhn: "It's a lot of nonsense."

SCIENCE:
Probing Atlanta

Long before the Revolutionary war St. James was a thriving capital of St. Kitts island, sometimes called Nevis, located in the Lesser Antilles southeast of Puerto Rico. In 1680 an earthquake dropped St. Kitts and its St. James 300 feet below the sea. This summer an expedition led by Detroit's Capt. Robert Hall plans to walk along St. James' submerged streets in one of science's most unusual expeditions. Connected with the surface only by a small telephone wire, divers will wear new helium-equipped suits which need no lifeline to compressed air machines on deck. Last year Captain Hall made similar experiments in the Lesser Antilles, examining submerged shipwrecks in crystal-clear tropical waters.

Trend

ARMAMENT — Soviet Russia has ordered a 50 per cent increase in her 1939 national defense budget to keep abreast of Germany and Italy. Approximate additional cost: $8,000,000,000.

RUBBER—J. M. Slattery, Fisk tire executive, predicts 50 per cent increase in world rubber consumption during next 10 years. Items: Sponge cushions and mattresses, cushions for railroad tracks, traffic markers, flooring, furniture, packaging materials, plastics and latex garments.

GASOLINE—In 1938, U. S. gasoline consumption was 1 per cent above the previous year, although motor vehicle registrations were 1 per cent less than 1937.

JEWS—A new Berlin ghetto decree places still more drastic restrictions on areas to be inhabited by "non-Aryans."

GERMANY:
Ole Man River

Prussian army men are notoriously scrupulous about detail and lax about fundamental principles. In 1914 they made certain that every soldier's equipment was precise, yet overlooked French stubbornness. In 1938 they built amazingly perfect fortifications along the Rhine river, yet forgot that every 10 to 15 years the stream is subject to abnormal floods. Result: Unexpectedly one night a few days after Adolf Hitler visited the Limes lines, German soldiers fled their fortifications in the face of rising flood waters. A few days later news leaked out that a great stock of ammunition was lost and that the forts must be entirely rebuilt.

GERMANY'S LIMES LINES
Water did what weapons couldn't.

More fortunate were Frenchmen on the Rhine's other bank, who discovered their fortress engineers had anticipated the seven-foot rise.

Results of the inundation: (1) Germany will probably be stalemated against aggression until next fall, knowing the world knows of her vital weakness along the Rhine; (2) France began pondering how to produce artificial floods in the Rhine, paralyzing the Reich's first line of defense in case of war.

CHILE:
Next?

If the U. S. wants solidarity among Pan-American nations, she must pay for it. Such is the view of South and Central American countries who could get all the trade concessions they want from bartering Italy and Germany if Washington did not play ball. Last November, Cuba's Dictator Fulgencio Batista visited President Roosevelt. A few days later handsome concessions were announced. This spring Brazil's Foreign Minister Oswaldo Arahna came a-visiting, also winning concessions. Next came Nicaragua's President-Dictator Anastasio Somoza, who went away with $2,000,000 in credits. A few days later from far-away Santiago came the announcement that a Chilean economic commission will visit Washington in July seeking a loan and commercial credits. Far from being gifts, however, U. S. financial arrangements with Pan-American nations decrease American dependency on European and Asiatic nations and often provide new outlets for domestic surpluses.

NAVY:
Statistics

Significant and fearsome is a U. S. peacetime naval construction program bigger than any in history. With a $773,000,000 building appropriation on its hands, with 74 vessels already underway, and with 23 new contracts about to be let, the fleet's current status is something like this:

| Type of Vessel | In commission | Under construction | Appropriated for |
|---|---|---|---|
| Battleships | 15 | 6 | 2 |
| Heavy Cruisers | 17 | 1 | 0 |
| Light Cruisers | 17 | 6 | 2 |
| Aircraft Carriers | 5 | 2 | 0 |
| Destroyers | 218 | 35 | 8 |
| Submarines | 87 | 12 | 8 |
| Auxiliary | 107 | 12 | 3 |

Primary emphasis in the new program will be on capital ships, 15 such battlewagons already being in service. On the way are two more, the 35,000-ton North Carolina and Washington. About to be started are the South Dakota, Indiana, Massachusetts and Alabama. Two more, 45,000-tonners and larger than anything afloat, will be started under current appropriations. None of the eight battleships will be ready before 1945 or 1946.

COMING UP

JUNE 15—Justice Edgar J. Lauer of New York Supreme court, whose wife was convicted and sentenced for smuggling, to resign.

JUNE 15 — Semi-annual war debt payments due. Last December 14, of 13 governments owing $2,051,707,241 (of which $1,891,489,906 was in arrears), only Finland paid in full as usual, $232,935. Hungary made part payment of $9,828.16.

JUNE 17—Commander Donald B. MacMillan to sail from Boothbay Harbor, Maine, on eighteenth scientific expedition into arctic.

JUNE 23—Paul V. McNutt, U. S. high commissioner to Philippines and former Indiana governor, to arrive at San Francisco and open campaign for Democratic presidential nomination.

Star Dust

★ Unimpressed Homefolks
★ Do Swell Job in England ★ Girls—Bob Preston!

By Virginia Vale

RECENTLY returned from Sweden, a man who has been connected with the motion picture business for some twenty-five years made a first-hand report to this column on the subject of Greta Garbo in her homeland.

Her countrymen, he said, aren't tremendously impressed by her success. They like her pictures, go in droves to see them, but they feel that of course she ought to be a success—just a case of home-town girl making good.

They are inclined to resent her aloofness—they feel that she ought to realize that they wouldn't dream of intruding on her privacy, and that she doesn't have to treat them as she does the movie fans of other countries.

He had several photographs of her, taken in the days when she was a hat model. They were sweet, rather simpery, giving no hint of what she was to become.

Apparently the best way to make really good motion pictures is to send an American picture-making unit to England to do the work. "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" is the latest example of what can be accomplished in that way, and it's one of the best pictures that has been released in a long time. Metro sent its unit over, Robert Donat and Greer Garson turned in beautiful performances, Sam Wood did a swell job of directing, and there you are!

Incidentally, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" presents us with a new glamour girl. Greer Garson has flaming red hair and green eyes. Men think she's gorgeous, women aren't sure whether she is really beautiful or not.

This is her first picture. She came to Hollywood from England, where she had appeared on the stage and done some work in television, expecting to go to work at once. She spent a year in waiting to go to work. She was seriously ill, with spinal trouble.

She was sent back to England, to do her first picture, and will probably be sent back again to do her second, "The Doctor's Dilemma."

Paramount thinks it has star material in a young man named Bob Preston—and the movies sadly need young men who are stellar material right now, what with three heart-smashers getting married practically in a bunch! The trio, Gable, Power and Taylor, will still be tremendously popular, of course, but many a girl who has liked their pictures is going to look about for an unmarried star to fill the niche in her affections left vacant by the marriage of one of them.

So Paramount may offer such girls Bob Preston. He's made four pictures so far (notably "Union Pacific") but he's had stage experience, in the stock company launched by Tyrone Power's mother in Los Angeles.

If you're a Kate Smith fan you'll have to save a different hour for her broadcasts, beginning in October. When she returns from her summer vacation she'll move into the nine o'clock (Eastern Standard Time) spot on Friday nights which has been filled this year by Orson Welles and his Mercury Theater. For four years she has been on at eight on Thursdays, and as she rates fifth among all shows in national popularity surveys she doesn't have to fear the other A-1 shows that take the air on Thursday nights.

—*—

ODDS AND ENDS—When the Henry Fondas vacationed in New York they didn't do night clubs, didn't let the publicity department tie Henry up for endless interviews with the press, they just went to the theater, night after night . . . Note to young singers—remember that the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air will be resumed on October first . . . Jim Ameche, Don's brother, is replacing Charles Boyer on the "Hollywood Playhouse" program during Boyer's 13 weeks' vacation . . . Helen Morgan seems to have a future in television, she seems to register perfectly in the new medium . . . If the censors clamp down on "Lady of the Tropics," (Hedy LaMarr-Robert Taylor) Hollywood won't be much surprised.

A Revival of Hand-Crochet Sweaters Is On—Get Bu

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FOR those who crochet or knit there is no lack of inspiration in the new sweater fashions. The models brought out this season fascinate with their clever new ideas and their versatile styling which tunes them to every occasion.

Now that the new hand-crochet vogue is on you will be wanting to crochet a sweater, for the vacation wardrobe calls especially for them. You are supposed to wear sweaters when you play and when you work and it has come to be the fashion to don a lovely evening sweater when you go to parties.

The sweaters pictured were carefully selected for illustration because they reveal the latest trends and because of the fetching "ideas" that give them an entirely new and out-of-the-ordinary look. The knot stitch (a very easy, simple and "quick" stitch) is used throughout the entire sweater shown to the right. Simple in line and worked in lightweight mercerized cotton, this model sweater will be ideal to wear under suit jackets on cool days and you'll love it as a blouse-sweater during the burning-sun days. Note the cluster of crochet flowers around the front of the neckline.

Centered in the picture is shown a cool under-suit blouse hand-crocheted of lightweight pearl cotton and featuring the popular pearl stitch. It is easy to crochet and will give lots of warm weather wear. The shoulders are unusual in that they have slit openings fastened with three glass buttons. And if you don't think this clever shoulder treatment is flattering, just crochet the sweater exactly as pictured, put it on and await the verdict of admiring friends.

If you go in for sports (a course you do, for the tre more and more toward frol fun of life in the great out you'll be wanting a light sweater jacket, designed for ity and comfort. Here's one, to the left in the picture, ju sort you will appreciate and ure the entire season and o fall and winter. It's crochete ily and economically of lu mercerized crochet cotton. ## Jingling Jewelry Still Holds Favor

And still the colorful, picturesque gypsy fashions go on in a mad, merry program of jingling bracelets and necklaces, worn with sheer lingerie waists the long sleeves of which add interest to the mode. The skirt in peasant fashion achieves fullness via yards and yards of material gathered or pleated all around or arriving at an expansive hemline via a circular cut. A cummerbund in bright colored silk wound round the hips in true Romany fashion completes the picture. The newest version is the skirt of vividly flowered print, silk, cotton or linen weave as the case may be, together with a blouse of the filmiest, daintiest, lace-trimmed entrancing type that fancy can picture. Clothes for night or day wear are styled along this picturesque gypsy technique, the floorlength skirts distinguishing evening moods.

Red Accessory Fad Seen in Style News

Red hat, red shoes, red gloves is the startling news relayed from leading fashion centers of the world. A black evening frock with red shoes, and gloves and corsage makes a stunning picture. With your navy daytime dress carry a red bag and wear red doeskin gloves. A few venturesome ones are wearing red kid shoes, and to say they carry the style message definitely expresses it. You can get black or white shoes piped in red if you prefer. The new red touches are devastating with white summer costumes.

Dutch Cap Influence

Cunning bonnets of Dutch Cap inspiration, not only give new and becoming "lines" but they also stress the importance of starched chalk white laces for hats.

White for Evenin

IT HAS come to be quite to wear white without eve slightest suggestion of color evening. He ley F. Horn of Nashville, editor of the Southern rman, whose "Invisible e—The Story of the Ku Klan, 1866-1871," based ears of research, was pub- recently by the Houghton company. to hear the sound of its sinister syllables. Even the initials, in their alliterative attractiveness, were an asset."

Curiously enough, this name, which was to help the society become historic, was chosen quite by chance. In those days Greek-letter fraternities were becoming popular in the colleges and universities of the country so it was only natural, perhaps, that the founders of the Klan should turn to the Greek vocabulary for a suggested name. It was Richard Reed who first suggested the name "Kuklos," from a Greek word from which our "circle" and "cycle" are derived. His companions liked that name but Kennedy, who had an ear for alliteration, suggested that another "K" sound be introduced into the name by adding the word "clan." So, at first, it was spelled "Kukos Clan," then "Kuklux Klan" and finally it emerged as "Ku Klux Klan." Although there are various other versions of the origin of the name, this is the story "as told by surviving charter members and its authenticity seems beyond question," declares Mr. Horn.

Just as the name of the organization was chosen by chance, so was its official costume. Concerning it the author of "Invisible Empire" says: "Bubbling over with the excitement of their newfound plaything, the young members of the new Ku Klux Klan decided to make a public manifestation of themselves; so, borrowing the familiar idea of the easy Hallowe'en disguise, they wrapped themselves in sheets, mounted their horses and galloped through the streets of the little town, greatly enjoying the sensation they created—particularly the alarm and dismay of the Negroes, to whose superstitious minds the sight of white-sheeted figures suggested nothing but spirits risen from the grave, and who accordingly fled to their homes in panic-stricken terror."

In a short time this terror that was created among the Negroes began to create considerable talk around Pulaski. "It was noticed that prowling freemen who encountered the ghostly horsemen at night were afterwards more inclined to stay at home after dark; and this gave birth to the idea that perhaps the Klan might be used as a means of subduing the undue bumptiousness and the nocturnal prowlings of some of those who seemed incapable of using their new-found freedom discreetly."

It must be remembered that these were uneasy times in the South. Its traditional social structure had been overturned by the liberation of the slaves and these freedmen, suddenly unrestrained, were inclined to make the most of their new irresponsibility, especially since they were encouraged by Northern Carpetbaggers, who had swarmed into the South to take advantage of its demoralized condition, and by Southern Scalawags. It must be remembered, too, that for years the dread of a slave insurrection had been the secret fear of nearly every Southerner. Now with disorders increasing the minor transgressions of the newly liberated blacks seemed to be only a prelude to something infinitely worse. So anything which could hold them in check and avert that possible disaster was not to be lightly dismissed without a trial, at least.

The Klan's First Stage.

"But all this innocent frolic and horseplay on the part of a few small-town youths constituted merely the first stage in the existence of the Ku Klux Klan," writes Mr. Horn. "Throughout the winter of 1866-67 the Ku Klux Klan outgrew the confines of Pulaski and Giles county. Also it began to take on a more serious purpose wherever it had been established. It had grown out of its swaddling clothes and, almost before its organizers realized what was happening, they found it on the eve of branching out as a force of regulation which was to affect the destiny of the whole South. Pulaski, however, remained the nerve-center of the Ku Klux movement. Here was dropped into the pool the pebble whose ripples spread so far."

Just as Pulaski remained the nerve-center, so did the state of Tennessee become the "brain" of the movement. This was due largely to the genius of one man —Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, known as the "wizard of the saddle," when he was leading Confederate cavalry during the late war. He became the "Grand Wizard" of the Ku Klux Klan and under his direction the Klan was used as the only weapon which the prostrate South had left to prevent itself from being ground into the dust by the hatred of the Northern Radicals. Then when the control of the Klan began to slip away from the original leaders and thieves and other desperadoes began to use its masks and robes to cloak their own evil designs, it was disbanded.

The story of all this turbulent period is told in "Invisible Empire" whose author concludes his book thus:

"So lived and so died the Ku Klux Klan. It made its name a symbol of terror and desperation. There are today many thousands of Americans who think of it as an indefensible gang of outlaws and murderers. But ask any person who lived in the South during that wild nightmare called the Reconstruction and who saw the Klansmen as they went about their self-appointed, task, ask such a one and from the light in his eyes it will be easy to see that the Klan in his memory is clad in shining armor, sans peud et sans reproche."

"The theory that the Ku Klux were Confederate ghosts was readily accepted by the Negroes generally as being entirely reasonable and credible, and when the Klansmen started to making moonlight visits of a regulatory nature they took their cue from this," says Mr. Horn. For instance, the leader of the Klansmen, after calling the Negro out of his cabin, would complain that he was thirsty and ask the black man to bring him a bucket of water. Usually he would bring the bucket and a gourd dipper, thereupon the ghostly figure would throw the gourd aside and, raising the bucket to his lips, drain it to the last drop. (The Negro didn't know, of course, that the Klansman had a funnel inside his mask and from its end a rubber tube ran down to an oilcloth bag under his flowing robe.)

Having drunk, the white-robed figure would smack his lips appreciatively and exclaim, "My, but that's good. That's the first drink I've had since I was killed at the Battle of Shiloh; and you get mighty thirsty down there in Hell."

A Standard Joke.

"This became the favorite and standard joke of the Ku Klux everywhere during those early days; it was almost the hallmark of a Ku Klux raid—none genuine without it," declares Mr. Horn.

But it was not the only stunt which the Klansmen tried to frighten the superstitious Negroes. Sometimes the leader would put a false head, made of a gourd with a mask attached, on top of his head and wear his robe up over this false head. During the interview, he would thrust the masked gourd at the Negro saying "Here, hold my head a moment." The terror which this request inspired is easily imagined. Sometimes he would ask the Negro to shake hands with him and when the black man reached out he would be met with a hand made of wood and painted white so that it looked exactly like that of a skeleton.

During one such visit in Mississippi the Negro was asked, "Have you got a mattock?" Upon replying that he had, he was told by the ghostly visitor, "Well, come along with me to the graveyard. My headstone is so close to my head I can't rest good in my grave. I want you to help me move it."

"It is particularly interesting to observe the frequency with which the unsung and anonymous but prolific poets of the Reconstruction era were moved to lyrical composition in connection with the rise and fall of the Ku Klux," observes Mr. Horn. He then cites the case of a Carpetbag preacher, named Reverend A. W. Cummings, who became tax assessor and collector in Spartanburg, S. C. When President Grant sent Federal troops to Spartanburg in 1871 to suppress the Klan, the local newspaper, named the Spartan, printed the following "impious gibe" at Reverend Cummings, which it called "A Reverend Gentleman's Evening Prayer":

Now I lay me down to sleep;
I pray thee, Grant, my body keep
Just let the soldiers round me stand
And drive away the Ku Klux band,
That I may have one night of rest
With consciousness of safety blessed.
And though my conscience sting no more,
I think I may make out to snore
A grateful song I then will raise,
Thy soldiers and thy grace to praise.
Amen.

When Gen. George Meade, the victor of Gettysburg, was placed in command of one of the military districts in the South, he issued a general order calling for the suppression of the Ku Klux Klan and forbidding the newspapers to print anything "furthering the Ku Klux cause." Thereupon some unknown poet printed in the Augusta (Ga.) Register and Chronicle the following:

GENERAL ORDER NO. 30,721

Let every Ku Klux Klansman heed
The General Order of General Meade.
His Highness has received a fright
And can not sleep by day or night.
He sees in every Southern man
A member of the Ku Klux Klan,
And every time a ram's horn toots
(Poor fellow) trembles in his boots.

Oh, dear! Oh, dear! how they annoy him,
Hence his orders to destroy 'em.
So let every Klansman heed
The General Order of General Meade;
And all observe this General Rule,
Signed and sealed by Meade

PAUL WRITES PERSONAL LETTERS

LESSON TEXT—II Timothy 1:1-6; Philemon 1-7, 21, 22.

GOLDEN TEXT—Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—II Timothy 2:15.

Letters—what interest we all take in them! We go to town to get the mail, or we stop our work at the familiar signal of the postman. Too little thought is given to the possibility that our letters may be a means of blessing in God's hand. Paul has given us model Christian epistles.

In considering our lesson it is difficult to indicate specific verses, but the reader can readily identify the truth taken from the lesson under each division.

I. Remembrance.

Paul did not write letters which were impersonal and distant in spirit. The warmth of a loving heart, the refreshing recollection of past fellowship, a genuine interest in the joys and sorrows of his brethren put love into every sentence of his letters.

We need to learn the art of writing letters. Even so-called business communications may often carry a touch of encouragement or inspiration. Personal letters should certainly be a constant medium of keeping bright the flame of affection between parents and children, brothers and sisters, and Christian friends separated by distance.

Observe that the remembrance of Paul had to do with both personal and spiritual matters, and note how naturally and easily the two blend. There should be no need of being offensively "preachy" in writing letters. The personal and spiritual interests of our lives should be so close together that we normally and without effort can put them forth as one in spirit.

II. Inspiration.

Who has not had the unforgettable experience of receiving a letter just when its cheering word was needed. Many a man has been saved from despair and possible destruction by such "a word fitly spoken" which is "like apples of gold in pictures of silver" (Prov. 25:11). "A word spoken in due season, how good is it!" (Prov. 15:23).

We enjoy receiving such letters—do we make an effort to write them to others? Or do we excuse ourselves by saying, "You know I am such a poor letter-writer!" when the fact is that we are probably lazy or indifferent to the needs of our friends?

Notice that Paul's inspiration and instruction to his friends revolved around two points—his constant prayers on their behalf and his faithful presentation of the teaching of God's Word. If we would follow his example we must first really pray and then study God's Word for ourselves before we shall be ready to pass it on to others.

III. Admonition.

Scolding has no place in a letter, but kindly admonition is quite in order. Paul improved every opportunity to urge his readers to personal piety, Christian fellowship, attendance upon the means of grace, prayer, and the study of God's Word. He also urged his young brother in the Lord's service to "stir up the gift of God" which was in him. The influence of the world, the pressure of work, or some burden of spirit might cause a man to bog down in the slough of despond or of mediocrity. A letter from a true Christian friend at such a time might well be the means in God's hand of renewing holy resolves and of stimulating renewed endeavor. Do you think of someone who is waiting for that kind of a letter from you?

IV. Co-operation.

Friendship and fellowship are not one-sided. The very words demand the existence and interaction of two personal beings. "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly" (Prov. 18:24). Paul recognized this, and when he wrote to Philemon he gave him opportunity to respond in loving obedience to a request while at the same time he showed the highest degree of Christian consideration and courtesy toward Philemon. The epistle is a "masterpiece of persuasive tact and delicacy and an enduring model of truest Christian courtesy" (Ellicott).

No right thinking person is satisfied to be the constant recipient of the love and thoughtfulness of another with no opportunity to reciprocate. The smallest child or the humblest individual who must receive help wants to show his loving appreciation. A considerate friend will therefore open such an opportunity, not as a command or in a spirit of expecting something in return, but as an act of Christian courtesy.

God's Own Spirit

To believe, not because we are learned and can prove, but because there is a something in us, even God's own spirit, which makes us feel light and truth as truth—this is the blessed faith.—F. W. Robertson

Home Sewn Aids To Summer Beauty

ADD variety and color, as well as smartness, to your summer wardrobe by making the charming accessory set in gay printed cottons like linen, pique or gingham. It's very easy to do—even the gloves, which have the new, roomy, blunt fingers. Your pattern (1643), includes a step-by-step sew chart that tells you exactly what to do.

This princess dress for afternoons is exactly what you want for hot summer days. This style (1752) is refreshingly simple, and it has a beautifully smooth, slim figure-line, upped sleeves, and a square neckline dipped in the front to make it more becoming.

The frills at the neckline, sleeve edges and foot of the skirt, make this dress very feminine and flower-like. And it's so easy! The dress itself practically puts itself together, and the frills can be sewn in, in no time! Linen, voile, silk print organdy or flat crepe are pretty materials for this.

The Patterns.

No. 1643 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2⅓ yards of 36-inch material for jacket; ⅓ yard for gloves, and ⅛ yard contrast; 1⅛ yards for scarf; ⅝ yard for bag.

No. 1752 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 takes 4¾ yards of 39-inch material; 4¾ yards of pleating or ruffling.

DAD—"KING" FOR A DAY!

Sunday, June 18th is supposed to be "Dad's Day." But nobody takes it very seriously . . . not eved on that day with a box of cignized on the calendar. Of all the important dates given on a number of calendars, we failed to see Dad's Day marked on any of them. That shows the importance of the day.

Just why Fathers Day has been established . . . none of the fathers seem to know. If Dad is rememberrods and reels and giving them gars, carton of cigarettes or fishing tackle or golf supplies, chances are that the articles he receives will never be used . . . Dad likes to pick his own . . . any way, he should have that right . . . It's Dad who pays the bill!

ANOTHER RED LETTER DAY FOR FISHERMEN

Sportsmen are again getting out pies must be seven inches long, blue the once over for the "second" opening date of the fishing season. Thursday, June 15th the season will be open on bass, blue gills, crappies, sunfish and other members of the finny tribe related to the sporty bass.

Just to refresh your memory in case you might have forgotten, the catch limit on large or small mouth black bass is five. The large mouth bass must be at leat twelve inches long, and the mall mouth, ten in.

The catch limit on crappies, blue gills and sun fish is fifteen. Crappies must be seven inche ong, blue gill and sunfish five inches long.

The season on silver bass, pike, norterns, perch and bullheads opened May 15th.

The open season on bass, crappies and bluegills furnished great sport to the fisherman who likes to use a light fly rod and artificial flies and bugs with which he captures the battling bass and thus adds more to the thrill of the sport.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

STATE LEASES

Several state departments are as yet without pemanent homes due to Republican determination to consolidate and Democratic methods of closing leases. As much as a new state office building seems justified at this time, an economy minded Republican legislature couldn't bring itself to spend upwards of a million dolars even though the money coud have been found without new taxes or diversion from other funds. Such leases as were expired have not been renewed by the present administration except where this could be done with a satisfactory cancellation clause and a reduction in rent. The Republican administration had plans worked out to vacate one large office building in downtown Des Moines through a consolidation process but discovered the outgoing administration signed a new ten year lease just before it went out of office. The public was advised at the time that the lease carried a cancellation clause but it has just been learned that the lease can be cancelled only in event a new state office building is constructed.

NO INCREASED LEVY

There have been a few published statements made by men whose business it is to view Republican fiscal policy with high soprano alarm intended to suggest that an increased state tax levy may be expected next fall. In a recent letter to Lieutenant Governor B. B. Hickenlooper, Comptroller C. Fred Porter seems to settle that implication definitely. Mr. Porter says "administrative appropriations seem to be more than $3,000,000 in addition to those of the 47th General Assembly but we take into consideration some of the departments that were transferred to the General Fund of the state." The Comptroller points out that "in making transfers of departments—Secretary of State's office to Public Safety; Securities department to Insurance Department; peace officers, fire marshall and others to Public Safety; investment of securities from Auditor to Insurance Department; Inheritance Tax and Cigarette tax from State Treasurer to Tax Commission . . . . . will undoubtedly result in considerable saving." He further points out that "budgeting of the Highway Commission will just about offset the farm-to-market program" and that a little more than $2,000,000 was made available to Board of Control and Board of Education for state institutions without increasing the tax load upon real estate one penny." Concluding Mr. Porter says that it "appears no increase in the state levy will be required because the many savings will offset any such threat."

MILROY TO RETIRE

Alhough the Republican State Central Committee will no doubt resort again to an attempt to table the resignation when it is presented, it seems certain that State Chairman James H. Milroy of Vinton will retire from the committee at its next official session in Des Moines, June 23. Milroy assumed leadership of the committee less than a year ago and announced that he would relinquish the post the day following the November election. He agreed, however, to remain as chairman of the committee until the Republican administration was organized and in office and until the 48th General Assembly concluded its work. Unlike the Democratic State Central Committee where it is known several factions struggle for control and a chairmanship which Birmingham is expected to vacate shortly, the Republican organization is without internal dissension. Members of the Republican committee expect Milroy's successor to be chose without any indication of disharmony or diversion from the basic theme of the 1938 campaign "good government, open doors and flat top desks.

MILROY'S HOBBY

Politics with Milroy has been more or less a hobby. He has repeatedly refused offers of lucrative appointment and confesses to no interest in elective office. In addition to the extensive law practice which is the chief reason for his wish to retire from the state committee, he has other business interests including the farms which were his principle hobby until he turned to public life. Convinced that state government had drifted a long way from Iowa tradition, Milroy urged his party to view its responsibility as something "more serious than a three-ring circus." His confident presence rallied Iowa Republicans of every faction into a determined crusade for an administration free of suspicion and questionable ethics.

TAG ENDS

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

The Klemme Girl Scouts met at the home of Barbara and Shirley Johnson on Wednesday, June 7th at 2:00 p. m.

After roll call we reviewed the garden flowers by each girl telling about her favorite flower. We also told what kind of flowers would make a good border flower. We told about our favorite vegetable, also.

When we were through with this we studied our badges.

Julia Bell, Troop Scribe.

Here is the small combine that gives you a better method of harvesting all small grains, beans and seeds—the Oliver Grain-Master. It is the new low-cost way. Low in first cost, low in power needed. It ends your hard work of binding, shocking and threshing; ends your wife's work, the feeding of threshing gangs. The Grain-Master saves more grain and does it at lower cost.

The Oliver hinged and balanced header cuts a full 6-foot swath and lays the standing grain on the draper, straight and smooth. The "hinge-float" feeder house automatically follows the lev of the header. Both are controlled by a sing easily reached, squeeze-grip lever. The grain carried straight to the feeder house and straight to the cylinder. Then grain and str move straight through the final threshing cleaning operations that save more of yo grain, cleaned to a bright merchantable grad Draft is light. Weight is light. Price is lo Roller bearing, air-tire wheels move easily even ov soft soils. See us about Oliver Grain-Master and Oliver "70" to handle it Make certain of saving yo high-priced crop this year.

Turkey Put to Queer Uses Not Found in Cookery Book

The turkey is put to some queer uses that you will not find in any cookery book It has an extremely powerful gizzard, lined with a horny substance, forming a natural millstone good enough to grind down the points of lancets and needles. Now there is a constant demand for seals and small gems from Pompeii and Herculaneum, a demand far exceeding the supply. Most of those sold are fakes, cut in Italian workshops. The peculiar dull, semi-corroded appearance of the genuine article is got by making turkeys swallow these fakes, which stay in the gizzard until they are given the final convincing touch, and deceive the expert.

Turkeys' feathers are the finest for arrows used in archery, excepting peacocks, of which the supply is too limited. Only about five feathers from each wing are suitable, and these have the barb on one side only. Their particular virtue is that they stay quite stiff after being glued to the wooden shaft. Even eagles' feathers are too weak for this purpose. Before the value of turkeys' feathers was discovered about a century ago, goose-feathers were used for arrows.

The smaller feathers of the turkeys are used for stuffing mattresses; the lighter ones for making brushes for dusting furniture. The Indians of the wild turkey countries weave the feathers into a network made of the bark of the mulberry tree. And turkey feathers are used extensively in making fans, especially in France.—Tit-Bits.

Pietermaritzburg Oldest But One in South Africa

Although it is the smallest of the four capitals of the Union of South Africa, Pietermaritzburg holds the distinction of being the oldest and most historic city outside of Cape Province, for Port D'Urban, as Durban was then called, consisted of but a handful of English when, in 1838, the Voortrekkers founded the town of Pietermaritzburg.

Since that time one hundred years ago, events have passed across the page of history, like shadow pictures on a wall, scenes of hopes and disappointments and constructive effort, says the Christian Science Monitor Today the town is known as "the Garden Colony of Natal," a city of lovely residential streets lined with blue jacaranda trees and well-designed public and private gardens among fine civic buildings.

The early Dutch settlers, called Voortrekkers, came to Natal from the Cape in 1838. Their new town was planned and laid out with spacious streets and an open square. A Volksraad was formed in 1839 a year after the small township came into being, and it received its official name of Pietermaritzburg, after two former Dutch leaders.

HOUSE MOVED IN TWO MILES FROM COUNTRY; CROSS RIVER

A house being moved in from the country attracted more or less attention the fore part of the week as inquisitive bystanders gathered to watch the moving procedure.

The house was purchased from Henry Ward by Leoppo Wessels and will be moved to Mr. Wessels' lot north of the Levi Klotzbach residence. The moving involved the task of crossing the Iowa River northeast of the Church farm. The house-mover had to build his own bridge at the river, as the road bridge there would not stand the load of some 65 tons.

CORWITH ARSONIST ESCAPES PRISON FRIDAY

Officers were searching Sunday for Frank Weider, 55, Corwith, who escaped Friday night from the prison farm at Fort Madison where he was serving a 20 year term for arson. He was arrested two years ago in connection with the murder of Bert Afinson, Corwith beer parlor operator, which has never been solved. While in jail he confessed to the burning of the Eva May residence at Corwith and was sentenced for the arson.

Married Here Sunday

A New Chocolate Cake.

4 ounces bitter chocolate
¾ cup butter
1½ cups granulated sugar
3 eggs
2¼ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt the chocolate over warm water. Cream the butter and add the sugar, slowly, beating vigorously. Beat the yolks of the eggs until thick and add to the sugar and butter mixture. Add the melted chocolate and mix well. Sift the flour, salt, baking powder, and add alternately with the milk and extract, beginning with the flour mixture. Beat egg whites until they are stiff, and fold into cake. Bake in two eight-inch layers in a moderate oven (365 degrees Fahrenheit) for about 30 minutes.

Chocolate Gingerbread.

⅔ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 ounces chocolate (melted)
2 eggs
1⅔ cups pastry flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons ginger
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup nuts (broken)
⅔ cup milk

Cream the shortening and add the brown sugar very slowly, making sure all lumps are removed. Add the chocolate which has been melted over warm water, and the eggs, well beaten. Sift the dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Add the nuts, broken in small pieces. Bake as loaf cake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 30 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

HOW TO SEW

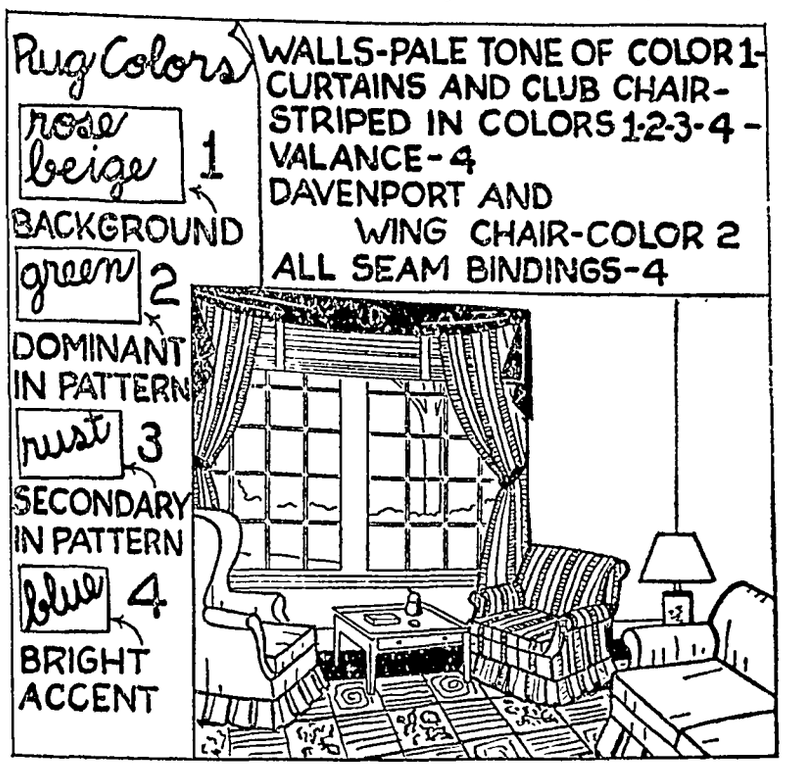
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Right Colors for Curtains and Slipcovers.

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have your Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator, and the directions for slipcovers are so clear in the sketches that I have decided to cover my living room furniture which consists of a davenport, a club chair and a wing chair. I would like to have your suggestions for colors for these and for curtains."

With this letter there was a detailed description of the rug in the room. There have been a good many letters of this type lately, so I am showing you here how to analyze the colors in a figured rug and use them as a guide in planning a room.

It is not important that the rug color scheme be followed exactly, but do make a little chart of the rug colors as shown here at the left. If you do not wish to repeat the background color for your walls, use a pale tone of one of the other colors A stronger tone of any color in the rug may become your accent color.

NOTICE: Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator, and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, are now 15 cents each, or both books for 25 cents. Readers who have not secured their copies of these two books should send in their orders immediately, as no more copies will be available, when the present supply is exhausted. Your choice of the QUILT LEAFLET illustrating 36 authentic patchwork stitches; or the RAG RUG LEAFLET, will be included with orders for both books for the present, but the offer may be withdrawn at any time. Leaflets are six cents each when ordered separately.

Everyone should have copies of these two books containing 96 How to Sew articles by Mrs. Spears, that have not appeared in the paper. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

To Find Our Duty

This truth comes to us more and more the longer we live that on what field or in what uniform or with what aims we do our duty matters little, or even what our duty is, great or small, splendid or obscure. Only to find our duty certainly, and somewhere, somehow, to do it faithfully, makes us good, strong, happy and useful.

Who's Who in Moon

Is the moon inhabited? You would imagine so if you read "Who's Who in the Moon," compiled and just issued by the British Astronomical society. In it you will come across the names of 600 men and nine women. They are not, however, of moon-dwellers, but of astronomers, explorers, scientists, and philanthropists who have helped to map the surface of the planet, work first begun in the year 1645.

All the known high mountains and wide craters of the moon have been named. World-famous names such as Copernicus, Plato, Keppler are side by side with Smith and Williams. Eleven persons living today have achieved moon immortality.

Perhaps the Darky's Ducks Were Storks

A salesman was rattling along a country road in Tennessee, when he came to a ford. A Negro was standing by the little stream where some ducks were swimming. The salesman said: "Can I get through the creek with this car all right?"

"Yes, suh, drive right through."

The salesman, thus encouraged, drove into the stream, only to find that the water was so deep that it flooded his engine.

The salesman turned and said: "What do you mean by telling me that I could drive through?"

"Well, boss, I never knew dat water was so deep. It only comes half-way up on my ducks!"

Beginning of Olympic Games

The modern Olympic games began with an international athletic meet in the stadium at Athens, Greece, in 1896. This was made possible largely through the munificence of a wealthy Greek of Alexandria, George Aberoff, and the Greek national committee. Baron Pierre de Coubertine, a Frenchman and promoter of international goodwill, was chiefly responsible for organizing the international athletic committee in 1895 to re-establish these games, to be held every four years in some country chosen by the committee It is a counterpart of the ancient Greek Olympic festival, intended to contribute to the cause of sportsmanship and international friendship.

Human Body Is the Most Complicated of Machines

Your body is one of the most interesting machines ever seen; a machine so complicated that the chief wonder is that it does not give trouble more often, says Tit-Bits. It contains about 2,500,000 pores—about 3,000 to the square inch—and the human skeleton has more than 200 bones! All the blood in your body is pumped through your heart once every minute, and your heart beats about 70 times a minute, or 100,800 times a day. The average person can hold about 230 cubic inches of air in the lungs, and at each breath about 25-30 cubic inches is inhaled and exhaled. Most men breathe about 18 times a minute; women slightly faster.

Your body has more than 500 muscles and about an equal number of nerves and blood vessels, and your normal temperature is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. Every day your body throws off about four pints of water: 20 ounces from the skin, ten ounces from the lungs and 50 ounces from the kidneys. In addition to this you lose about half an ounce of nitrogen, an ounce of mineral salts and eight ounces of carbon.

To counteract this waste the average person takes in about 5½ pounds of food and drink a day, which is almost a ton in a year.

Funeral Services Will Be Held Thursday For J. W. Cutshall

Funeral services for Mr John Wesley Cutshall, 65, will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Methodist Church at De Soto, Iowa, with the Rev. W L. Hawn, pastor of the Van Meter, Iowa, church, preaching the funeral sermon and assisted by Dr Wm Zabilka, pastor of the Klemme Methodist Church Funeral arrangements are in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service of Klemme.

Farmed East Of Klemme

The Cutshall family moved from near De Soto this spring to a farm eight and one-half miles east of Klemme. Mr. Cutshall engaged extensively in feeding cattle and was associated with his sons in this line of business on an 800 acre farm.

Mr. Cutshall and his family are members of the Klemme Methodist Church, having transferred their membership here and becoming members on Easter Sunday.

Obituary

John Wesley Cutshall was born Nov. 30, 1873 on a farm near Van Meter, Iowa, the second of a family of six children born to his parents, Samuel and Sarah Cutshall.

His boyhood days were spent on the farm and he attended the rural schools nearby. He regularly attended the Methodist Church at Van Meter with his parents, and became a member early in life.

John W. Cutshall and Ida M. Green were married, March 24th, 1909, at Farnhamville, Iowa. They commenced housekeeping on a farm south of Van Meter, Iowa, and later moved to a farm west of De Soto, Iowa, where they remained for 25 years.

On March 1st, 1939 Mr. and Mrs. Cutshall, with their family of grown sons and daughters, moved to an eight hundred acre farm east of Klemme, Iowa, and just as they were getting nicely started and everything working in a methodical manner, the father became seriously ill with a liver ailment. He was taken to the hospital and would have found relief, but a sudden heart complication appeared which proved fatal.

He passed away Monday noon, June 19th, 1939, and reached the age of 65 years, 6 months and 20 days.

He leaves besides his wife: two daughters, Emma and Susie; three sons, Homer, Forest and Leo, all at home; two brothers, George Cutshall, Perry Cutshall, both of Van Meter, Iowa; one sister, Mrs. Janey Sheets, Webster City, Iowa, and many more distant relatives and friends.

Buried At De Soto

Interment was in the family lot of the Oakland Cemetery near De Soto, Iowa, and Mr. Cutshall was carried to his last resting place by Clarence Cutshall, Wm. Hoyle, Wm. Green, Earl Hoyle, Frank Gruber, Merle Hoyle, Clarence Gotter, and Byron Rogers.

Sunday School Convention Here Two Days Attracted Large Crowd

FALL GARDEN SHOULD BE STARTED AT THIS TIME

A midsummer day's dream for many gardeners is a planting of vegetables that will mature for fall use.

From June 20 to July 15 is the time to make such midsummer plantings, says S. W. Edgecombe, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College.

Vegetables which can be planted late are carrots, beets, chinese cabbage and parsnips. After August 1 turnips will do best, and about September 1 is the best time to plant radishes, lettuce and spinach. Sweet corn and beans will make good fall crops. Plantings should be made a little deeper than in the spring.

Carrots and beets ,when allowed to mature in the cool wet weather of fall, are better for storage than those which mature earlier.

Edgecombe says chinese cabbage is one of the best fall salad crops. It can be planted from July 1 to 15. It should be planted directly in the field and not transplanted. If it is moved, satisfactory heads do not form. After the plants are 3 to 4 inches high they should be thinned so that they are 18 inches apart.

IT'S SUN, NOT FLIES, THAT CAUSES DROP IN MILK FLOW IN SUMMER

Cows cannot "take" hot weather any easier than can man. When the rays from a hot summer's sun pelt down on bossy's back, she heads for the shade.

So it's the sun and not the flies that causes the sudden drop in milk flow during torrid summer days, acrording to C. Y. Cannon, head of the department at Iowa State College.

Feed Shortage

Another cause for a lessened milk flow is that the cows may not be getting enough feed from their pasture.

"The only way to judge a pasture is by the results it produces in the milk pail, not by how the forage may appear to be," Cannon says.

In any case, when production takes a drop the cows are not getting enough to eat.

Grain Helps

Silage is a valuable supplement to summer pastures. Grain should be fed if the dairyman feels that the extra cost will be more than balanced by the value of the increased milk flow which the grain produces.

Although good pasture is the ideal feed for dairy cows, high-producers can't eat enough to meet their needs. For cows producing a pound or more of fat a day, experience has shown that they need 1 pound of grain for each 5 to 7 pounds of milk produced daily.

The amounts of grain and the protein supplement fed must be increased when the pastures become dry, Cannon says.

NEW AUXILIARY OFFICERS WILL BE INSTALLED AT JULY MEETING

The recently elected officers of the American Legion Auxiliary Unit of Klemme will be installed at the regular July meeting.

The new officers to take over the several posts include Mrs. P. W. Johnson, president; Mrs. Helen Kirkwood, vice-president; Mrs. Ben Coobs, secretary and treasurer; Miss Lydia Bock, Chaplain; Mrs. Lester Stille, historian; Mrs. Herman Paul, Sergeant-at-Arms.

The Executive Board will be Mrs. Jake Hess, Mrs. Ernest Helps and Mrs. W. F. Pavey.

OVER 120 ATTENDED CONVENTION HERE LAST WEEK

Last week Tuesday and Wednesday a convention of the Young People's Societies and Sunday Schools of the Northeast Confederation of the Evangelical and Reformed Churches was held at the local Reformed Church.

Rev. Armin Suedmeyer sounded the key note of the convention, which opened at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning In his devotion he stated that in Christ we behold ourselves as in a mirror. Christ is seeking men who are not only hearers but doers. Rev. Grosshuesch welcomed the delegates in the name of the Klemme Reformed Church and Rev. Birkner of Geneva, president of the convention, responded.

The main speaker of the convention was Rev. Thomas A. Marshall of St. Louis, Mo. The subjects of his three lectures were: "The Boldness of Faith," "New Power for Achievement, and "Reconsecration." Each of these were interesting, biblical and instructive.

Rev. W. Schaeffer of St. Louis, spoke at the evening service. His sermon was based on John 21-22, "Follow Thou Me."

Other speakers were Dr. C. Hauser of Philadelphia, Pa., and Dr. Paul Grosshuesch of Plymouth, Wis.

Delegations of young people were prsent from the following places: New Albin, Gladbrook, Elkader, Alleman, Geneva, Union City, Fredricksburg, Newton, Tripoli, Ackley, Denver, Pleasant Valley, Hubbard, Garber, Wellsburg, Waverly, Alden, Waukon, Nashua, Hampton, Manly, Melbourne, and Klemme.

About 120 delegates and ministers registered and were in attendance at the meetings. Tuesday evening a banquet was served by the Adult Bible Class. The young people had charge of the dining room and had decorated the banquet hall appropriately. During the banquet hour Rev. Koch of Fredricksburg led in group singing.

Officers elected for the next two year term were as follows: President, Rev. A. Suedmeyer, New Albin; Vice Presidents, Rev. E. Florin and Rev. C. Schrupp, Garber.

The next convention will be held at Elkader, Iowa, Rev. P. Kitterer, Pastor,

The delegates were entertained in various homes in Klemme and community Tuesday evening.

The local committees received many compliments for the splendid way in which all arrangements had been made and the guests cared for throughout the sessions of the convention. A large number of Klemme Young People are planning to attend next year's convention at Elkader.

German Corner on Munitions Makes U. S. Embargo Provision Help Reich's Cause, Is Charge

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

NEUTRALITY:
Co-operation?

German domination over lesser European nations need not only mean dependence on the Reich for peacetime manufactured goods. If such was the case last year, Adolf Hitler's aggression this spring added military domination to the already pressing economic leverage. Reason: Already boss of Germany's mighty Krupp works, Berlin captured the even mightier Skoda plants when Czecho-Slovakia fell before the conquerer. Until then southeast Europe's minor nations (like Rumania, Greece, Turkey and Jugoslavia) had Skoda guns and shells to ward off the aggressive Reich. Today Skoda munitions go mainly to Germany and can be bought by lesser nations only in exchange for concessions.

CZECHIA'S SKODA WORKS
It may change U. S. policy.

Aggravating the situation is the Anglo-French rearmament program, which demands domestic consumption of all munitions produced in those nations' plants. Lesser countries get none.

This forceful argument against current U. S. neutrality legislation was apparently saved for the crucial moment. Not offered early this session during house and senate committee hearings, it was plumped in their laps unexpectedly by Secretary of State Cordell Hull just as the two houses seemed likely to give neutrality an airing.

It seemed a fairly sound basis for changing U. S. policy, isolationists notwithstanding. Since the Nazi government has become No. 1 source of military supplies, moreover since practically continuous German mobilization aggravates the situation, Mr. Hull joined Nevada's Sen. Key Pittman in demanding repeal of the neutrality act's embargo provision.

(This provision stipulates that once the President finds a state of war exists in any foreign conflict, the sale of U. S. arms and munitions is prohibited.)

Best anti-embargo argument: That it actually places the U. S. in a position of co-operating with Nazi Germany in freezing out smaller nations by depriving them of munitions.

On the surface less pressing when war scares have temporarily died down, neutrality revision seemed out of the question if congress is to consider tax revision, relief appropriations and social security and still adjourn by July 15.

PENSIONS:
Revision

Downed in the house 302 to 97 was Dr. Francis E. Townsend's visionary plan to give everyone over 60 about $200 a month through a $20,000,000,000-a-year 3 per cent transaction tax. This was beaten before it reached the floor, much to the embarrassment of representatives who accepted Townsend support last election. But by adjournment time congress will probably liberalize social security to start paying 65-year-oldsters next year on basis of their average previous wages rather than on their payroll tax accumulations:

Method. Under present rules, social security taxes would rise from 1 per cent to 1½ per cent against both employer and employee on January 1, 1940; to 2 per cent in 1943; 2½ per cent in 1946; and 3 per cent in 1949. Probable revision: Current 1 per cent rate against each will be frozen for three years.

Results. At present a worker now making $100 a month would get nothing but a small lump sum settlement in 1940. Under revisions, he would begin getting $25.75 a month if single and $38.63 if married.

Significance. By cutting payroll contributions and boosting pensions, congress will upset the elaborately planned program for a $48,000,000,000 old-age reserve account by 1980, scheduled to draw 3 per cent interest as it grew through the years. Proposed amendments, however, are merely being realistic about the fact that the current $2,000,000,000 reserve is all I. O. U.'s from the treasury, whose interest is paid by borrowing more money and thus raising taxes.

COMMUNICATIONS:
Free Speech?

Fourteen U. S. radio stations are "international," i.e., they direct broadcasts to foreign continents (chiefly Latin America) as well as to home listeners. European stations do likewise, but under government orders they propagandize programs in a way that the U. S. Constitution would forbid as an impediment to guaranteed free speech.

Surprised and puzzled, therefore, were the 14 international stations when Washington's unpopular federal communications commission ordered that beginning November 1 their programs must "promote international good will, understanding and co-operation." When time comes to renew their year-by-year licenses, stations must show their programs have reflected the "culture of this country."

What FCC denied was censorship, nevertheless seemed that way to more than one congressman.

PEOPLE:
Men at Work

Three new jobs for the following men may soon make news:

GROVER CLEVELAND BERGDOLL, notorious World war draft dodger, now in military prison after returning from Germany, says he will use his wealth to relieve U. S. employment by opening his Philadelphia brewery and other inherited property. Other plans include a private building project on his 24½ acre farm near Philadelphia.

ADM. WILLIAM D. LEAHY, retiring chief of U. S. naval operations, whose projected appointment as Puerto Rican governor to succeed Blanton Winship was mysteriously dropped, is now expected to succeed Claude A. Swanson as secretary of the navy. Already past retirement age, Admiral Leahy is remaining as naval chief temporarily.

JESSE JONES, Texan chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, is expected to be named administrator of the consolidated federal lending agency effective July 1 under President Roosevelt's first government reorganization plan. Mr. Jones may also administer the proposed program of loans to small business.

TREASURY:
News Notes

June 15 is quarterly U. S. treasury refinancing time. Only refinancing this June is an offer to exchange $426,554,600 in 1⅜ per cent notes maturing next September for new five year, ¾ per cent notes maturing June 15, 1944. No new money will be needed until September. Other treasury news:

¶ During the first 11 months of the 1938-39 fiscal year the U. S. operated with a deficit of $3,240,467,092, which will probably hit $4,000,000,000 by year's end on June 30.

¶ Secretary Morgenthau revealed only 49 Americans had million-dollar incomes in 1937, compared with 61 in 1936. Yet 6,350,148 people filed 1937 income tax returns, compared with only 5,413,499 in 1936.

¶ Okayed by the senate was a measure to remove the $30,000,000 limit on federal bond insurance, though the total debt limit of $45,000,000,000 (to be reached next fiscal year) remains undisturbed.

ONWARD

TELEPHONE—If the 560,000 telephone wires under one New York corner were strung above ground, 9,000 strings of poles would be needed to carry them. Laid underground, cable compactness has heretofore reached such efficiency that one cable 2⅝ inches in diameter would carry 3,636 wires. Newest exploit: Placing 4,242 insulated wires in a cable the same thickness.

HANGOVER—Air sickness, discovered Dr. Arnold D. Tuttle of United airlines' medical department, results from lack of oxygen. Finding that air travelers with hangovers suffered most, Dr. Tuttle decided that morning-after feeling is characterized by pronounced want of oxygen. Therefore he thinks mild doses of pure oxygen should be an antidote for too much alcohol, opening the way for drug store oxygen bars.

POLITICS:
Showdown

When asked about a third term, President Roosevelt promptly discusses the weather, a habit chiefly distressful to West Virginia's anti-New Deal Sen. Rush D. Holt. Strongly against a third term, Rush Holt would need only a hint from the Sphynx-like White House to demand senate confirmation of a resolution he has kept pocketed more than a year. That resolution would forbid a third term.

Paridoxically, two New Dealers who least want a Roosevelt third term are greatest battlers against the Holt resolution. Both potential 1940 candidates, Vice President

SENATOR HOLT
The question: Resolve or not?

John N. Garner and Postmaster General James A. Farley fear a showdown. Reason: If the resolution were defeated after much-publicized Senate debate, the public might interpret it as a vote of confidence in President Roosevelt, thus encouraging him to run again.

Contrariwise, Republicans and anti-New Deal senators favor a vote immediately, win or lose. Reason: The badly split Democratic party's No. 1 need is an immediate decision by President Roosevelt. If the resolution carries, that decision will be made for him; if it is defeated, he will be forced to say whether or not he will run.

AGRICULTURE:
Downgrade

In booming 1929 U. S. gross farm income was $12,791,000,000. In depression-ridden 1932 it was less than half, or $5,562,000,000. Returning prosperity zoomed it to $10,350,000,000 in 1937. But in 1938, according to bureau of agricultural economics reports, it dropped again to $9,220,000,000.

This was not unexpected, since farm income always follows the general economic trend. Chief interesting revelations: (1) That, contrary to popular belief, the U. S. farm problem is not confined to a few major crops like cotton and wheat; (2) that the $482,000,000 in U. S. subsidies for 1938 was 31 per cent more than in 1937 ($367,000,000), yet total income went down anyway.

Two possible deductions: (1) That all the U. S. government's costly farm relief measures have been ineffective; (2) that on the contrary they have been effective in bolstering farm income during natural "off" years.

Sample comparative incomes:

| Crop | 1938 | 1937 |
|---|---|---|
| Corn | $ 291,315,000 | $ 248,914,000 |

OATMEAL MEAT PATTIES
See Recipe Below.

When the Allowance Is Low

Lucky is the homemaker who has tucked away on her pantry shelf a package or two of oatmeal, and in her recipe file a half-dozen clever suggestions for using it in her menus. For oatmeal is a quick change artist, and with a little ingenuity you can turn out a whole array of tempting, unusual dishes as delicious to eat as they are inexpensive to eat.

For example, have you ever tried making light, flavorsome raisin muffins with oatmeal? Or have you used oatmeal in a thick, hearty vegetable soup to give it that "stick - to - the-ribs" quality so much to be desired for active families? Had you thought of using it to stretch the meat budget, by making a little meat go a long way in meat patties or meat loaf? You've used oatmeal for luscious, soft, chewy cookies, of course, but have you tried it for making the crust for a delectable apple pudding, or have you substituted it for nut meats in a rich-tasting torte?

You see, besides adding interest and variety to meals, and doing a first-class job of budget stretching, oatmeal may be trusted to add a large amount of low-cost food energy to the diet. Oatmeal, moreover, is an excellent source of vitamin B, modernly called thiamin. This vitamin is absolutely necessary to enable the body to transform food (especially carbohydrates) into muscular energy. Thiamin stimulates the appetite, too, and it helps in overcoming constipation, and acts as a prevention of nervousness.

Here, then, is a brand new series of carefully tested recipes, all of which contain oatmeal, all of which will be family favorites in your recipe box.

Oatmeal Apple Torte.
(Makes eight servings)

CRUST:
2 cups flour
¾ cup oatmeal (uncooked)
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup brown sugar
¾ cup butter (melted)

Combine the ingredients in the order in which they are listed. Reserve one cup of this mixture for the top. Pack the remainder into the bottom of an eight-inch square pan.

FILLING:
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup water
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups apples (pared and chopped)

Combine the sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add the water and butter, and cook over a low flame for about 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Cool and add the vanilla and apples. Pour the filling over the crust, and cover with one cup of crust mixture reserved for this. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees) for about one hour. Serve warm with plain or whipped cream.

Oatmeal Raisin Muffins.
(Makes 16-18 small muffins)

1 cup general purpose flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups oatmeal
½ cup seedless raisins
1 egg
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons shortening (melted)

Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add oatmeal and the raisins. Beat the egg, add milk and melted shortening. Combine with dry ingredients and mix very lightly. Pour into greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for approximately 20 minutes.

Vegetable Oatmeal Soup.
(Serves eight)

2 pounds soup bone (½ bone, ½ meat)
2 tablespoons fat
2 quarts water
4 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cups tomatoes (canned)
1 cup carrots (cubed)
¼ cup onion (chopped)
½ cup celery (chopped)
½ cup oatmeal or 1 cup regular rolled oats (uncooked)

Remove part of meat from cracked soup bone, cut meat into cubes and brown lightly in hot fat. Place meat, soup bone, water, salt and pepper in soup kettle. Cover tightly and simmer approximately two hours. Cool, strain, and chill sufficiently so that excess fat may be skimmed off. There should be 6½ cups of soup stock. Return stock to kettle and add vegetables. Bring to a boil, then slowly add oatmeal. Cover and simmer approximately ½ hour, or until vegetables are tender. Soup meat used in making the stock may be cut in small pieces and added. Serve with finely chopped parsley, if desired.

Old-Fashioned Oatmeal Cookies.
(Makes five dozen)

¾ cup shortening
1½ cups dark brown sugar
1½ cups general purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon soda
3 cups oatmeal
⅜ cup sour milk
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cream the shortening and sugar thoroughly. Sift together the flour, salt, and soda, and combine with oatmeal. Add to the creamed mixture, alternately, with the milk. Stir in the vanilla. Roll out to ⅛-inch thickness on a lightly floured board. Cut into 2½-inch rounds with a floured cookie cutter. Bake on a greased cookie sheet in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for about 10 minutes.

Meat Patties.
(Serves six)

6 slices bacon
¾ pound beef (ground)
¼ pound pork (ground)
1 egg (beaten)
1 tablespoon onion (chopped)
1 cup tomatoes (canned or fresh)
¼ cup milk
½ cup oatmeal
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Line six muffin tins with strips of bacon. Combine remaining ingredients and mix well. Put into the muffin tins. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately one hour.

As a Breakfast Food.

Modern homemakers serve oatmeal porridge often and for variety add chopped dates, figs, seedless raisins, or dried prunes or apricots (cut in strips) while cooking.

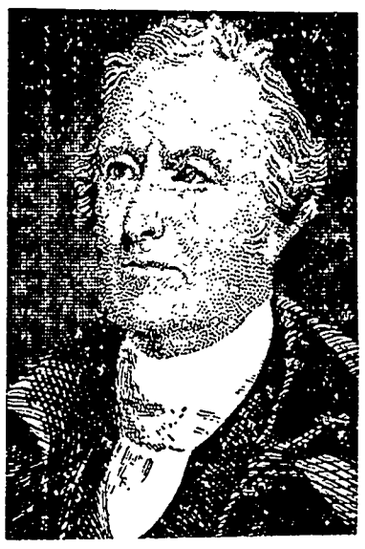
compliment to the young American.

Thomas Jefferson, American minister to France, also saw the painting when he visited London and immediately recognized the genius of his compatriot. He invited Trumbull to come to Paris as his guest and introduced him to some of the leading French painters and sculptors.

For some time Trumbull had been planning to paint the most important scene in the history of the Revolution—the Signing of the Declaration of Independence. There in the home of its author, and aided by that author's suggestions, he made the first sketches of the picture. Returning to London Trumbull arranged the composition so that he could add the portraits of the signers as the opportunity offered. John Adams was just leaving his post as ambassador to the Court of St.



JOHN TRUMBULL

James and his was the first portrait painted in. A few months later the painter went back to Paris and added Jefferson's.

Then the French Revolution put an end to Trumbull's work in Paris. In October, 1789, both he and Jefferson returned to America. Arriving in New York Trumbull found that the Constitution had been adopted and Washington elected President. Here the portraits of Richard Henry Lee, Francis Lewis, George Clinton, Lewis Morris and Roger Sherman were soon added to his canvas.

More Portraits Added.

The next spring the artist went to Philadelphia where he spent three months adding more portraits. During the fall of 1790 Trumbull was in Boston and New Hampshire, painting the portraits of John Hancock, Samuel Adams, Robert Treat Paine, Josiah Bartlett and on subsequent visits to Charleston, S. C., Philadelphia, New York and Boston added others.

The end of Trumbull's great project was almost in sight when political troubles at home and war abroad turned his interest and the interest of his friends from the arts to these more pressing problems. In 1794 Trumbull was appointed secretary to John Jay and accompanied him to England to aid in the negotiations which resulted in the famous Jay's Treaty. For the next decade he was not a painter but an American agent in Europe, part of the time as a commissioner carrying out the stipulations of that treaty.

At this point his painting of the Battle of Bunker Hill comes back into the story in one of the most dramatic incidents in the life of any artist. In 1797 Trumbull was in Paris on his way back from Stuttgart, Germany, where a certain Herr Muller had made an engraving of his Bunker Hill picture.

Robespierre was in power and the Reign of Terror had started. Suddenly the American painter found himself on the "suspect list" (possibly because of his part in negotiating the Jay treaty which was very unpopular in France) and not allowed to leave the country. Trumbull appealed to Talleyrand, the French foreign minister, who was affable enough but said he could do nothing for him, adding that the Americans must pay money for any favors as a nation that they got from the French.

Appeals to Pinckney.

Nor could Charles C. Pinckney of South Carolina, American minister to France, (who was later to be credited with the immortal "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute!" in reply to another French blackmailing demand) do anything for him. In fact, he told Trumbull that both of them were as likely as not to find themselves in the Temple prison—and on the way to the guillotine!

Then Trumbull decided to go to see Louis David, his old friend and fellow-painter. David was now a subordinate of Robespierre and, although Trumbull regarded him as much a murderer as Robespierre, he regarded David's intercession as his only hope. He found the French painter at the Louvre and was greeted warmly. When David learned that Trumbull had his Bunker Hill painting with him he exclaimed: "That picture is worth many passports!"

So he urged Trumbull to hurry to his hotel and get the painting (which was small enough for him to carry under his arm) and then come with him to the police prefecture. As they entered, everyone stood aside respectfully for the "great Republican painter, David," and gazed curiously at his companion, the "notorious suspect." Showing the picture to the chief of police, David stated that the American with him had been in this battle against the hated English and ended his voluble explanation with the declaration: "He is as good a Revolutionist as any of us!"

'His Blood Run Cold.'

Although Trumbull later said that it made his blood run cold to hear himself described as the same type of Revolutionist as his friend (who had told him that it would have been better for the Republic if 5,000 more aristocrats had been guillotined), he was greatly relieved when informed that he would be given a passport out of France. He set out immediately for Calais so as to be safely aboard a ship for England before the police could change their minds and have him arrested. He arrived there safely and never again returned to France.

Trumbull was in England during the War of 1812 and then returned to America to finish his painting of "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence" and three others—"The Surrender of General Burgoyne," "The Surrender of Lord Cornwallis," and "Washington Resigning His Commission." His last years were saddened by illness and poverty. Finally in 1831, he arranged with Yale college to give that institution his unsold paintings for an annuity of $1,000 for the remainder of his life, which ended on November 10, 1843.

That is why the Yale art gallery is today one of America's greatest patriotic shrines. For on its walls hang several of John Trumbull's paintings, among them, "The Battle of Bunker Hill" which once served as a "passport" out of Revolutionary France.

Fifty years after Bunker Hill, the corner stone of the monument which marks the site of the battle was laid. Lafayette was present.

But the outstanding figure there was Daniel Webster, then rising to his heights as public speaker, who was chosen to give the dedicatory address, which has become one of the classics of American oratory. From an eyewitness, Samuel Griswold Goodrich, we have this description of that historic event and the "man of the hour":

The first time I ever saw Mr. Webster was on the seventeenth of June, 1825, at the laying of the corner stone of the Bunker Hill monument. I shall never forget his appearance as he strode across the open area, encircled by some fifty thousand persons—men and women—waiting for the "Orator of the Day," nor the shout that simultaneously burst forth, as he was recognized, carrying up to the skies the name of "Webster!" "Webster!" "Webster!"

It was one of those lovely days in June, when the sun is bright, the air clear, and the breath of nature so sweet and pure as to fill every bosom with a grateful joy in the mere consciousness of existence. There were present long files of soldiers in their holiday attire; there were many associations, with their mottoed banners; there were lodges and grand lodges, in white aprons and blue scarfs; there were miles of citizens from the town and the country round about; there were 200 gray-haired men, remnants of the days of the Revolution; there was among them a stranger, of great mildness and dignity of appearance, on whom all eyes rested, and when his name was known the air echoed with the cry—"Welcome, welcome, Lafayette!" Around all this scene was a rainbow of beauty such as New England alone can furnish.

I have seen many public festivities and ceremonials, but never one, taken all together, of more general interest than this. Webster was in the very zenith of his fame and powers. There was grandeur in his form, an intelligence in his deep dark eye, a loftiness in his expansive brow, a significance in his arched lip, altogether beyond those of any other human being I ever saw. And these, on the occasion to which I allude, had their full expression and interpretation.

In general the oration was serious, full of weighty thought and deep reflection. Occasionally there were flashes of fine imagination, and several passages of deep, overwhelming emotion. I was near the speaker, and not only heard every word, but I saw every movement of his countenance. When he came to address the few scarred and time-worn veterans—some forty in number—who had shared in the bloody scene which all had now gathered to commemorate, he paused a moment, and, as he uttered the words "Venerable men," his voice trembled, and I could see a cloud pass over the sea of faces that turned upon the speaker. When at last, alluding to the death of Warren, he said— "But ah, Him!—the first great martyr of this great cause. Him, the patriotic victim of his own self-devoting heart. Him, cut off by Providence in the hour of overwhelming anxiety and thick gloom; falling ere he saw the star of his country rise—how shall I struggle with the emotions that stifle the utterance of thy name!" Here the eyes of the veterans around, little accustomed to tears, were filled to the brim, and some of them "sobbed aloud in their fullness of heart." The orator went on:

"Our poor work may perish, but thine shall endure; this monument may moulder away, the solid ground it rests upon may sink down to the level of the sea; but thy memory shall not fail. Wherever among men a heart shall be found that beats to the transports of patriotism and liberty, its aspirations shall claim kindred with thy spirit!"

I have never seen such an effect, from a single passage; a moment before, every bosom bent, every brow was clouded, every eye was dim. Lifted as by inspiration, every breast seemed now to expand, every gaze to turn above, every face to beam with a holy yet exulting enthusiasm. It was the omnipotence of eloquence, which, like the agitated sea, carries a host upon its waves, sinking and swelling with its irresistible undulations.

APPARENTLY Jesse Lasky, who is now conducting his second search for new faces for the screen, thinks that there is something in a name—at least, something in my name. For he has chosen "Virginia Vale" as the name which will be bestowed on the girl who is selected as the winner of this nation-wide talent quest.

The boy who wins will be called "Robert Stanton"—which makes me wonder if some man, somewhere, who really is named Robert Stanton, was as startled and exasperated as I was over discovering that his name had been kidnaped, as it were. There ought to be a law against it!

Of course, the very girls who come out best in these informal screen tests could probably go to Hollywood and try hopelessly for years to get into the studios.

Over a period of two months The Three Marshalls (Peggy, Jack and Kay) have had to change their radio program five times because the songs they submitted to the stations before taking to the air were banned.

They couldn't sing "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum"—it was thought to be offensive. "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" was all right if only Peggy and Kay sang the lyrics; Jack could play the music, but he couldn't sing—network rulings reject the song if it's sung by a man.

They couldn't sing "The Preacher and the Bear" because the lyrics contain the word "coon." "Shoot the Likker to Me, Jive Boy," a jam session favorite, could be sung only if some word not suggesting an alcoholic beverage was substituted for "likker"—which in this instance was used as a musical term.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

ONE DAY SESSION

No one except Democratic Chairman Ed Birmingham dignified Senator Clyde Herring's "one day session" idea by reply or notice. Such a suggestion is utterly ridiculous on the face of it that official members of his own party have rightfully suggested that the Senator will do well to discuss and undertake duties within his own orbit. The Senator's ill-considered jibe at Governor Wilson was a small bore suggestion. It was a frank, easily recognized attempt to ride back into public notice. His choice of vehicle was very unfortunate. The Senator well knows that under the law such a special session might well cost the taxpayers of Iowa a half million dollars with no assurance whatsoever that intelligent legislators have changed their minds on a proposition that has been twice defeated.

SERIOUS CHARGE

To accuse a candidate for public office of "callous, cruel neglect" is one thing. To bring such a charge against a duly elected public officer is quite another and is never done in this country—except when based upon definite evidence and before proper authorities. Certainly never in even a friendly newspaper. The Senator unwisely drew attention to the history of the child welfare legislation for his ride back into the headlines. In 1937 such a bill was introduced in the legislature by which the state would raise $800,000 additional in taxes; counties would raise another $800,00 and the Federal government would raise another $800,000—money that can only come from the same old well, the taxpayer's pockets. The Senator did nothing to urge passage of this bill. The legislature decided Iowa could not afford the expenditure at the time and the Senator made no criticism.

UP AGAIN IN 1939

During the ensuing two years it was known, of course, that the bill would appear again the 1939 session of the legislature. Senator Herring again remained silent; offering no suggestion, giving nothing of his counsel. For nearly four months the legislature was in session daily without hearing directly or indirectly from Senator Herring. The legislature made the same decision as in 1937. And now, at this late date, he suggests that hundreds of thousands of dollars in public funds be expended and that 158 members of the legislature be called back and advised that he has changed their minds for them. That is the very type of regimented thinking that Iowa recently decided to do away with. Senator Herring grew nothing in stature by his suggestion. The Senator well knows the cost of special sessions. He called two of them and the state paid the bill in full.

HOPKINS HOME

There may be no significance in the news that the home Harry Hopkins intended to purchase in Grinell was sold just before the Iowa-born cabinet member returned to the state recently. And it may not be significant that he has not yet purchased the homesite, farm or city, that he so enthusiastically envisioned a few weeks ago. This was before the New Deal administration left him holding the bag on his business appeasement plan. But it is significant that Harry is back in Grinnell and it is very likely that he will establish and maintain a home in Iowa until after November 1940. Harry believes what heavy caliber politicians in the East believe. He would very naturally accept the Democratic nomination for president, but inner circes view President Roosevelt as a certain candidate for a third term. Harry is staking out a claim to a fine geographical location for the second place on the Roosevelt ticket.

HERRING JITTERY

This in a large measure explains Senator Herring's anxiety over page one position. The Senator a few weeks ago considered himself safe in the favorite son position. Now Hopkins' virulent nostalgia threatens to stampede Iowa Democrats still further and it is a foregone conclusion he will hoge the limelight from now on. Herring. Kraschel, Birmingham and the others cannot hope to do much more than run back and forth across the stage from time to time in the hope the audience will not forget they had a few lines once in the same play.

PAYROLL CUTS

A misleading report relative to the gradual cut in state employee personnel has been gaining wide circulation recently. It was based on a report that "executive" and "elective" staffs had been reduced by some 79 workers. "Elective" and "Executive" offices constitute but a small portion of the several state departments and the choice of words was intended to mislead. The bulk of state payrolls are made up of workers in boards and commissions which do not come under full Republican control until July 1 and it is here the heaviest reductions will be made. The Board of Social Welfare recently abolished eightynine county administrator jobs it considered superfluous. The Highway Commission has reduced maintenance personnel by 177 and is continuing the process, The Board of Assessment and Review is pruning its taff in an efort to drop seventy-five employees by July 1. On January 1 the State Auditor's office listed 109 field checkers. The staff now numbers 64.

BOOTLEGGERS PAY UP

State Treasurer Bagley and Republican legislators who concluded the state was being defrauded by cigarette bootleggers have already proved their point even before the new cigarette law goes into effect July 4. Under Bagley's direction his new staff of inspectors is smoking out the large scale dealer in untaxed cigarettes. As a result revenue from this source zoomed by $22,000 in May over the same month a year ago. Bootlegging is accomplished in several ways: by selling cigarettes without the Iowa stamp, by faking invoices and by importation from other states and by purchases from mail order houses. Most truckers and others who make the importation of cigarettes from other states a sideline are known and the mopping up process will be pushed State officials believe the new law which goes into effect July 4 and which more fully protects the legitimate dealer who pays a stiff license fee, will increase state revenue more than $800,000.

TAG-ENDS

The per apita cost of Iowa government in 1932 was $9.52 . . . . . in 1937 it had risen to $24 . . . . . under the new Iowa cigarette law a carton of illegal cigarettes would cost the offender $501.20 . . . . . the State of Iowa through the Comptroller's office writes 5,000 checks every working day for salaries, expenses, purchases, etc. . . . . Dr. Bierring's vital statistics say that homicides dropped to 33 in 1938 over the preceding year's 58 while suicides declined from 440 to 418 . . . . . current Federal debt total $40,354,546,410.99 . . . . . your share $310.42.

HONEY CHOCOLATE SYRUP

½ cup cocoa
1 cup honey
1 cup cold water
2 teaspoons vanilla and a few grains of salt.

Combine cocoa, honey, salt and water. Place over low flame and stir constantly until the honey is dissolved. Simmer 5 minutes, add vanilla and pour into freshly sterilized jar; seal. When cold, store in refrigerator. This syrup will keep nicely for a month or more.

In preparing drinks, use 5 to 6 tablespoons to each cup of milk. Ice cream and mint additions make delicious and refreshing drinks. The syrup may be reheated and a bit of butter added to make a tasty ice cream sauce.

Mere Breathing Does Not Convey Odor to the Nose

Most persons think they smell with their noses but actually only a small part of the nose reacts to odors, declares a writer in the Philadelphia Record.

The true olfactory tract is the delicate membranous lining of the uppermost part of the nasal chamber. In each nasal chamber this area covers approximately one square inch and from these areas nerve fibers gather together, forming the first or olfactory nerve, and communicate directly with the brain.

Each of the fibers comes from a sense cell which forms part of the olfactory organ and each cell reaches through this organ to its outer or exposed face where it terminates in six or eight relatively long filaments which are the so-called olfactory hairs. These "float" in a thin layer of the watery mucus which covers the olfactory surface

When you breathe the air passes in and out through the lower part of the nasal chamber without entering the region of the olfactory organ at all. Naturally this means that in ordinary breathing we are not cognizant of odors

However, when we suspect an odor we automatically sniff, which carries the air into the upper part of the nasal chamber and brings it into contact with the olfactory surface.

What is known as "true smell" has to do only with relatively delicate perfumes and odors, and it is transmitted by the first nerve. The fifth, or trigeminal nerve, which is distributed throughout the whole surface of the nasal chamber, is responsive only to irritants Smells actually are conveyed to the nose by minute particles of the substance creating them. Just how tiny these are may be judged from the fact that one 460th millionth of a milligram of mercaptan (which smells like garlic) contains 200,000,000,000 molecules of the substance itself.

Mona Lisa Painting Is Most Widely Discussed

Most widely discussed, perhaps, of all paintings in the literature of art is Leonardo da Vinci's famous masterpiece, "Mona Lisa," a priceless possession of the Louvre Mellowed and darkened with age but triumphant over decay and devastation, writes a Paris correspondent in the Chicago Tribune, this celebrated painting occupies a rather inconspicuous place on a wall of the historic Paris gallery—yet thousands seek it out annually to observe for themselves the woman's face which has presented a mystery to the world for more than 400 years.

Gossip and fable have made this remarkable woman a subtle and uncanny charmer, a veritable sphinx whose trace of a smile long ago ensnared the soul of a notable artist and caused him little by little to create an unfathomable riddle. It is this trace of a smile that no one yet to this day has been able to explain with any great degree of certainty Enigmatic is the term most often applied to it.

What is back of the smile no one knows, yet volumes have been written about it. Perhaps much has been discovered in this famous painting that was outside the thoughts of the artist himself We do know, however, that Da Vinci treasured the masterpiece, that it actually represented the expressions and perhaps the yearnings of his own soul, and that he refused to part with it to the very moment of his death.

Leonardo da Vinci was one of the greatest of the old masters. Born in Vinci, near the city of Florence, in 1452, he died in France, where he was in the employ of King Francis I, in 1519.

First to Develop Art of Fencing

When, after the invention of gunpowder, armor began to be discarded, it became evident that some other means of defense must be discovered, and it was in meeting this need that the art of fencing came into existence. The Italians were the first to recognize the fact that the point was more deadly than the edge, and that a thrust could be delivered more quickly than a blow, and to them belongs the credit of laying the foundation of the present school of fencing They invented the rapier, a long, straight sword having a cup-shaped guard with quillons, which was the parent of the small sword and foil The earlier rapier was a weapon of offense only, parries being made with a dagger held in the left hand, or the point avoided by a leap aside Camillo Agrippa of Milan was the first man to divide the body into four parts and to assign a definite guard to each. Agrippa published a book in 1553 explaining his system, which is said to have been illustrated by Michelangelo.

Freezing Temperature

The freezing temperature of water is 32 degrees only at normal sea-level air pressure. If you go up on a high mountain where the atmospheric pressure is reduced, water will freeze and remain frozen at temperatures above 32 degrees This is one reason why snow stays on mountain tops all the year round in some places, even though temperatures rise. In places below sea level, the air pressure is greater and so the freezing point for water is lower than 32 degrees.

Chamberlain's Umbrella
The Truth at Last!

We in this country who do not make a practice of carrying an umbrella on all occasions have been somewhat puzzled about Chamberlain's famous rain-stick. There must be some sinister secret behind it, we feel. To enlighten us, a British correspondent reveals the following facts.

"Mr. Chamberlain's umbrella is actually a sword-stick, that is to say, the handle can be pulled off and a thin rapier withdrawn from the stem. Mr. Chamberlain is an expert fencer.

"The ribs of the umbrella can be removed and expanded at a moment's notice into a wire entanglement, behind which Mr. Chamberlain could take cover when charged by cavalry. The cover can quickly be converted into a sandbag and used either for a resting rest for the elbow, a pillow when sleeping on the veldt, or as a rifle rest.

"Dangling from the umbrella's middle is a black tassel in which messages may be hidden to be dropped from an airplane when all other communications fail.

We Americans have a reputation for believing many things—we doubt if we can swallow this one!

All-Around Man Was Worth the Money!

The customer was being shaved in a country town to which he was a visitor, when the barber cut him.

The man was all apologies, and placed a piece of tissue paper over the gash.

When the shave was finished the customer—to the great surprise of the barber—handed over a substantial tip.

"That's all right," said the victim, with a smile of forgiveness. "I don't often get shaved by a man who deals in three trades."

"Three trades?" queried the puzzled barber.

"Yes," came the sarcastic reply—"barber, butcher, and paper hanger."

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's Popular Opinion of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory results. And favorable public opinion supports the findings of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorders and for relief of the pain and worry they cause.

If more people were aware of how their kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

A smart daytime item is the severely tailored full-length coat of heavy imported natural coating linen as pictured to the right in the group. Keep in mind that this linen is the new non-crease type and that it launders successfully and easily. You will appreciate what a much-to-be-desired possession a coat of this type really is. It has a small Peter Pan collar, four pockets with inverted pleats, bone buttons and bound button holes, also a vent in back of the coat to give freedom of action.

The dress to the left will prove a perfect treasure for informal wear. It is of sheer black linen with multicolored wool embroidered flowers at neckline and decorating the split pockets on the skirt, the front fullness of which is an important fashion-correct detail. The open crown poke bonnet is of matching linen.

Centered in the group is a two-piece spectator sports dress of imported pure linen. It plays up unexpected color combinations, which are so definitely in the scheme of costume design for the coming summer. The skirt is of linen in the fashionable shocking pink; the linen jacket is chartreuse. Pink and blue embroidered flowers patterning it have loose fringe petals, done in a very novel way.

Dress linens that go back to nature for their colorings are very smart this season. Natural linen in the open coarse weaves seems to be the season's pet.

Many of the new petticoats are made of fine handkerchief linen trimmed with eyelet embroidery with gay baby ribbon threaded through quaint beading.

PAUL REVIEWS HIS LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Philippians 1:12-14, 21-24, 3.12-14; II Timothy 4.7, 8.
GOLDEN TEXT—I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.—II Timothy 4 7.

Self-examination may be a most profitable experience if carried out in the right spirit and for a good purpose. It may be very humbling to look at one's experiences and accomplishments in honest appraisal, but the very humility which is thus brought about may be the first step toward better things and may prove to be a real means of blessing.

Paul, whose life we have been studying together for the last three months, made a review of his own life and experience in various places in his epistles. We cannot study them all, but in the brief portions before us we find that the apostle had laid hold of those certainties without which life is largely meaningless and useless. He had found victory over both himself and his circumstances. He was perfectly clear about his eternal destiny. He had a goal toward which his life was directed in earnest endeavor, and he had in view the reward which was to be his when he met his God. What an excellent opportunity we have to bring out the truth as related to ourselves on this coming Lord's Day.

I. Living Above Circumstances (Phil. 1:12-14).

Paul had been imprisoned for the gospel's sake. Did that stop him? No, for he made the very guards who were assigned to watch him at his house the objects of his ministry and they, in turn, became missionaries of the cross. He sought to win each one as he took his designated period of guard service and then sent him out as a testimony to "the whole Praetorian guard and to all the rest" (v. 13, R. V.). What a consistent and glowing Christian life Paul must have lived day by day.

Not only were some of his Christian brethren encouraged by his example to preach the gospel, but we note in verse 15 that others, taking advantage of the fact that Paul was in prison, went out to preach just to show that they were as good as he, making their very preaching an expression of their envy of his popularity. Paul showed victory over circumstances by thanking God that the gospel was preached, even though it was done in a wrong spirit.

II. Facing Eternity With Joy (Phil. 1:21, 24).

To Paul, departure from this life would mean his entering into perfect fellowship with Christ and unlimited service for Him. He therefore had a strong desire to depart and to be with the Lord. He would not, however, turn away from his present privilege and duty. If it was God's will that he should abide in the flesh, he purposed that it should be literally true of him that to live is Christ. If that be true in a man's life, then it must necessarily follow that to die is gain. The reason men fear death is that in place of saying "to live is Christ," they say "to live is money," "position," "pleasure," or even "sin."

III. Pressing Toward the Goal (Phil. 3:12-14).

These are the words of the man who possibly was the greatest Christian and Christian worker of all time. Was he satisfied with himself? No, the Spirit of Christ in him and the vision of the goal which he had not yet attained made him press on.

The spiritually minded Christian has no word of commendation for past success, he gives Christ the glory. He does not permit past failures to hold him back, for they have been put under the blood. He is not content merely to hold his own, for he knows that to stand still is to go back. Christian friends, let us by God's blessing and grace take a forward step today, and tomorrow, and the day after, that we may, like Paul, press on toward the goal to the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Scripture speaks frequently of the reward which shall come to the faithful Christian at the close of a life of holiness and service for Christ. It is no doubt commendable that Christians do not often speak of their reward, for it should be true of every servant of Christ that the love of Christ should constrain him. On the other hand, it is important that we keep before us the fact that at the end of the road there is recognition by "the Lord, the righteous Judge," and that we may properly look forward to the receiving of the crown of righteousness from His hand. The life of the Christian has glorious meaning from beginning to end, yes, and on through all eternity!

Christ's Power

One of the undeniable miracles of Christian history is the mystic power of the disciples of Christ to remain faithful to Him in spite of all possible temptations to desert the faith.

HOW TO SEW

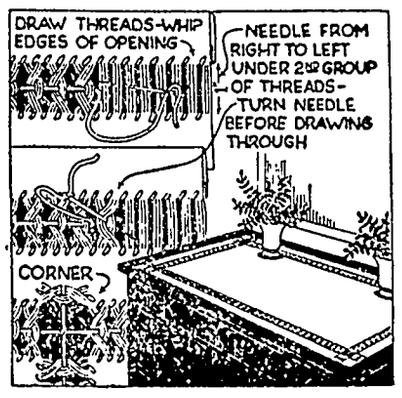
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



DRAW THREADS-WHIP EDGES OF OPENING
NEEDLE FROM RIGHT TO LEFT UNDER 2ND GROUP OF THREADS-TURN NEEDLE BEFORE DRAWING THROUGH CORNER

THIS idea is the result of an experiment. A friend had a set of sadly out-of-date white linen drawn work scarves for buffet, serving and dining table. Her dining room was being done over with touches of turquoise blue in the draperies and wall paper, so she had the scarves dyed to match. They were so effective that the simplest part of the drawn work design was copied in coarse linen in various colors for mats and scarves throughout the house.

While the turquoise scarves were especially attractive, those in golden yellow and a bedroom set in soft rose were also full of charm. The sketch shows how the drawn work is done. If you are looking for something effective that is quick to make, here it is. Just pull out the threads of the linen to make an open space about an inch wide. The scarf may be hemmed at the same time the outside edge of the opening is being whipped. Just follow these sketches. No other directions are needed. Use either linen or mercerized thread in a matching color.

ANNUAL REUNION IN HONOR OF IOWA PIONEER HELD

Lau Family Gathered At New Hampton To Honor Memory Of Christian Lau

Living relatives of Christian Lau assembled Sunday, June 25th at fair grounds park, New Hampton, in honor of this frontiersman who emigrated from Germany to settle in Iowa 83 years ago

He was the father of August C. Henry, William, Christ and Mart Lau, and Mrs. Wm. Greiman, Mrs Wm Buehlmeyer, Mrs Wm Huff, and Mrs Henry Reusch

This gathering was also in commemoration of the 75th homecoming of this Union soldier who served in the Civil War at the age of 33 and fought in that great battle of Gettysburg 76 years ago

He was a resident of Klemme 45 years ago

Two daughters and one son still survive They are Mrs. Wm Greiman, 78, Garner; Mrs Henry Reusch, 73, South Haven, Michigan; and Mart Lau, 67, of Randolph, Minnesota.

Those present from Iowa points were from Mason City, Klemme, Garner, Britt, Kanawha, Guttenberg, Garnavillo, Elkader, Webb, Edgewood and Manchester.

Those present from Minnesota points were from Minneapolis, St Paul, Randolph, Spring Valley, Farmington and Rosemount.

This was the second reunion of its kind and was well attended and those present enjoyed the appetizing baskets of food brought by the ladies. The program was quite unique. A loud electric speaker was set up on the grounds and several took part in the program which consisted of accordion solos by Mrs Sam Harvey of Mason City, a duet by Mr and Mrs Mart Lau. Mrs. Wm. Greiman told of how wheat was sown in the early days and a brush pile was used as a drag drawn by oxen and driven by August Lau who was the oldest of the boys at that time The wheat was carried in grandma Lau's apron and scattered in that fashion. This was their seeder Other talks were given over the loud speaker Roger and Maralee Ridder sang a song for the occasion and the words were as follows:

Hello dear relatives we're glad
To see you here today
We know that many of you
Have come a long, long way.

Chorus
And every year at this same time
We'll meet to say hello
And as the years go rolling by
We'll hate to see them go.

2nd verse
We are all descendants
Of Christian and Dorthea Lau
We come from many different states
But we'll get together now.

Chorus again
3rd verse
Let's gather round and have a
Grand time this entire day
For soon we'll have to leave again
And all be on our way.
Chorus again

(To the tune of Auld Lang Syne)

This song was composed by Mrs. Lee Ridder. Roger and Maralee are great great grand children of Christian and Dorothea Lau.

PAY LAST FUNDS OF COUNTY HELD IN CLOSED BANKS

State Sinking Fund Completes Repayment Of $86,955.65 tied up

A check for $5,095.40, received Tuesday morning from W. G. C. Bagley, Treasurer of State, cleans up the last of the county funds held by closed banks, County Treasurer Roy L. McMillin announced Saturday. The final payment was made from the State Sinking Fund and included final dividends on closed banks in Hancock County.

Originally Hancock County had a total of $86,955.65 tied up in closed banks in the county, Mr. McMillin revealed. This balance was due the county on December 31, 1933 and has since been reduced periodically by dividends from the bank receiverships and final payments by the State Sinking Fund.

The State Sinking Fund was created by the legislature to protect public deposits in Iowa Banks. The banks make a monthly payment on deposits by the school districts, cities, towns and county at a rate of interest set by the Treasurer of State. These payments are deposited in the State Sinking Fund, there being used to make good any losses which public bodies otherwise might have in closed banks.

WORK ON NEW SCHOOL NEARS COMPLETION

Only Finishing Work Remains As Deadline Draws Near

The new Klemme Public School which is being constructed as a Public Works Administration project is nearing completion according to an announcement made today by the Resident Engineer Inspector, Voyle W Wood It is expected that the project will be completed the first week in July

The Interstate Plastering Company of Omaha, Nebraska, finished their plastering subcontract on Friday of last week The General Contractor at once started a large crew of carpenters to placing wood trim and mill work The painting subcontractor has already started to stain the finished woodwork. It is expected a rather short time will be required to place the mill work as part of it has already been made up in sections at the contractor's mill in Clear Lake.

The last pane was placed in the steel sash last week This leaves only a few entrance doors to be hung in order to entirely enclose the building

The plumbing contractor recently connected up the hot water heater and tank in the furnace room and has started to install fixtures in the toilet rooms. The fixtures in the shower rooms are nearly complete. It is expected that the plumbing will be completed on time.

The electrical contractor has practically completed the installation of light fixtures on the second floor

The subcontractors for the placing of the blackboards, the maple flooring for the stage and gym, the tile flooring for the class rooms, and the caulking are scheduled to start work this week.

It is also expected that the heating contractor will place the thermostats and other component parts of the heating system sometime this week. The heat ducts and vent ducts have all been placed.

The General Contractor, Ernest Andersen, has already started a crew of men to assembling the steel lockers and wardrobes and placing them in the special openings built in the wall.

Shipment has been made on the fire door to be placed on the middle landing of the stairway to the furnace room. This door will no doubt be installed by the last of this week.

The early completion of the building will be a big help to the school board in that considarable time will be needed to move the equipment from the old school building and to get the new school ready for the opening day of school.

The Resident Engineer Inspector reports that the local officials are continuing their splendid cooperation and active interest in the project.

Rebellion

Last March Adolf Hitler marched into Prague while stolid Czechs lined the streets and booed hatefully. Unnoticed were thousands of Bohemians and Moravians who slipped silently across the borders. Unconsidered were 12 Czech legations and some 70 consulates which remained open throughout the world in defiance of German orders. Forgotten was the national assembly's failure to dissolve. These things might well have remained unnoticed, unconsidered and forgotten were it not for the indomitable Czech will.

Symbolically, a few days after Nazi occupation, spiteful Czechs painted on a rock overlooking Prague: "We don't want your pfennigs! We want Benes!" The reference was to Eduard Benes, cofounder of the Czech republic 25 years ago with immortalized Thomas G. Masaryk; later the nation's president until he resigned after the Munich crisis; now a lecturer at the University of Chicago who wonders if the Czech saga will repeat itself.

Recalled today is Czecho-Slovakia's constitution, written in Chicago, and its declaration of independence, adopted in Philadelphia. Born first outside its own borders by idealistic exiles, will Thomas Masaryk's land be re-born in Chicago?

BARON VON NEURATH
The question: To slap or pat?

Three months after Czecho-Slovakia fell, such a development seemed possible. At Prague, German Konstantin von Neurath lost sleep over a maddening passive resistance on the part of his subjects. Rushing to Berlin, he consulted with Fuehrer Hitler over two methods of fighting back. Germany could either dominate Bohemia and Moravia by force, or try to reconcile the Czechs by encouraging more intimate cultural and political relations with Germany.

What he cannot reconcile, however, is the patriotic fervor of Czechs outside the Reich. In France are a reported 30,000 exiles waiting to enlist for The Cause. Other thousands are in Poland, planning a swift military seizure of Bohemia-Moravia should Germany become involved in war.

At her consulates and legations the defunct Czech government maintains a semblance of official contact with other lands, an advantage not possessed during the first nationalistic struggle. And from Chicago Dr. Benes is directing a world-wide mobilization of Czech moral and financial support, carefully avoiding open commitments which would "add to the difficulties of the (U. S.) President and department of state."

DOMESTIC:
Income

President Roosevelt's goal for total U. S. income is $80,000,000,000 a year, which critics say would not necessarily guarantee prosperity since living costs might rise correspondingly. In 1929 the national income was $82,000,000,000, by 1932 it had dropped to $40,000,000,000, and returning prosperity brought it to $72,000,000,000 in 1937. Just released is the figure for 1938, showing an 11 per cent drop to $64,000,000,000.

Best explanation of the drop, said Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, was declining prices, coupled with reduced volume of production. More significant, however, were 1938's results of 1937's capital-labor battle, during which John Lewis' C. I. O. squeezed out higher salaries and expanded unionism. Net result: Labor gained and capital lost.

One index was the fact that compensation to employees for 1938 was off only 7 per cent from the previous year, while dividend payments to stockholders in corporations dropped approximately one-third from the $5,400,000,000 level of 1937. An even better index, however, was that income distribution in wages set a new high mark of 67.3 per cent in 1938.

Another significant feature:

The construction industry, which has suffered severely since 1929, showed very little decline in 1938, indicating that U. S. housing requirements have reached so critical a stage that not even recession can stop new building.

AGRICULTURE:
New Uses

One major reason for today's U. S. crop surpluses was the World war. Then, and before, both the agriculture department and farmers bent their energies to establishing a production level that would accommodate an export market which annually took from 150 to 200 million bushels of wheat, eight to nine million bales of cotton, almost a billion pounds of pork, plus large quantities of tobacco and fruit.

Since then three factors have conspired to upset farm economy. First, U. S. export requirements were cut drastically as other nations became self-sufficient; second, agriculture became mechanized, cutting farm employment and making it easier to raise large crops; third, unscientifically tilled land "burned out" from too much repetition of the same crop.

No cure-all, but an encouraging move in the right direction will be underway by next summer when four regional laboratories begin seeking ways to make the farm a source of raw materials for factories. Authorized by congress and operating under the department of agriculture will be laboratories at:

Peoria, Ill., researching on corn, wheat and agricultural wastes, much of which is already used for such purposes as industrial alcohol.

New Orleans, where new uses will be sought for cotton, sweet potatoes and peanuts.

Wyndmoor, Pa., centering its activities on tobacco, milk products, apples, Irish potatoes and vegetables.

San Francisco, studying wheat, potatoes, alfalfa, vegetables and fruits.

COURTS:
Offsetting Factor

Vacationing from their Washington temple nowadays are the Supreme court's nine young and old men, as unique a mixture of legal talent as ever donned the traditional black robes. Abed with a doudenal ulcer is Chief Justice Hughes; visiting his old Kentucky home is Justice McReynolds; still in Washington, close to such friends as SEC's Jerome Frank and Brain Truster Tommy Corcoran is the court's youngest and most un-traditional member, 44-year-old Bill Douglas.

Gloating, meanwhile, is Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, whom observers credit with winning 12 out of 14 bouts with the high bench this past term. Yet in retrospect the session just ended was neither a capitulation by the Supreme court nor a victory for the New Deal. A better guess is that the once notorious poles of court conservatism and New Deal liberalism have grown less far apart.

ROBERT JACKSON
Victorious, but not too much.

Four Roosevelt appointees (Black, Reed, Frankfurter, and Douglas) have given the court liberalized color and today only two conservatives (Butler and McReynolds) remain. Middle-grounders are Hughes, Stone and Roberts, and Mr. Jackson had to convince only one of these to assure victory in any given case. Yet, paradoxically, the recent term brought a new high in dissents and divisions of opinions, a condition which proves that New Dealish justices have merely added zest to court arguments, and that they have not yet settled into a rut which permits observers to classify them in advance.

While the court grows more liberal, an important offsetting factor too often overlooked is the lesson Mr. Roosevelt's administration learned through disastrous defeats of the past. Today's legislation is drafted more carefully and with greater respect for constitutional precedent.

POLITICS:
Plan?

Whatever his reasoning, President Roosevelt has shown political wisdom in refusing to announce his intentions for 1940. But campaigns and conventions must eventually settle the Democratic party's political stew, and by early June campaign time was so near that third-term talk was definitely in the picture. Enough other Democrats had talked to give the voting public their choice of two probable reasons why the White House continued to remain silent:

Resolution. West Virginia's Sen. Rush D. Holt began demanding that the senate vote on his resolution forbidding a third term. Until that vote was made, Mr. Roosevelt could hardly be expected to declare himself; if the resolution were passed after he announced his candidacy, the President would go down in history as a villain, not a hero. Contrariwise, if the resolution were rejected, Mr. Roosevelt knew the public would regard the rejection as a vote of confidence from the senate, thus paving the way for renomination.

SECRETARY ICKES

Confusion. Far more pertinent, however, is another reason. While Mr. Roosevelt keeps quiet, all other Democratic hopefuls are scrambling into the exciting political dogfight, knifing each other in a way that can never bring party harmony.

First (and best liked) hopeful to speak was Vice President John N. Garner, whose friends announced he would be "available." Within 48 hours he was pounced on by: (1) Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who called him by inference a "know nothing, say nothing, do nothing"; (2) Workers Alliance, which adopted a resolution condemning Mr. Garner as representing a poverty-stricken mass of people; (3) San Antonio's Mayor Maury Maverick, former congressman, who objected chiefly to Mr. Garner's age (70).

Meanwhile Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace had his name added to a list of second choices already cluttered with those of Postmaster General James A. Farley, Indiana's former Gov. Paul V. McNutt and aging Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who has long been mentioned as a possibility.

Immediate result was probably just what the President wanted, a recognition by many Democrats that the Garner-Hull-Farley-Wallace-McNutt candidacies merely produced an utter confusion which could have but one logical solution at convention time: Junk them all and nominate Franklin Roosevelt again.

If this was not the case, observers at least saw something significant in Mr. Ickes' article in Look magazine, in which he plumped for a third term. Extremely close to the White House, the vitriolic secretary of the interior was not likely to make such a statement unless he knew the President was at least toying with the idea of running again.

FAIRS:
Attendance

Closer to large populations, New York's World's fair would naturally draw larger attendance than its rival at San Francisco. By June 1, after running 3½ months, the Golden Gate exposition reported attendance of 3,284,329. In one month, from April 30 to June 1. New York's turnstiles spun to the tune of 5,594,770.

More interesting to executives of both fairs was the source of attendance, for local visitors add little to the prosperity of either San Francisco or New York. At the Golden Gate, a checkup of parking lots revealed 85 per cent of visitors were from California. Of out-of-state visitors, 55 per cent came from nearby Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Nevada, etc.

Closest comparable estimate at New York came from the Goodrich exhibit, which offered replica auto tags to the estimated 20 per cent total attendance which visited the Transportation area. Judging from auto tag sales, 49 per cent of the fair's visitors were from New York. Others: New Jersey, 15 per cent; Pennsylvania, 6 5 per cent; Massachusetts, 4 5 per cent; Connecticut, 4.5 per cent. Only states not registered on June 1: North and South Dakota.

Though both surveys showed early attendance was localized, both fairs also predicted mid-summer vacation season would bring visitors from afar.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT
SEWING CIRCLE

AS YOU see from the diagram, the pretty daytime dress (1754) consists of just two pieces to sew together. Then make the easy darts at the neckline and waistline, so that your dress will be slim and softly full over the bosom, edge the sleeves and neckline with lace or ruching—and there you are! Anybody can do it, and it's so attractive and comfortable. Linen, gingham, batiste and lawn are nice materials for this.

Cool, Comely Jacket Frock.

If you're looking for an extremely smart and pleasantly youthful jacket ensemble in women's sizes, 1761 is the pattern for you. Gathers make the bodice just full enough, and the paneled skirt, cut to a high waistline, is beautifully slenderizing. The smart jacket is the most flattering length—certain to make your hips look slim. Chiffon, georgette, linen or pure dye silk print are pliant fabrics in which this design looks particularly well.

The Patterns.

No. 1754 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46. Size 34 requires 3 yards of 35-inch fabric and 2⅜ yards of lace or ruching.

No. 1761 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 6½ yards of 39-inch fabric with nap for the ensemble and short-sleeved dress. With long-sleeved dress 7⅛ yards.

venty Years Ago in This Palace in France

nese Statesmen, Known as the 'Big Four,'

gned the Treaty That Ended World War

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

N JUNE 28, 1919, the Hall of Mirrors in the Palace of Versailles near Paris, France, for the third time in its history, was the scene of an event of world-wide significance. On that date was signed the treaty of peace which officially the World war.

this same hall on January 18, 1871, the King of Prussia, of a conquering army, had been proclaimed Emperor ermany and there on uary 26 of the same year preliminary treaty of e concluding the Franco-sian war had been d. It ended that war, it ie, but those two events the foundations for an- and greater war which to flame forth 43 years authors of the Treaty of illes, signed 20 years ago month, were known as the Four"—Georges Clemen- of France, David Lloyd e of Great Britain, Wood-Wilson of the United States Vittorio Orlando of Italy. had stated their desire to about a "firm, just and dur- peace." In the light of what appened since then, it now extremely doubtful if they d the right adjectives to ord "peace"—especially the ne!

20 years later finds that anything but "firm" and ble" and that, according to esent head of the nation had no other choice but to it, is because it was much an a "just" peace. Now on ventieth anniversary of the g of the Treaty of Ver- it is not inappropriate to ine some of its provisions ee what their present status rmany acknowledges and espect strictly the independ- of Austria—she agrees that this independence shall be inalienable, except with the consent of the council of the League of Nations." So read one of the paragraphs in the treaty. What would be the thoughts of Kurt Schuschnigg, former chancellor of Austria and recently released from a Nazi prison (or was he?), upon reading those words now?

"Germany . . . recognizes the complete independence of the Czecho-Slovak state . . . Germany hereby recognizes the frontiers of this state as determined by the principal allied and associated powers and the other interested states." Has Eduard Benes, former president of Czecho-Slovakia, now a lecturer in the United States, learned enough of our American idiom to say "Oh, yeah?" if shown that passage in the treaty.

No Fortifications?

"Germany is forbidden to maintain and construct any fortifications either on the left bank of the Rhine or on the right bank of the Rhine west of a line drawn 50 kilometers east of the Rhine . . . In the area defined above, the maintenance and the assembly of armed forces, and military maneuvers of any kind as well as the upkeep of all permanent works for mobilization, are in the same way forbidden." Would Adolf Hitler's lips curl in an ironical smile if you should point out those paragraphs to him?

The military, naval and aerial provisions of the treaty stated that the German army was to be limited to 100,000 men (Hitler is said to have had 100,000 men under arms during the Czech crisis and he occupied the Sudetenland with 250,000). "Universal compulsory military service shall be abolished in Germany" said the treaty. (Each year 500,000 young Germans are being put into uniform, according to reliable reports.)

German naval forces were limited to six 10,000-ton battleships, six light cruisers, 12 destroyers and 12 torpedo boats and the construction or acquisition of submarines were forbidden. Ask the German workmen who have been building 35,000 and 26,000-ton ships and a whole fleet of U-boats about that provision!

"The armed forces of Germany must not include any military or naval air forces." Col. Charles Lindbergh could furnish some interesting testimony as to the observance of that clause in the treaty.

No fortifications commanding the routes between the North sea and the Baltic were to be maintained. The fortifications and naval harbors of the islands of Heligoland and Dune were to be destroyed, and no new fortifications were to be constructed within 50 kilometers of the German coast. Ask the captain of any ship which steams past Heligoland whether or not any fortifications are noticeable!

With Herr Hitler repeatedly referring to the return of Germany's lost colonies, it is interesting to read in the Treaty of Versailles this sentence: "Germany renounces in favor of the principal allied and associated powers all her rights and titles of her oversea possessions." Look in the Statistical Year-Book of the League of Nations and you'll find this table:

| Colony | Present Mandatory Power |
|---|---|
| Ruanda Urundi | Belgium |
| Tanganyika | Great Britain |
| Cameroons | France |
| Cameroons | Great Britain |
| Togoland | France |
| Togoland | Great Britain |
| Souhwest Africa | Union of South Africa |
| Pacific Islands (Caroline, Marianne, Marshall Islands) | Japan |
| New Guinea | Australia |
| Nauru | Australia |
| Western Samoa | New Zealand |

"But," you say, "weren't Italy and the United States both Allied Powers during the war? How come, then, that they aren't listed among the 'mandatory powers'?" The answer is, of course, that Uncle Sam didn't want any of the former German possessions. Italy did, and by the London treaty of 1915 had been promised "equitable" compensation in the event that France and Great Britain increased their colonial territories in Africa at the expense of Germany. In 1919 she wanted those two nations to make good on their promise. But it wasn't until 1925 that Italy obtained Jubaland from Great Britain and some unimportant "rectification" of frontier lines through uninhabited wastes from France. And that's one reason for the celebrated "Rome-Berlin axis" of today.

Of course, there are a number of other items in the Treaty of Versailles which aren't worth the paper they're written on—"scraps of paper" so to speak. Altogether they add up to a treaty that in two decades has fallen far short of bringing about the "firm, just and durable peace" which the "Big Four" believed they had achieved when on June 28, 1919, they summoned into the Hall of Mirrors German representatives, and said to them in effect, "Here is the dotted line on which you are to sign."

Forty-three years after a peace was signed at Versailles in 1871, France and Germany were again at war. Will history repeat itself and find them again at war in 1961—43 years after the Versailles treaty of 1919? Or will it come much sooner than that?

In so far as this article has listed so many provisions of the Treaty of Versailles which Germany has not honored, it seems rather superfluous to mention another, since it has to do with—of all things!—a skull. Article 246 of the treaty says: "Germany will hand over to His Britannic Majesty's government the skull of the Sultan M'kwawa which was removed from the protectorate of German East Africa and taken to Germany." And thereby hangs this tale:

When the Germans began their penetrations of East Africa in the last decades of the Nineteenth century, they met strong opposition from certain Bantu tribes, who were Wahabi Moslems. Among the peoples of Africa the Bantus are regarded as the bravest and most advanced, and in the Mohammedan religion the Wahabis are the fanatical Puritan type and best fighters.

A Magic Charm.

Beginning in 1870 the sultans of the Bantus, leaders of this fierce Wahabi sect, fought the German occupation of their lands around Lake Tanganyika for nearly 30 years. The last and greatest of these was Sultan M'kwawa who added a mystical note to the native shrewdness and courage of his predecessors. The word spread among his people that he had a magic charm which would prevent his ever being captured by his enemies.

So the young Bantus flocked to his standard, resolved to fight to the death against the oppressions of the Germans.

German soldiers found it dangerous to wander far from their posts lest they be wiped out in a Bantu ambush. Eventually, however, the German Mausers wore down the resistance of the poorly armed Bantus. In the late nineties the sultanate, which had held its own since 1870, found itself on its last legs. M'kwawa, who had convinced himself and his followers that Allah would never let him be taken, found himself cornered.

What he told his followers is unknown. He had guaranteed he could not be captured; he could make certain he would never be taken alive. So he committed suicide, believing it Allah's will. But he was not quick enough. The advance guard of Captain Von Prinz's Germans, headed by Sergeant Merkal, came upon the body before it could be spirited away.

Sergeant Merkal had little thought of charms, of magic, of the will of Allah. He was a matter-of-fact modern European. But the head had a definite value for him, for the government offered 6,000 rupees for the man who would take M'kwawa, dead or alive. He severed the head from the body, and preserved it in alcohol, as evidence that he was entitled to the reward.

Feeling that the country was now pacified, Captain Von Prinz ordered his men to return to the nearest blockhouse for a rest. The sultan's head was locked in the cellar of the fort.

One night, when the garrison was sleeping, a handful of men slipped into the blockhouse, and groped their way into the cellar. They took the head preserved in its alcohol and made their way out without disturbing anyone.

Head Is Stolen.

In the morning it was found that M'kwawa's head and the alcohol were gone. In its place was a freshly severed Bantu head. Perhaps it had belonged to an informer who had betrayed the sultan's whereabouts to the Germans.

Since then both heads have bedeviled the Germans, one by its absence, the other by its presence. The head of the sultan, buried somewhere in the territory, could be resurrected at any time as a signal for Bantu revolt. The presence of the other head gave color to the idea that the Germans were lying when they claimed to have lost the sultan's skull.

After the World war, when German East Africa became Tanganyika territory, a British mandate, the English wished possession of the sultan's skull. Perhaps they thought it would add to the native respect of their new rule. Perhaps they wished to present it to the natives as evidence of British kindliness as contrasted with German cruelty. Anyhow, they had Article 246 written into the Treaty of Versailles.

But it turned out that the sultan's skull was probably one of those reparations which Germany lacked the capacity to pay. Evidence was taken among the soldiers who had been present in the blockhouse, and from the widow of Captain Von Prinz. All agreed that the head had been lost, was still buried in some secret place in Africa, ready to be produced again when the time for revolt was ripe

In 1920 the British appeared to be satisfied with the explanation. Yet in several cases the sultan's skull bobbed up unexpectedly to disturb the British parliament when some member of that body asked why Article 246 of the Treaty of Versailles had never been complied with. It is doubtful, though, if it is likely to come up again. There are too many others vastly more important to worry about now!

★ Kenny Wins Protesters
★ Bob Burns' Make-Ready

By Virginia Vale

EVEN after the many portrayals of Abraham Lincoln that we have had on stage and screen, Henry Fonda has given us, in "Young Mr. Lincoln," one that is different. He could have walked through the part, because by nature he had been fitted to play it. It would have been no effort at all for him to look like Lincoln, with a little help from the make-up man.

But he gives such a superb performance that he seems really to be Lincoln as a young man; he is shrewd and tender and kind, not yet marked for greatness and for tragedy.

There are other excellent performances in the picture, notably those contributed by Alice Brady, Donald Meek and Richard Cromwell. Put "Young Mr. Lincoln" high on your list of the pictures that you must be sure to see.

Kenny Baker, of radio fame, has won new laurels for himself on the screen. When it was announced that he would play "Nanki Poo" in the screen version of "The Mikado" there were loud protests from the dyed-in-the-wool Gilbert and Sullivan fans. What, they demanded, would a crooner do with the role? He'd be horrible, they declared, in contrast with Martyn Green, Sydney Granville, and the other members of the celebrated D'Oyly Carte Opera company, who have concentrated for years on Gilbert and Sullivan products.

Now they're acclaiming him. It's no surprise to the rest of the cast. After he sang his first selection, "A Wandering Minstrel," they realized how good he was. Elizabeth Bergner, who was working on a neighboring set, behind screens, promptly gave orders that the screens were to come down and work on her set was to stop every time that Baker sang. And those who protested that he was a crooner now agree with Victor Schertzinger, the director who insisted on having Baker, that the lad's not a crooner at all, but a lyric tenor.

—*—

David Niven may have lost out in private life, when Merle Oberon became Mrs. Alexander Korda, but he's doing all right in his professional career. Assigned to appear in "Whose Wife?" opposite Loretta Young, it's stated by the producers that he has the most important characterization of his screen career. "Whose Wife?" is an original screen play by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, and Tay Garnett will direct it—with those three top-notchers involved it's got to be good.

Bob Burns has a method all his own for preparing his material for those Thursday night broadcasts. He doesn't have a word ready at rehearsal time—just runs through the "spots" with the guest stars and Bing Crosby and rehearses his bazooka solo.

After the rehearsal he goes to a dressing room, armed with his pipe and tobacco pouch. Two hours later he's ready. His script consists of a few key words jotted down on the back of an envelope or a scrap of paper—things like "Aunt Boo's mousetrap" or "Snazzy's automobile," to remind him of what he wants to say. Probably that's the reason for at least part of the informality of that program—something that a great many people are striving to inject into other broadcasts, without marked success so far.

THE CORNERSTONE

"THOSE who laid the cornerstone of representative government in the Federal Constitution, built wisely. Upon that firm base they erected a structure reinforced by the four essentials of democracy—free press, free speech, free assembly, free worship. Liberty has perished where these fundamentals have been abridged or abolished."—James G. Stahlman, President, American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Flattery Betrays

NERVOUS?

Do you feel so nervous you want to scream? Are you cross and irritable? Do you scold those dearest to you?

If your nerves are on edge and you feel you need a good general system tonic, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women.

For over 60 years one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with reliable Pinkham's Compound It helps nature build up more physical resistance and thus helps calm quivering nerves and lessen discomforts from annoying symptoms which often accompany female functional disorders.

Why not give it a chance to help YOU? Over one million women have written in reporting wonderful benefits from Pinkham's Compound.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter tho kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

POSTLUDE TO A PICNIC
Kadra Maysi

The lunch beneath the trees was done;
The laughing picnickers had gone.
They left no papers by the lake,
But fruit peel, crusts and bits of cake.
To little noses in the wood,
The scent was strange—but very good.
Two squirrels were the first to try.
Squirrels, you know, are never shy.
They scolded, but they were not vexed
When a young rabbit joined them next.
He said politely· Keep your Cake.
"These Lettuce Leaves Are All I'll Take."
A blue jay saw, while darting by,
And turned and swooped with hungry cry.
He was so noisy he was heard
All roundabout, and bright wings whirred
And little, padding feet were fast
To hasten to this fine repast.
Though only crumbs, it made a feast
For singing bird and furry beast.
—Dumb Animals.

FORTY THOUSAND FISHERMEN

Sing a song of summer
Pocketful of hooks,
Forty thousand fishermen
Angling in their brooks.
Forty thousand fishermen
With their rods and reels,
Forty thousand fishermen
With their lines and creels.
Every pool has twenty-five
Fishermen or more.
Every lake has fishermen
By the triple score.
Every little speckled fish
Before his winking eyes
Sees some eighteen different kinds
Of multicolored flies.
Sees some eighteen different baits
Of every shape and hue.
With forty thousand fishermen
What's a fish to do?

Rats Iowa's Worst Pest This Year

"The worst rat year in a decade" finds farmers and townspeople fighting the pests with almost every known weapon from clubs and dogs to poison and gas. At Oskaloosa, the city council paid an exterminating company $65 to rid the city dump of the vicious rodents. And thousands of others have invaded the town. At the Fred Ford farm near Lamoni, some 400 rats have been killed in a few weeks, a mass killing that has been duplicated or exceeded on hundreds of Iowa farms this spring and early summer. Sealed cribs of corn are blamed by many for the great increase in the rat population, although it must be admited that rats don't need much extra nourishment or other encouragement to multiply like sin.

NORTH IOWA CORN MORE THAN KNEE-HIGH BY 4TH

Recent rains and warm weather have sent north Iowa corn skyward the past week and many fields have now reached the "knee-high" stage, which is considered better than normal size by the Fourth of July. Most fields around here will be much taller than "knee-high" by the Fourth.

Small Grain Looks Fine

Oat fields in the vicinity of Klemme have shown real progress the past week. Most fields are now well headed and prospects are for a good crop around here.

A lot of hay has been put up so far this summer and the quality is good according to many farmers.

AVERY 4-H GIRLS MET AT MARSHALL HOME JUNE 22

The 4-H girls of Avery township held their second meeting in June at the home of the assistant leader, Irene Marshall. The meeting was held June 22 and was called to order by the president. The minutes of the last meeting were read. Eight girls and the leaders were present and answered roll call by naming their favorite picture. The girls made book covers and they looked very nice when they were finished.

Betty Ward, the historian, gave a talk on different kinds of bedspreads and how to stitch them. In music for former years, Irene Marshall played on our phonograph Schubert's Serenade. Ardella Nelson gave different uses of decorative wall paper. Leola Barkama went from our club to the state convention at Ames and each girl asked her one question about her trip. She said she had a very nice time.

The club girls sang many songs. Plans for achievement day were made and the meeting was adjourned.

After adjournment a lovely lunch was served by the hostess and her mother.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mildred Busse, July 6th.

LARGE CROWD AT ANNUAL REFORMED S. S. PICNIC

A large crowd was present at the annual picnic held at the Reformed Church each summer at the close of the summer Bible School. Many were present for the program which began at 10 o'clock, and before noon the number had greatly increased for the picnic dinner.

The total enrollment was 116 with an average attendance of 103. About 75 of the pupils had a perfect attendance.

The following teachers and leadders served during the five week term:

Senior department, Mr. Raymond Barz with Garland Brinkman and Lucille Hartbeck as leaders; Intermediate department, Miss Irene Suckow with Adala Wille as leader; Junior department, Miss Carmen Kluckhohn with Lorraine Buntenbach as leader; Primary department, Miss Gladys Griffen with Gertrude Grosshuesch as leader; Music Department, Miss Mabel Schuldt with Miss Mildred Thiemann, pianist.

Sixteen scholars completed the prescribed course and received a Bible School Diploma. This class will enter the senior class of our confirmation school next fall. The graduates are: Glen Wille, Leonard Kaduce, Elwyn Jacobs, Robert Bamman, Roger Bamman, Calvin Grosshuesch, Jr., Donald Rockow, Robert Kimball, Arlene Wille, Lillian Knoke, Irene Schmidt, Arlene Buseman, Calvin Schmidt, Eugene Haberkamp, Dean Merkel, Edward Peck.

The afternoon was spent in playing games and the older members enjoyed the time visiting as the weather was ideal for a holiday.

BEST TO HAVE TWO OR MORE SUDAN PASTURES

Pasturing sudan grass can usually be started 5 to 6 weeks after seeding or when the sudan has reached a height of at least 15 to 18 inches, report agronomists at Iowa State College.

Best results are obtained by having two or more fields and rotating the grazing from one to the other. Such management produces more feed, and by allowing the new growth to get up 1½ ft. high the danger of poisoning is eliminated.

There is very little danger of cyanide poisoning from pasturing sudan, although it has been occasionally reported where short, dark green sudan has been pastured, and also from shoots starting new after a frost in the fall. The value of the grass, however, for pastusage is so great that it greatly offsets the slight danger of cyanide poisoning.

Wellemeyer Redecorating Store

The past few days Art Wellemeyer and his men have been redecorating the basement rooms in his store. The undertaking laboratory has been repainted, as well as the casket display room and the room where used furniture is displayed. Mr. Wellemeyer is also doing some remodeling in the way of re-arranging and changing fixtures.

SPECIAL PICTURE SHOW FOR SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 8

Klemme's open air theatre will feature a special show for Saturday evening, July 8th, when "The Valley of the Giants" will be shown in technicolor. This is one of the latest spectacular productions and was recently shown in the larger city theatres.

The regular run of comedy and short feature will also be shown.

Wedding Anniversaries Observed At W. H. Galbreth Home Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. W Henry Galbreth entertained at dinner Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson and son, Ray, Jr., and Dr and Mrs. Dulmes and son, Dick. The occasion was the fifth wedding anniversary of Mr and Mrs. Galbreth and the twentieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs Jorgenson.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman and daughter, Marian, brought home made ice cream and cake to the Galbreth home.

Return From Long Trip

George Platt and Clarence Kluckhohn, Jr., returned Sunday from a two and one-half month's trip that took them 15,000 miles and carried them into Old Mexico, Canada and thirty-three states in the Union. They visited a number of eastern states and then took a southern route along the coast, through the west, northwest and return. They made the entire trip without a minute of motor trouble or having a flat tire. In Mexico they drove through the entire country to the very southern border.

Harry L. Hopkins Will Show Iowa Farmers How To Farm

Harry L. Hopkins, secretary of commerce and a leading new dealer, seems to have his personal farm problem—that of finding a farm—solved. He has signed a two-year lease for the old W. H. Spaulding farm, a mile north of Grinnell, with the title holder, the Aetna Life Insurance company, and the lease carries an option to buy. The farm, containing 288 acres is over two-thirds pasture land. Mr. Hopkins has made arrangements with the present tenants, the Albert Grosenbachs, to manage the place for him and it is understood the farm is to be his home whenever he comes to Grinnell. Despite the rumor, Hopkins said he had no present intention of buying a residence property in the city proper. The new landlord said he hoped that both he and his tenant would make some money, but he would not divulge the type of farming he expected to engage in. There has been some speculation on this point, since the secretary had said he was going to get away from the familiar corn-hog type of farming. But he could hardly go into the corn-hog business anyhow on a farm that is more than two-thirds in grass.

Inventions by Alexander Bell

Before he had reached the age of 17, Alexander Graham Bell had devised a method for removing the husks from wheat. Among his more important inventions may be mentioned the harmonic multiple telegraph, the fundamental method that underlies the electric transmission of speech in any form in any part of the world, the magneto-electric speaking telephone, the photo-phone for transmitting speech and other sounds to a distance by means of a beam of light, an induction-balance with magneto-electric telephone for painlessly locating bullets or other metallic masses lodged in the human body, telephone probe to determine the position and depth of metallic masses in the body, the spectrophone for determining the range of audibility of different substances in the spectrum, tetrahedral kites and kite structures Bell was joint inventor of the graphophone and flat disc records for recording and reproducing speech, music and other sounds, and also joint inventor in a number of improvements designed to promote aerial locomotion in connection with the Aerial Experiment association (1903-08).

Kerosene Brought Oil Lamps

The development of a process of distilling kerosene from crude oil brought about the making of lamps designed especially for kerosene. These lamps gave much better light than the tallow candles formerly used. The production of kerosene was the main reason for the existence of the oil mdustry at first. As time went on, drilling for oil spread from New York, Pennsylvania, and western Virginia to Ohio, Illinois, and Indiana When drilling spread into the West, the term "wildcat" as applied to oil wells came into use. It was applied to the search for oil in new areas "out among the wildcats" of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. Hence its application to drilling in unproved territory.

Value of Color in Eggs

Many believe that brown eggs are richer and more nutritious than white ones. But there is no foundation for this belief, as analysis shows that eggs are practically the same in chemical composition regardless of the color of the shell, and that no difference exists in the food or nutriment content between the light and dark colored eggs. Some localities consider white eggs the choicer, while others believe the brown ones to be superior.

IT'S ABOUT TIME TO MOW PASTURES

A lot of farmers mow their pastures to get rid of the weeds, but few farmers mow them soon enough, in the judgement of H. D. Hughes, professor of farm crops at Iowa State College.

The time to mow a pasture to kill the weeds is when the most prevalent weeds are just in bloom. At this stage they are the weakest. If one waits until the weeds dry up and the seed has ripened, the mowing does little good.

Mowing bluegrass pastures at this time of year has another advantage—it will induce livestock to start grazing on areas which they have not previously fed on and will thus tend to make them let up on certain spots which they have chewed down to the roots, Mr. Hughes says.

Areas which livestock do not feed on early produces coarse grass. Thus the next season, the tender grass comes up on the areas where the pature was eaten down closely the previous season. Hence, unless the pasture is mowed, the stock will simply continue year after year feeding on certain spots and leaving others alone.

Medium sized horses are the type in greatest demand today.

South American Jungles Motherland of Our Corn

The long-sought motherland of maize, historically the chief agricultural crop in America, is credited to the jungles of Central South America, according to reports to the National Academy of Science by investigators from the Texas Agricultural Experiment station, writes Thomas R. Henry in the Washington Star.

Corn was found by the earliest white explorers as a cultivated crop throughout the Americas, essentially in the form known today. It had been domesticated by the Indians from some wild grain, but there was no trace of this hypothetical ancestor Only two grasslike growths remotely approached it—teosinte in Mexico and Central America and tripsacum, which grows through the southern United States southward through Mexico.

Neither approached very closely the cultivated maize which seems to have spread from two centers where two great civilizations had been built up upon it—Peru and Yucatan. The Texas botanists conducted their search for the origin of corn within the grain itself by microscopic study of the structure of its chromosomes, or bundles of genes which are the units of heredity.

These show clearly, they report, that it could have descended neither from teosinte or tripsacum The former grass, they maintain, actually appears to be a later development from a cross between maize and tripsacum. There are tripsacum elements in the corn grown in the United States, but these apparently are only later developments.

No Snoring Allowed in Churches of Old England

In these days if anyone goes to sleep in church there isn't much that can be done about it. But this was not so in the past, as a study of old parish registers will show, relates a correspondent in London Answers Magazine.

In those days there was an official known as the Sluggard Walker He probably enjoyed his job. This was to patrol the aisle, rod in hand, waiting for the first nod. Then—rap went the stick on the sleeper's head. An entry from a Derbyshire register dated 1772 shows that he was paid an annual fee of ten shillings for the work.

Even more interesting must have been the work done by Robert Walton of Youlgreave, in 1699. The entry shows that he was paid 16 pence "for whipping ye dogges forth of ye church in time of Divine Service."

From a Castleton register comes an entry of real historical interest: "1745. Paid to ye ringers at the flight of the Rebels. 5s. 0d."

Speed of Ducks

The magazine American Shotgun gives the following table of flights for various species of ducks: The canvasback duck, 130 to 160 feet per second, with an average of 145; bluewing teal, 120 to 140 feet per second, average 130; greenwing teal, 100 to 130 feet per second, average 115. Other authorities give the redhead duck 110 to 130 feet per second, mallard 50 to 90. To convert these figures into miles per hour, multiply by 0.6818, so that the canvasback duck's average speed is over 98 miles per hour According to an article in Scientific American by S. F. Aaron, it would seem that these figures are exaggerated. He states it is doubtful that wild ducks or other sea birds can attain speeds of more than 60 miles an hour for short or long distances, as the result of his observations and measurements. This same author regards the bluewinged teal as the fastest of the duck family, faster than the canvasback or pintail.

Monastery Depends on Spring

St. Anthony's monastery, founded in 315 A. D. in the mountains east of Cairo and believed to be the oldest continuous monastery in the world, depends upon a single spring of water which flows out of the perpendicular rock wall of the adjacent mountain. Should this spring fail, the beautiful gardens of St. Anthony's would die and the monastery would be compelled to close down. Persons visiting the monastery after dark are hauled up to a small door in the wall by means of a rope.

Human Burglar Alarm

Further evidence that old customs never die in Great Britain comes to notice in Yorkshire. Each day at 9 p. m. in the town of Ripon a hornblower stands in the center of town and blows a blast to each of the four points of the compass and a final one before the mayor's house. The custom has been handed down from Saxon times, and the hornblower was once paid for acting as a human burglar alarm during the night.

Used Verse From Micah

An excerpt from the eighth verse of the sixth chapter of Micah is in the rotunda of the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C. It reads: "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" It is one of the many inscriptions that form part of the decoration of this building.

ARLENE WILLE WAS HOSTESS TO ELL 4-H GIRLS JUNE 21

The Ell Progressive Homemakers met at the home of Arlene Wille on Wednesday, June 21, 1939.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Adala Wille and roll call was answered by eight members and the leaders by giving the kind of flower each liked in a glass, pottery or china container.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary.

An interesting talk and illustration on flower arrangement was given by Adala Wille.

The leader, Ruby Schram, gave a demonstration on how to make corners on our dressing table cover.

An interesting report on the Iowa 4-H convention was given by our delegate, Jeroldene Goll.

Plans for the July Farm Bureau program were made. The 4H girls have charge of the program and refreshments.

Three visitors were present at this meeting.

After the meeting was adjourned refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Roberta Goll on June 28.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

On account of the rain the Klemme Girl Scouts were unable to hold their regular meetings on Wednesday Last Thursday we held a meeting in the school house at 2:00 p. m. After roll call we looked at Girl Scout pictures and Mrs. Schaeffer told a story from the Klemme Times called "The Price of Perfection" We studied the flowers by telling what garden flowers were popular in our neighborhood We also told something that would make our home, school and neighborhood more attractive.

Monday, June 26 we met at Barbara and Shirley Johnson's place. The girls who will be ten years old by December 1, 1939, are meeting alternate Mondays with Shirley Johnson under the supervision of Mrs. Johnson, Troop Committee Chairman While these girls were having their meeting the White Rose, Clover Leaf and Sun Flower patrols had the following program·

Going to Babylon, game under Mavis Meyer; Review of Garden Flowers; How to cut, keep and arrange garden flowers, by Mrs. Schaeffer; Play, "Forget-Me-Not," directed by Carmen Kluckhohn and written by Shirley and Barbara Johnson, and Marjorie Lemke Lorrainge Buntenbach took Marjorie's place because she was gone

Peter, Nancy Carroll Usher, and the younger scouts sang and spoke pieces between acts.

The average June bride's trousseau is costing $208, according to the National Consumers' Tax Commission of Chicago June trousseau sales, the Commission reported, promised to jump 25 per cent over 1938.

Freeze.

Cream-Less Ice Cream.
(Makes 2 quarts)

¾ cup sugar
4 tablespoons flour
1 quart milk (scalded)
2 eggs (beaten separately)
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
¼ teaspoon salt

Combine sugar and flour and blend with scalded milk; then cook over low flame, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Remove from flame and pour three tablespoons of the mixture over beaten egg yolks. Blend thoroughly, then add to custard mixture, together with salt and vanilla extract. Chill. Pour mixture into freezing container of modern ice cream freezer. Pour the stiffly beaten egg whites over and then assemble the freezer and cover. Pack with mixture of three parts crushed ice and one part rock salt. Freeze.

Strawberry Whipped Cream Ice.
(Serves 6)

1 quart strawberries
2 cups sugar
¼ cup lemon juice
1 pint cold water
1 cup whipped cream sweetened with 1 tablespoon confectioners' sugar

Mash the berries, add the sugar and lemon juice, and let stand for about an hour. Add the water, and pour the mixture into the freezing container of an ice cream freezer. Assemble the freezer and cover. Pack with a mixture of three parts crushed ice and one part rock salt. Turn the crank slowly and steadily until the mixture thickens (about five minutes). Carefully remove the cover and the dasher, fill the hollow with sweetened whipped cream, cover with wax paper, replace the cover and repack with ice and salt. Let stand for about three hours before serving.

Lemon Cream Sherbet.
(Makes about 2 quarts)

¾ cup lemon rind (grated)
1 cup cold water
1 cup lemon juice
4 cups sugar
2 eggs (beaten)
5 cups milk
2 cups heavy cream

Put the freshly grated lemon rind in a saucepan with the cold water. Bring to a boil and strain. To the liquid add the lemon juice and the sugar. Stir well. Beat eggs and to them add the milk and cream. Assemble the freezer and pack with ice and salt. When the freezer is ready, combine the two mixtures for the ice cream, pouring the fruit mixture slowly into the milk and cream. Stir quickly, pour into the freezing container, cover and freeze.

SOLOMON: A RULER WHO BEGAN WELL

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 3:5-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart . . . that I may discern between good and bad.—I Kings 3:9.

Success or failure in life is determined by the measure of a man's devotion to God and obedience to the will of God. We speak now of real success, not according to the ideas of the world. We are concerned with what a man is and what he does for God, not with what he may happen to possess.

An excellent outline taken from Points for Emphasis, by Dr. Hight C. Moore, most effectively presents the lesson.

I. Wisdom Offered (v. 5).

Solomon had properly opened his reign by going to Gibeon to offer a thousand burnt offerings because he "loved the Lord" (v. 3). Having returned from his day of worship, he had fallen into a deep sleep when God spoke to him saying, "Ask what I shall give thee." It was an unusual offer, a kind of blank check that God gives only to those whom He can trust to fill it out right, as Maclaren suggests.

Sometimes we wish God would give us such an opportunity. "That is just what He has done. He has appeared to you not in dreams, but in broad daylight and by His Son Jesus Christ has said as plainly as He could, Ask and it shall be given you." He has repeated it three times, saying, ask, seek, find. And then He has returned to say, "Everyone that asketh receiveth, and he that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." We have no right "to say that Solomon was more favored than we. We are more favored than he. If we have not, it is because we ask not. If we lose peace and joy, happiness and heaven, it is all for want of asking" (Joseph Hammond).

II. Wisdom Chosen (vv. 6-9).

The noble and intelligent choice of Solomon has been much admired and rightly so, for he chose the greatest gift that could come to any man, "an understanding heart." He might have asked for money or power, but with the lack of wisdom to use them properly they would have been a curse to him and to others. Long life is but a continued blight to a foolish man because it only extends the time of his folly. All things in the way of possessions must be outside of a man, therefore they may be lost or misused. But what he is and what he has in his heart, these are what make a man worth while. Solomon showed the beginning of wisdom when he chose, above all things, an understanding heart.

III. Wisdom Granted (vv. 10-14).

There can be no higher word of commendation than to say that a man's choice "pleased the Lord" (v. 10). To have that attitude of mind and heart which expresses itself in words and actions so exactly in conformity to the will of God that the Almighty Himself is pleased, is to be ready for God's unlimited blessing. Solomon asked for wisdom, and because he received that gift from God, he was ready to receive riches, honor, and power. We may by God's grace go the same way and take from His blessed hand numberless gifts.

Note the qualifying word "if" in verse 14. Solomon failed God in his later years as king. The tragic results are written for all to read. That way none of us should ever go. The lesson is plain—faith takes blessing from God; unbelief brings failure and sorrow. Let everyone that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

IV. Wisdom Exercised (v. 15).

When Solomon awoke from his dream he showed his faith in God's promise and in fact demonstrated the wisdom which was now his possession, by returning to his capital city, Jerusalem, to stand before the ark of the covenant in reverent worship, then to lead his people in a public service of confession and consecration, which was followed by a great religious feast which drew the king and "all his servants," the people of Israel, into a blessed unity before the Lord.

One could wish and pray that all the rulers of the earth whether in democracies or under dictatorships might have the wisdom and humility of Solomon. The world is in utter confusion and really confesses that it does not know the way out of its difficulty. It has not yet turned to God. If rulers and people would fall upon their faces before Him in contrition and supplication, it would not be long before we would see both spiritual and material peace and prosperity.

Make It Positive

Scripture seems to make it positive that every soul has everlastingness, but Scripture also seems to make it positive that for Jesus' kind of everlastingness every soul has got to qualify.

HOW TO SEW

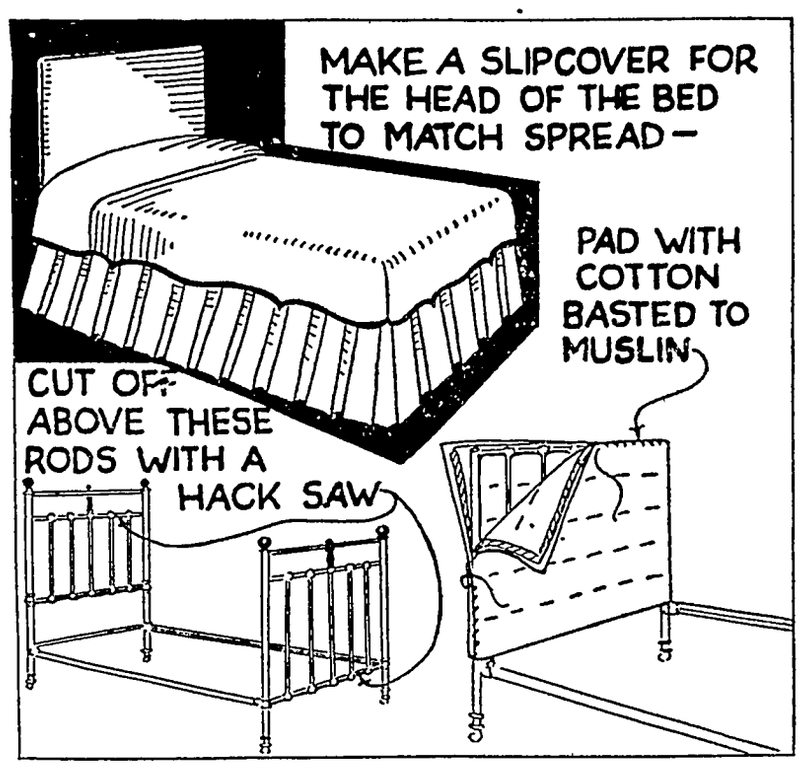
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



MAKE A SLIPCOVER FOR THE HEAD OF THE BED TO MATCH SPREAD—PAD WITH COTTON BASTED TO MUSLIN
CUT OFF ABOVE THESE RODS WITH A HACK SAW

The Plumber's Hack Saw Did This Trick.

BETSY was all agog to have a bed with no foot piece and a padded head to match her spread. Ingenuity would have to substitute for money, and she was seriously considering this and that when the plumber was called to fix a leaky pipe.

The plumber took a fine saw and sawed a pipe in two just as if it were wood. Right then something clicked for Betsy. That old iron bed in the attic! It could be cut down. It was cut down, as shown in the sketch.

The top of this bed is padded with cotton basted to muslin. Betsy used an old comforter for padding. Her mind seems to jump with the greatest of ease from water pipes to iron beds and from padding to old comforters.

NOTE: Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, and No 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, are now 15 cents each, or both books for 25 cents. Readers who have not secured their copies of these two books should send in their orders at once, as no more copies will be available, when the present stock is sold. Your choice of the QUILT LEAFLET showing 36 authentic patchwork stitches; or the RAGRUG LEAFLET, will be included with orders for both books for the present, but the offer may be withdrawn at any time. Leaflets are 6 cents each when ordered without the books.

Everyone should have copies of these two books containing 96 How to Sew articles by Mrs. Spears, that have not appeared in the paper. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Wit and Wisdom

"SWIMMING gives girls a good color," says a writer. So does diving—into their handbags.

"The bobbed-haired girl is going out," says a well-known hairdressing expert. Yes; every night.

A motorist's defense was that the pedestrian flatly refused to get out of the way. The question, however, is whether he was flat before he refused.

"Intoxicating" was the description in a newspaper report of the scenes at a recent first night. We trust this does not mean that the audience gave way to boos.

TAKE IT EASY!

WARNS THAT CHILDREN SHOULD RECEIVE SUNTAN GRADUALLY

Every mother knows that a baby needs a certain amount of sunshine Many of them, however, do not know that this sunshine must be direct and that sun rays which pass through an ordinary glass window, through clothing, and even through the atmosphere on dark, windy, dusty days lose a great deal of the health-giving rays which are known as ultra-violet

A great deal of harm has been done to a number of children by putting them into sunsuits and letting them run out into the sun without preparing their bodies properly.

A baby's skin must become accustomed to direct sun rays by a gradual tanning process. A certain part of the body should be exposed for a few minutes each day and then a slightly larger area each day following, until finally the entire body has had its share

The length of time for a baby's sun bath can be determined by the child's age, type of skin (blonde or brunette), the time of day, the season of the year, and also the condition of the day. The baby's eyes should be protected from the direct rays of the sun at all times.

Gradual tanning for the baby should continue until the entire body, arms, legs, head and trunk have been covered The body should be exposed both front and back.

When the skin has been well tanned, the baby will thrive on fairly long exposure to the sun daily in diminished amounts of clothing, but until this slow tanning process has been completed, great care must be exercised to prevent serious burning.

LOCAL SOFTBALLERS SPLIT DOUBLEHEADER WITH LIBERTY TEAM

Sunday afternoon saw the local softball team swing into action on their new diamond for the first time. Playing a doubleheader with the Schoenwetter aggregation from Liberty the locals dropped the opener by a score of 3 to 1, and then went on to take the night cap by a 12 to 2 count.

Pitchers for Klemme in the first game were B. Ausburn and Brinkman. In the second game Brinkman went the route on the mound and allowed only five hits. Schuldt handled the catching for both games.

Joe Blank did a masterful job of pitching for the Liberty team in the opener, but weakened in the second game. "Cap" Blank caught both games for Liberty.

BEEF CONSUMPTION

Some people have claimed that average hog prices bear a fixed relationship to average steer prices and consequently rise or fall as steer prices go up or down. A study of the subject and the statistics shown in the chart above, however, does not bear out such a claim. As a matter of fact, since 1890 (war years excluded) the ratio of hog prices to cattle prices has been one of constant change. During this period hog prices were higher than cattle prices in 19 years and lower than cattle prices in the other 24. Almost every year saw a change in this ratio between cattle and hog prices.

One significant thing shown by the statistics is that when the supply of pork and lard to be consumed has been greater relatively than that of beef, the price of hogs has been lower relatively than that of steers, and, vice versa, when the supply of beef has been relatively higher than that of pork and lard, the price of steers has been relatively lower than that of hogs.

This principle is particularly well illustrated in the period 1927 to 1936 inclusive when hog prices were consistently lower (by varying amounts) than steer prices. During this period, the chart shows that the amount of pork and lard to be consumed was the highest on record for a like period, while beef on the other hand was less than average.

Other factors that have had a bearing on this price ratio are the volume of pork and lard that can be exported (now almost negligible), and the preference of consumers for pork or for beef, mostly due, of course, to a favorable price necessary to move increased supplies of one or the other into consumption. Naturally, the more hogs or the more cattle that come to market, the lower the price will be.

These are the economic factors that cause the price of one to be higher, or to be lower, than the price of the other, regardless of whether the livestock is marketed at central markets or at interior markets.

"Ten Nights In A Bar Room" Will Be Shown In Motion Pictures Here

FREE PICTURE SHOW WILL BE HELD NEXT WED. NIGHT

The famous temperance play, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," in talking picture form will be presented in the Klemme Open Air Theatre Wednesday evening, July 12 following the band concert.

Adapted from the original Hollywood film which was a leading box office attraction several years ago the drama has been remarkably popular as a special feature of dry rallies in all parts of the country.

William Farnum, noted character actor, takes the leading part of Joe Morgan, the miller, in the picture to be seen here. The part of saloon keeper is performed by William Santschi. The fight between these two is considered one of the most intensely dramatic even filmed Thomas Jefferson, a son of the great American actor, Joseph Jefferson, plays the barfly. Other parts including the doctor and the gambler are acted by a well selected cast.

After a thorough survey of program features, the Iowa Anti-Saloon League selected this picture as the best method of bringing temperance information to persons of all ages.

Admission will be free to the program here, with an offering for the Anti-Saloon League temperance education campaign.

No Fireworks

Instead of dodging firecrackers this July Fourth, Iowa residents had a bombardment of brand new statutes, with about 250 new laws, passed by the legislature without a "publication clause," going into effect. ## Room Bureaus Set Up For New York Fair

NEW YORK (Special) — Two agencies have been set up in New York City to insure World's Fair visitors' getting living accommodations at a most reasonable price.

One is the Mayor's Official World's Fair Housing Bureau, Inc., with headquarters in the Chanin Building, 122 East 42d Street, set up by Mayor LaGuardia to locate rooms for visitors in private homes and dwellings.

The other is the Hotel Room Information Bureau of the Hotel Association of New York City, representing 180 hotels with a total capacity of 80,000 rooms. The bureau is at association headquarters, 221 West 57th Street.

Both agencies function without any charge to the visitor in finding him clean and comfortable accommodations at a price within his means. Rooms in private dwellings range in price from $1 per night per person upward, with the average per person $1.50.

Every Western Union and Postal Telegraph office is equipped to handle requests for rooms in conjunction with the Housing Bureau's operation. Every policeman in New York City is familiar with the plan and is equipped to give visitors first hand information on methods of obtaining registered and sponsored rooms.

On making the application for a room the visitor pays a deposit of 50 cents per night per person for which he receives a receipt. The receipt may be presented to the landlord in lieu of cash as part payment for the room.

WILL SHOW HOW

KANAWHA FIELD DAY TO STRESS WEED CONTROL

The North Iowa Agricultural Eyperiment Association will hold its ninth annual field day at the Kanawha Experiment Farm on July 7, according to C. S Reddy, Iowa State College plant pathologist.

The morning program will be devoted mainly to talks on demonstrations on weed control and weed identification Anyone coming who wishes to bring weeds along for identification may do so.

New Oat Varieties Shown

In the afternoon there will be a tour of the farm. Of special interest this year will be the fields of the new Hancock oats, seed of which will be distributed after threshing Fair-sized plots of this variety and other new varieties, Marion and Boone, are arranged so that these new varieties can be compared with older varieties such as Iowa 105 and Richland. It will be possible to observe the smut resistance and perhaps the stem and crown rust resistance of these varieties also.

Test New Wheat Variety

Other experiments of interest to be observed are those with sugar beets and the fields of a new selection of winter wheat. This selection is out of Iobred and will be distributed after threshing.

The North Iowa Agricultural Experiment Association is composed of farmers and businessmen who own the Kanawha Experiment Farm and operate it in connection with the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station and Extension Service.

STANDARD BEARERS ENJOYED MEETING HELD AT OKOBOJI

The Klemme Standard Bearers returned home Saturday afternoon after a glorious vacation at the Methodist Camp at Lake Okoboji.

The program was especially interesting this year because we were privileged to have several W.F.M.S. branch officers besides our Conference and District offiiers and other faculty members. These included Mrs. J. D. Bragg and Mrs. Olson of Missouri, and Mrs. Otis Moore of Tipton, Iowa. We had the opportunity of being with two missionaries from India and one from China and had several of these women as our guests. The girls were thrilled to have Betty Ling, a Chinese girl studying in America, for lunch. This girl is especially interesting to Standard Bearers because she was raised by an American missionary who bought her from a baby peddler for 30c. She has become a fine Christian girl and intends to go back in a year to give her life in service for her people.

We are very proud to say that Marjorie Lemke was elected vice president of the Standard Bearers for this coming year. Miss Irma Merritt was chosen as our cottage spirit.

Foreign investment was welcomed by the expanding America of 100 years ago. Today, with domestic money and industry idle, both Canada and the U. S. have enough trouble without inviting more. But one almost imperceptible result of Europe's dictator madness has been a knocking on America's gates by gold, men and industry from abroad: German Jews have brought their worldly goods; Czecho-Slovakia's industrious manufacturers have sought refuge for the plants that once supplied low-priced import goods for the American market. Results:

United States. Hit by industrial lethargy more severely than agricultural Canada, the U. S. has offered no refuge to foreign factories, largely because domestic manufacturers are sufficiently vocal to protest successfully. But money influx is something else. Secretary of

JAN BATA
Workers are not invited.

Commerce Harry Hopkins recently found foreign investments here rose from $7,036,000,000 at the end of 1937 to $7,883,000,000 at the end of 1938. Though much increase came from rising common stock prices last year, $49,000,000 represented net purchases of U. S. securities.

Canada. Several million pairs of Czech-made Bata shoes have been sold annually in the U. S. and Canada. Jan Bata, whose plant is the largest industry of its kind in the world, escaped with his money and technicians just before Adolf Hitler invaded Czecho-Slovakia. Popping up in Canada, he proposed to re-establish his plant at Prescott, Ont., supplying British dominions, the U. S. and Canadian markets from a factory manned by skilled Czech workers. Confidently expected is a compromise, but Czech workmen will not be imported. Other signs-of-the-times:

¶ One thousand farm families from Sudetenland are being settled in western Canada, the first 250 families having already arrived. Regarding Jewish refugees, Canada's immigration department makes no issue of race or religion, but demands that applicants either possess skill and money, or relations in Canada to support them.

¶ Foreign currency deposits in Canadian banks rose from $47,000,000 in 1938's first two months to $71,000,000 this year. In addition, refugee money is pouring into Canadian mining and industrial stocks.

Significance. Most observers agree that a huge transfer of wealth from Europe to America helps no one and hurts both continents, Europe because it reduces that industrial continent's already meager industrial resources; America, because it gluts still more an already money-and-industry glutted hemisphere.

ASIA:
Crossroads

No mystery to white men in the Orient is Japan's purpose in getting obstreperous over foreign concessions in Tientsin and other Chinese cities. With the rest of coastal China conquered, Japan finds European settlements its principal obstacle to consummation of the "new order" program. Thus observers expect continually expanding pressure unless Britain protects its rights in the Tientsin concession which Japan blockaded recently. Should Britain capitulate, as she has done repeatedly the past few years, Shanghai, Hankow, Amoy, and Canton concessions will be wiped out immediately to end a fascinating chapter in modern Chinese history:

Concessions and settlements date back almost 100 years, constituting a special position for occidental powers which thereby gain importance far out of proportion to the individual settlement's size. Example: Though all foreign areas in China total about 17 square miles and house only 50,000 white men, Japan has been forced to divert her attack around them.

The white man's star began descending in the East 40 years ago when Japan ousted British concessions from her own insular territory. At Tientsin, eight settlements that began in 1860 have dwindled to three (British, Italian and Japanese). Only in Canton have European settlements missed trouble.

Minus concessions, the U. S. nevertheless helps rule Shanghai and Amoy, also protecting American residents who live in other large Chinese cities. American garrisons, stationed to help maintain order at Shanghai, Tientsin, and Peking, may yet be called upon to take their choice: Resist or bow out of China with other white men.

UKRAINE:
Incentive

Russia's rich Ukraine ranges from the Carpathian mountains of central Europe almost to the Caspian sea, embracing 360,000 square miles and populated by 53,500,000 Russians, Slavs and Germans. Through its east and central part run rich valleys of the Dneiper and Dneister rivers, which for years have fed vast Russia. To the east, in the Donetz river basin, lie vast deposits of coal, iron ore and manganese, ace cards in the deck of any military nation.

PROMISED LAND

If Adolf Hitler's fascination for the Ukraine was once a puzzle, public interest has zoomed to such heights since he captured Czecho-Slovakia and thus made a path to the east, that the Ukraine's resources are now public knowledge. Even "Mein Kampf," which outlines Der Fuehrer's plans for wresting the Ukraine from Russia, revealed far less than a new U. S. bureau of mines study. Data:

The Ukraine's coal reserves are 72,300,000,000 tons; iron, 4,066,000,000 tons; ferruginous quartzite containing large iron percentage, 40,800,000,000 tons; manganese, 441,000,000 tons; lignite, 510,000,000 tons.

TREASURY:
Currency

Ten years ago U. S. citizens bought smaller wallets and billfolds when size of paper money was reduced. Since then 9,339,917,777 bills have been printed, denominations running from $1 to $100,000. (Latter are solely for museum use; nothing higher than $10,000 circulates.) Summing up a decade's experience, the treasury figured it had saved almost $2 per thousand miniature bills on paper, ink, labor and storage, a total saving of $18,000,000. Still lost, meanwhile, are 10,775,173 oversized bills, many of which met their fate in fires or drain pipes.

NICHOLAS HORTHY

Not since the World war has he commmanded a ship, but Admiral Nicholas Horthy has commanded a navy-less, kingless kingdom since he was elected regent of Hungary in 1920. Just turned 71, he is credited not only with averting Nazi German domination of Hungary's domestic affairs, but is also hailed as "the liberator of more than 1,000,000 Magyars from Czech oppression." The latter refers to Hungary's grab when Czecho-Slovakia was broken up last spring.

Though he has often visited Berlin and been flatteringly entertained by the Nazis, Admiral Horthy has followed a course of friendship with reservations. On his birthday he told parliament that, although advocating continued co-operation with Germany in foreign affairs, Hungary must not lapse into economic dependence by neglecting her own industrial development.

Still a fighter, Admiral Horthy flattened with his own fists six Nazi demonstrators who began shouting in the Budapest opera house last winter. Then he brushed a spot of dust from his blue naval uniform and stalked back to his seat.

In 1919 and 1920 Man O'War won 20 out of 21 starts, amassing $249,465 before his owner sent him to Faraway farm as a stud. Generation after generation of Faraway foals succeeded Man O'War in making turf history. His eighth son was foaled in 1934, was named War Admiral and made his debut as a two-year-old in 1936. Though he won three of his six starts that year, War Admiral reached his greatest heights in 1937 when he took the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, Belmont stakes and five other starts.

Last year began War Admiral's decline. Turfdom's throne was captured by Seabiscuit, who nevertheless had a hard time beating Man O'War's son in a much advertised two-way race. Suffering a slight injury to the joint just above the ankle on his near foreleg, he was retired when Owner Samuel D. Riddle decided the damage could not be repaired. Thus War Admiral has become the fifth generation in direct male line that has gone to the stud.

Munching oats with his old man at Faraway farm, War Admiral can mull over his record as the eighth greatest money-winning thoroughbred on the American list. Winning 21 of his 26 starts, he beat Man O'War in total earnings—$273,240 against $249,465.

TAXATION:
Profit Sharing

Last autumn a special senate committee inspired by Michigan's presidency-aspiring Sen. Arthur Vandenberg began studying profit sharing as a means of curing capital-labor trouble. The basic idea: Industrialists would get tax credits for sharing their profits or (if regarded in another light) would be penalized if they did not share profits). Though pointedly socialistic, the idea caught fire when one witness after another told how profit sharing had worked successfully. Soon Republican Vandenberg's idea began looking good to his Democratic colleagues, Iowa's Sen. Clyde Herring and Colorado's Edwin C. Johnson, both of whom knew the administration needed a clever card trick to soothe tax-irritated business.

By mid-June Mr. Vandenberg had lost the ball entirely, for Senators Herring and Johnson issued the committee's cautiously worded report. Its gist was that some "prudent experiments" in incentive taxation could be tried "in the spirit of exploration." Points (with critics' concensus in italics):

1. Exemption from all income taxes of the payments industrialists make to employees from accumulated profit-sharing retirement funds or annuities. (Good idea. Although it would temporarily make social security a duplication, that agency would eventually grow smaller as provision for old age returned to private hands.)

2. Issuance and sale of government profit-sharing bonds which would be available only to profit-sharing funds and would be issued for the purpose of protecting investments by employees. (Good and bad. Would discourage small private investment and small banking, meanwhile providing new source of money for government spending. May be discriminatory. But would also loosen large private capital for private investment.)

3. Specific tax credits for increased employment by companies following other than capital-expenditure work; similarly, reasonable exemption on such expenditures as plant expansion. (Good and bad. Would lower business taxes, but places capital in the position of a child who will be praised by a paternalistic government if he does right and punished if he does wrong. Presupposes that profit sharing, thus far untried on a national basis, would be substantially a cure-all that would permit drastic reduction in "extraordinary" government expenditures.)

Essentially a successful idea in private application, profit sharing will probably be boosted by both Democrats and Republicans in the next campaign. Chief issue (and no one yet knows which party will take which side) will be on the application of government incentive taxation. Said the report:

"One school of thought insists that the taxing power should never be used for either incentive or punitive purposes, and that one is the complement of the other. The other school of thought insists that we already have the punitive tax and that —confronting a condition rather than a theory—we should also have the incentive tax, either as an offset or a substitute."

★ Glamour to Perfection

By Virginia Vale

THERE'S a man in Hollywood who is perfectly happy if he's asked to make lightning. He is Gustav Rohrbach, one of those motion picture celebrities whom you never see on the screen and very seldom read about — men and women without whose aid motion pictures could never have become as technically perfect as they are.

Rohrbach can create all sorts of special effects, but making lightning is his favorite—he says he gets the same kick out of it that a boy gets from running to a fire.

It's no great stunt in itself, he says; you just bundle together a dozen or so high-intensity carbons on the end of two long sticks, put the sticks on a hinge, plug them into an electric circuit, and then operate them by hand. But unless you're very careful the carbons weld—then there's a chance of burning out fuses, and possibly setting the studio on fire.

If you want to see some of his work, go to Principal Productions' "Way Down South"—he did seventeen lightning effects for it—chain, bolt, summer and all the other varieties of lightning except the one known as ball, which very few people, including, Rohrbach, have ever seen.

Alexander Korda is launching a new star in "The Thief of Bagdad"; his name is John Justin, he's 21 years old, and has had a sort of Errol Flynn career—he's been rancher, deckhand, farm worker and actor, and traveled around the world. Korda sent out a call for a young player for the role of the prince, hundreds of young men applied, and John Justin won out, and got a seven-year contract.

Jack Dawn, Metro's mighty man of make-up, sort of took some of the screen girls' glamour apart a while ago. If you've seen old photographs of Hedy Lamarr you must have marveled at the change in her. Well, Mr. Dawn explained that her mouth was made over to give it that luscious curve; her hair was done in loose waves and that long bob was decreed, her eyebrows were revamped so that there was more space between them. But, he added, she had a practically perfect face to begin with!

WINDMILL POWER IS CHEAPEST WAY

Electric Pump Found Most Convenient.

By A. G. TYLER

The wind that whistles around our ears in January and that gently waves the fields of grain in July is still found to be one of the cheapest sources of power for some farm jobs, according to the division of agricultural engineering at the University of Minnesota. After summarizing the history and development of windmills all over the world, the following conclusions are reached as far as power for pumping water is concerned.

If low first cost is of prime importance, then pump by hand.

If convenience is the feature most desired, the electric pump is best.

If moderate first cost, no operating cost, freedom from monthly bills, and general all-around reliability are desirable, then the windmill will be the choice.

Tyler pointed out that the power output from farm windmills depends upon the diameter of the wheel. To compare the power developed by wheels of different sizes, multiply by itself the diameter of each wheel.

For example, an eight-foot mill will do almost twice as much work as a six-foot because six times six equals 36 while the diameter of an eight-foot wheel multiplied by itself gives 64. Likewise a 10-foot mill will do about three times as much as a six-foot mill. Large wheels run in lighter winds.

Fur-Bearing Animals Disappearing Rapidly

With but few exceptions, fur-bearing animals represent a disappearing race. The death knell of several species was sounded long ago; others are being crowded into oblivion despite the efforts of state legislatures, through ever-shorter furtaking seasons, to stop the decline.

Fur animals cannot increase, or even maintain their present numbers, without enough wild land to roam. Drainage projects have destroyed millions of acres suitable for wildfowl and furbearers. Over-trapping, too, for the billion-dollar fur industry, has had an influence.

These are statements of Dr. W. J. Hamilton Jr., zoologist at the New York state college of agriculture.

"We can never hope to restore our fur animals to the level of pioneer days, but we can help to restore, in numbers, many fine species. One way would be to restrict the trapping season to periods when fur is prime. Furs would then be taken when at their greatest value, and unprime pelts, that glut the market each year, would be reduced."

Insects May Be Cause of Stored Grain Loss

With AAA loans on corn and wheat increasing the farm storage of grains, farmers are cautioned to guard their grain from insect damage.

"If no preventive or control measures are taken, grain held for any length of time in farm bins is almost sure to become infested with insects with consequent loss in value of the grain for seed, for feeding or for market," it is explained in a circular issued by the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

Best measures recommended for controlling stored-grain insects and preventing damage are cleanliness and fumigation. Preventive measures must be taken before the grain is in the bin, since most insect damage is caused by failure to clean bins before the grain is stored. It is best to remove waste grain from cracks, corners and floors of bins.

Once grain is in the bin and has become infested with insects, fumigation is the only practical method of stopping damage.

in the long "Parade of Progress" staged in the separate buildings or on the greensward of that famous square.

Independence Hall.

Here is the oldest, the most venerated, of the historic structures in Independence square. It was erected about 1732 as a statehouse for provincial Pennsylvania from plans designed by Andrew Hamilton, brilliant colonial lawyer who won fame as the advocate of free speech and a free press. In 1736 the provincial assembly first held its sessions there, with Hamilton as speaker and Benjamin Franklin as clerk.

Here, in 1755, the members of the Pennsylvania provincial assembly asserted their refusal to "make laws by direction." Here, in 1757, they determined to send Benjamin Franklin to England to demand "redress of grievances." Here, in 1764, the citizens of Philadelphia protested the Stamp Acts and declared that no imposition of taxes against natural and legal rights would be tolerated. Here, in 1765, more than 300 of the leading merchants of Philadelphia signed the Non-importation resolutions.

And here, in 1775, after the entire country had been goaded into protest against British tyrannies, assembled the famous Second Continental congress.

It was in the now-famous Independence chamber of Independence hall that Richard Henry Lee of Virginia offered, on June 7, 1776, the resolution declaring that "These United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States."

It was in this chamber, on July 4, 1776, that the Declaration of Independence, which gave world-stirring expression to that resolution and to the whole cause of human liberty, was adopted.

It was here that the Continental congress appointed George Washington commander-in-chief of the Revolutionary armies; that it created the name, "The United States"; that it adopted the design of the American flag.

It was here, in 1781, that congress received news of the final victory at Yorktown, and, in 1783, ratified the Treaty of Peace.

Then Independence hall, having housed the birth of a nation, became the scene of its firm establishment as well.

In its chambers had been adopted the Articles of Confederation. And when they proved inadequate, when the nation sought a "more perfect Union," it was at Independence hall that the Founders met to draft its form.

So here, in 1787, they wrote the Constitution of the United States —America's firm guarantee that "We, the people" should rule; history's greatest and most famous charter of free government.

Independence Square

While the provincial assembly and the Continental congress enacted their stirring drama in Independence hall, the people played a similarly significant part on the wider stage of Independence square.

Here, in Independence square, they met to protest the Stamp Acts; and, again, to forbid the landing of the cargo from the tea-ship "Polly."

Here, in June, 1774, they gathered to denounce the closing of the Port of Boston, and to propose a congress of "sister colonies."

Here, on April 24, 1775, they heard the news of the Battle of Lexington and resolved " to associate for the purpose of defending with arms their property, liberty and lives."

Here, in 1775, they saw the first Pennsylvania quota mustered into service with the Continental army.

And here, on July 8, 1776, they assembled, thousands strong, to hear the first public reading of the Declaration of Independence and to cheer its epoch-making proclamation of the rights and the dignity of man.

Congress Hall and Others.

Independence square had staged the birth of a nation. Now it was to stage the second act of our great American drama: the task of organizing that nation and setting it firmly on a course of unprecedented expansion and development.

Not in Independence hall itself were these later events enacted, but in the sister structures, Congress hall and Old City hall, which flank the older statehouse on either side.

To Congress hall moved the First Congress of the United States in 1790, at the conclusion of its first two sessions in New York. Here, in Congress hall, both house and senate continued to meet until 1800, when the new Capitol of the United States was established at Washington. Here congress enacted the most important measures of our early republic. Here it debated the famous Jay treaty, and admitted Vermont, Kentucky, and Tennessee into the Union.

Here, in 1793, it saw George Washington inaugurated for his second term, and later listened to his famous "Farewell Address." Here, in 1799, it mourned the great leader's death and heard him eulogized in the inspired words: "First in War, First in Peace, First in the Hearts of His Countrymen." Here John Adams was inducted as second President of the United States.

And in Old City hall, during the same ten years, sat the Supreme court of the United States. Here it handed down the first of the decisions which throughout our history have strengthened and clarified the Constitution.

As Independence hall and its two sister structures stand as the symbol of our ideal of freedom, so the American Philosophical Society building, which shares with them the famous square, represents the beginning of our national progress in science and its material developments.

For here David Rittenhouse, America's first astronomer, gave to the world the results of his studies. Here Benjamin Franklin thrilled his notable audiences —and Europe as well—with his reports on electricity. Here Benjamin West, the artist; John Bartram, the botanist; Benjamin Rush, the physician and chemist, quickened the spread of learning.

Here 15 signers of the Declaration, and 18 delegates to the Constitutional convention—including Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, Adams and Madison—sat as officers or members of the Philosophical society.

Here were established the first scientific society, the first important museum, the first notable collection of manuscripts and historic relics in the United States. Here, in our earliest days, was created a world-wide respect for American science and learning.

Here it was demonstrated that free government and high human development go hand in hand.

Liberty Bell Ever Has Been 'Voice of Freedom And Herald of Victory'

Among all the historic relics in Independence square none today fans the fires of patriotism, none touches the hearts of visitors, like the Liberty bell. In its presence they stand enthralled, like devotees at a shrine. There they seem to hear again the announcements of great deeds and the tributes to dauntless men that it tolled through almost two centuries of our early history.

Independence hall was the "Cradle of Freedom." The Liberty bell was "Freedom's Voice and Herald."

Throughout our colonial and Revolutionary history, it gave the call that convened the provincial assemblies which battled for the people's rights; it sounded the summons that brought citizens to Independence square for their meetings of public protest and action.

Boldly that eloquent tongue proclaimed the early protests against the Sugar and Stamp acts in 1764 and 1765, the town meeting which forbade the landing of tea in 1773, the closing of the Port of Boston in 1774, the first hostilities of the Revolution in 1775, and the opening of the Second Continental congress.

And then, in July, 1776, it rang the great message foretold in its prophetic inscription—familiar to all Americans today:

"Proclaim Liberty Throughout All the Land Unto All the Inhabitants Thereof."

But its labors in the struggle for freedom were not ended. Throughout the Revolution—except for the brief period when Philadelphia and Independence square were held by the enemy—the Liberty bell remained a herald of victory. On each July 4 it commemorated the anniversary of the Declaration; in October, 1781, it announced the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown; in April, 1783, it proclaimed the treaty of peace and the ultimate triumph of that great principle of liberty to which a new people had dedicated their nation.

Independence Hall.

And in 1788 it announced the birth of our republic, as it rang to celebrate the ratification of the United States Constitution, with its inspiring assurance that "We, the people" should govern.

The Liberty bell still served the nation long after the capital had moved from Philadelphia to Washington. From its high tower in Independence hall, it continued to herald both glad news and tragedy. Through many years it pealed on Independence day to celebrate the Declaration, and on February 22 to honor Washington's birthday. In 1824, it sang a welcome to Lafayette, then re-visiting the nation for which in youth he had fought. And in sadder tones it mourned, one by one, the deaths of the Signers as the years took their inexorable toll.

Then on July 8 of 1835, it sounded its final note. On that day the Liberty bell cracked while intoning a funeral dirge for Chief Justice Marshall, early and most notable interpreter of the Constitution.

Now mute, but still glorious, the bell is preserved, for all to see, in the main corridor of Independence hall, overlooking the famous square. And its message remains unchanged. Still in eloquent symbolism it continues to proclaim liberty throughout the land and to the inhabitants thereof. Still, in July of 1939, it repeats the self-evident truths that it announced so joyously in July of 1776. Still it reminds America and humanity:

"That All Men Are Created Equal—

"That They Are Endowed by Their Creator With Certain Unalienable Rights—

"That Among These Are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness—

"That to Secure These Rights, Governments Are Instituted Among Men, Deriving Their Just Powers From the Consent of the Governed."

See Recipe Below.

Salads for Summer Meals

When the mercury soars skyward and appetites are on the wane, nothing tastes quite so good as a crisp, cool mixture of fresh greens, or fruits, or vegetables with a tart, taste-teasing dressing.

Salads are summer favorites. There's hardly a dish that's so simple yet so satisfying to make, and there's such a pleasant way of making sure that we get the minerals and vitamins we need!

Suggestions on Salads.

Salad ingredients must be clean and cold and crisp. Contrast is important, too—contrast in textures, in flavors, and in colors. Combine crisp foods with soft; sharp, pungent-tasting foods with mild - flavored ones; and pale, uninteresting looking foods with foods that are vividly colored. Make your summer salads as light or as substantial as you please. Find a few good basic recipes, and vary them to suit yourself. Here are some of my own favorites—practical, everyday recipes that are easy to prepare and serve, yet delicious enough for almost any social occasion.

Summer Tossed Salad.

Dip edges of lettuce leaves in paprika and arrange in salad bowl. Add green pepper rings, cucumber slices, radish roses and tomatoes, cut lengthwise in eighths. Toss together with french dressing made as follows: grate ½ clove garlic on two tablespoons granulated sugar. Add one tablespoon salt, one tablespoon paprika, one cup salad oil and ⅓ cup lemon juice. Shake vigorously, chill, and shake again, before mixing with salad.

Festive Potato Salad.
(Serves 5)

3 eggs (hard cooked)
4 cups cooked potatoes (cut fine)
⅓ cup green pepper (cut fine)
1 bunch green onions (cut fine)
⅓ cup celery (cut fine)
¼ cup sweet pickles (cut fine)
1 cup mayonnaise-type salad dressing
Salt to taste

Cut hard cooked eggs in slices. Combine ingredients in order given, reserving a few of the egg slices for garnishing. Chill. Serve in large bowl lined with lettuce. Garnish with radish roses and hard cooked egg.

Crab Salad.
(Serves 5)

1 13-ounce tin crabmeat
¾ cup celery (cut fine)
¼ cup sweet pickles (cut fine)
2 hard cooked eggs—riced egg yolk
¾ cup mayonnaise dressing
1 head lettuce
1 tablespoon capers

Flake crabmeat and remove membrane. Add celery, sweet pickle and egg white (finely cut). Mix with mayonnaise dressing. Arrange on bed of crisp lettuce leaves and garnish with egg yolk (riced) and capers.

Frozen Tomato Salad.

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 No. 2 can tomatoes
1 cup celery and celery leaves (chopped)
2 tablespoons diced onion
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
6 whole cloves
6 peppercorns
Sprig thyme
1 bay leaf
1 cup whipping cream (whipped)
½ teaspoon paprika

Soak gelatin in cold water. Heat tomatoes, celery, onion and all seasonings in a saucepan and simmer gently for about 10 minutes. Strain and add at once to the softened gelatin. Mix thoroughly and chill. When mixture begins to thicken, fold in the whipped cream. Pour into freezing tray and place in freezing compartment until thick. When frozen, unmold and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Marshmallow Mint Salad.
(Serves 6)

1 package (¼ pound) marshmallows
1 tablespoon fruit juice
Peppermint extract
Green vegetable coloring
½ cup mayonnaise
¾ cup mixed fruits (cut in small pieces)
1 cup whipping cream (whipped)

Place marshmallows and fruit juice in saucepan and heat over low heat. Fold over and over until marshmallows are about half melted. Remove from heat and continue folding until mixture is smooth and fluffy. Cool. Then add peppermint extract and green food coloring (these can be omitted, if desired). Blend in mayonnaise and fruits and fold in whipped cream. Turn into individual molds and chill in refrigerator until firm. Unmold on lacy endive ring and garnish with a sprig of mint and halved maraschino cherry.

Cinderella Salad.
(Serves 6)

2 cups cooked lamb (cut in small cubes)
⅔ cup french dressing
2 tablespoons fresh mint (chopped)
½ cup cooked peas
½ cup cooked carrots
2 cups shredded cabbage
Salt and pepper to taste

Place lamb in salad bowl, add french dressing and chopped mint. Chill in refrigerator for one hour. Then add remaining ingredients and toss together lightly, adding additional french dressing, if desired. Garnish with strips of green pepper and wedges of tomatoes.

Who said that Father doesn't like salads? Of course he does! To be sure it's a sheer waste of energy to make a fancy creation in the hope of pleasing him, but there are plenty of plain, substantial salads that he likes. ## French Provincial Style Of Furniture Is Revived

French provincial furniture, now that it is being revived, is sure to be with us for a long time for it is beautiful in itself, it is moderately priced, and it can be combined so well with early American styles. Many women, who like a little variety in their rooms, will delight to find that the simple, graceful chairs of beechwood and of cherry in this French vein mix perfectly with maple tables and chairs.

There are charming upholstered armchairs, too, from which to choose, and many handsome little occasional tables, some of the tiered variety, others with sunken receptacles for plants, and still others for bedside use and for service for afternoon tea or after dinner coffee.

Whether you are doing an entire room or are merely investing in a piece or two you'll have no difficulty in finding charming furniture in French provincial style.

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

ITINERANT MERCHANTS

Application of a new law of wide interest to Iowa businessmen was begun this week as highway patrolmen received instruction regarding the itinerant mrechants act The law regulates, taxes and licenses peddlers who truck their merchandise from place to place. The law is designed to curb the practices of irresponsible dealers who have no established place of business and will not only serve as a protection to reputable merchants with large investments in permanent stores and shops, but will protect the purchaser against fly-by-night peddlers of questionable merchandise. The act does not apply to bona fide, estblished merchants.

GUBERNATORIAL PORTRAITS

Friends of former Governor Dan Turner oiled up their muskets one day last week when what they believed might be a deliberate insult to this grand od patriot first came to light. It was discovered that a portrait of Governor Turner was stored away in the basement of the state historical building instead of hanging on the wall of the official gallery on the second floor. Further investigation revealed that no portraits of former governors Clyde L. Herring and Nelson G Kraschel had been hung either because no portraits of these individuals had been presented to the department. The gallery of about 200 portraits of famous Iowans now hanging has used up about all available space and there may be some culling of those who have only slight claims to Iowa residence to make room for later favored sons.

NEW GOP CHAIRMAN

Harry Swan, Atlantic attorney who became chairman of the Republican State Central Committee last week following the resignation of James H. Milroy of Vinton, is accepted by Iowa Republicans as assurance that the party's announced policy of "honest, efficient and economical state government" will proceed as outlined in the 1938 campaign. Ordinarily a state chairmanship is an honor and influence much sought by ambitious leaders but district members of the state committee who met to choose Milroy's successor quickly submerged personal interests and named Swan unanimously on the first ballot. Although he is among the newer members of the committee Swan will have the unqualified support of such veterans as Walker Hanna of Burlington, oldest in length of service; Thad Snell of Ida Grove, Dr. Geo. Bemis of Garner and Clyde McFarlin of Montezuma. Iowa Republicans view the 1940 campaign with the confidence that accompanies harmony and the absence of factional differences.

ERRORS COSTLY

Upwards of a million drivers' licenses are to be issued by the motor vehicle department during the next few weeks. It is a tremendous task at best and is always complicated and delayed by carelessness of applicants. One out of five applications reveal errors which make it necessary to hold up or return the application form. The commonest error is disregarding simple instructions printed on each form. Many forget to enclose the fifty cent fee and rubber checks are not uncommon. The clerical staff in the Governor's office is also handling upwards of 14,000 applications for notary public commissions and are hampered by about the same percentage of errors. Here again delay is caused by disregard of printed instructions. These commissions are issued for a period of three years and the $75,000 in fee would, if it were so allocated, more than meet the appropriation necessary for operation of the Governor's office for the same period.

Origin of Morgan Horse Traced to Other Breeds

The founder of the house of Morgan in the horse world was a horse born about 1789—the property of Justin Morgan, who kept a tavern in Springfield, Mass., until he moved to Randolph, Vt., in the same year that was foaled the colt which was to perpetuate its owner's name. No one seems to have any knowledge of the blood strains of this famous sire, writes Capt. Maxwell M. Corpening in the Chicago Tribune. Some historians of Morgan horses say he was anything from a thoroughbred to a Canadian pony. Others claim many infusions of Arab, Barb, and Turkish blood. Be that as it may, a good horse was produced.

This founder of the clan was named Figure at birth, but renamed Justin Morgan when its offspring started to gain fame. He was a small horse, only 14 hands high and weighing 950 pounds; dark bay in color, with black legs, mane, and tail. The latter were coarse and heavy but not thick. His head was good but not very small—the forehead broad, with small ears set far apart. His eyes were medium size, dark, and prominent, with a pleasant but spirited expression. His back and legs were his most noticeable points—the former being extremely short, with shoulder blades and hip bones long and sloping. The legs were short, close-jointed, and thin, but with very wide bone and extremely well muscled for a horse of his size.

Ancient Well Once Used To Put Curse on Enemies

American visitors to St. Elian's well, not far from Colwyn bay, find that the story is true that the people believed in witchcraft until the Nineteenth century. The ancient well was used to put a curse upon persons against whom the Welsh entertained a grudge. This medieval convenience, unique in the British Isles but not unknown to several places on the continent, was known as a "cursing well" There it was customary to call down the vengeance of St. Elian upon one's enemies.

The ceremony was performed by an old woman, who (after she had received a sufficient fee) put the name of the accursed upon a piece of lead and dropped it into the water, meanwhile muttering imprecations and prayers. Sometimes the intended victim heard about the sinister doings and paid the old woman a similar fee to take the curse off again. This she did by reciting psalms and drinking water from the well.

These under cover appeals to witchcraft as a way of settling scores against foes who could not be reached in any other way continued until 1818, when the attendant at the well was jailed for 12 months for receiving money under false pretenses. After that the place lost its attraction for seekers after vengeance.

Science Marches On

There is only one factor which will ever change the actual conditions of daily living, and that is science. Science, which plods sometimes and marches or crusades, seems immune to man, creed or dogma. Wars never hinder it, they help it to progress, it wins in peace, devastating plagues and pestilences give it the secret of how to combat them, it gathers rich stores of information from the very people who are worried as to how new political theories will affect them. Science goes on—quietly—seeking the paths of human enlightenment, exerting its passive influence and increasing strength on a sometimes unbelieving and skeptical world which challenges everything put before it, until it finds that the unaccepted theory has been subconsciously accepted and that what once was fancy has gradually become fact.

Coast of Historic Memories

Torquay, on the south Devon coast, is visited by many travelers Protected by the oval-shaped Lyme bay and facing due south, it is advantageously placed. In the vicinity are architectural relics of note, among them Tor Abbey, founded in 1196. After the defeat of the Spanish Armada, one of the galleys was brought into the bay. This coast of historic memories has many interesting villages and nooks for the wanderer — Teignmouth, at the mouth of the Teign, Newton abbey, and Dawlish with its picturesque cliffs. Paignton is another well-known place. Exeter is not far away, with its cathedral of notable Norman towers, the ancient city wall, the Guildhall, and the Chevalier's house once occupied by Charles II.

Use of First Railroad Rail

Wooden rails for use in mines were used as early as 1555 on a tramroad near Barnard's Castle company, Durham, England. The first use of iron plates to strengthen the wooden rails was at the Whitehaven collieries, Cumberland, England, in 1738. In 1754 iron plate rails were laid in a wagon way, connecting the Coalbrookdale Iron works in Shropshire with additional smelting furnaces at Horsehey. The first iron rail over which a train operated by a steam locomotive was on the Stockton & Darlington railway, England. This road was opened September 27, 1825.

Lovers' Shrine in Avignon Draws Thousands Yearly

That a love story 600 years old can still cause hearts to throb is evidenced in the great number of persons who visit the sweethearts' shrine in Avignon, France, dedicated to Laura and Petrarch, says the New York Times.

This shrine consists of a pillar commemorating the romance of Laura de Noves, the heroine of Petrarch's sonnets. It stands in the gardens of the Calvet museum and was erected in 1823 by Charles Kelsall, an Englishman, to take the place of Laura's tomb, which was destroyed, with the Cordeliers' church, during the French revolution.

Laura's Pillar, as it is called, has become a favorite trysting place for lovers in Avignon; like the tomb of Heloise and Abelard in Paris, it is seldom without flowers. Now and then a poem accompanies the flowers; it is generally a sonnet in which some modern lover tries to imitate the syle of Petrarch.

Sonnets Still Vibrant.

Although Laura died in 1348, and Petrarch in 1374, his sonnets are still vibrant with life as they tell the story of an enduring but unrequited love. Petrarch was 22 years old when he first saw Laura, and she was 20. Although Laura was already married, it was love at first sight—on his side. Whether she ever returned his love it is not possible to say, but the chances are she did not. Indeed, it is very doubtful if she appreciated the sonnets which Petrarch wrote about her, since they brought her unwelcome publicity and embarrassment; in addition, they excited the jealousy of her husband, to whom, everything indicates, she remained a model wife In any event, she bore him ten children, and then died of the plague in 1348. Seven months later her husband re-wed.

Half Ton of Paper Yearly Used by Average Family

The average American family consumes more than half a ton of paper costing about $40 in a year, according to economists of the forest service, United States department of agriculture.

The total consumption in the United States in 1937 was shown by census figures to be nearly 16,000,000 tons of paper—more than half the paper produced in the world The figure is the highest ever reported for any one nation. Paper consumption in the United States has practically doubled in the last 15 years, the forest service reports.

Of the 246 pounds of paper consumed or used by the average person, about 100 pounds represented newspapers, books, and writing paper. The remainder was used as cartons, building boards, wrapping papers, and numerous miscellaneous products.

The forest service points out that four-fifths of the paper consumed here was made in the United States. The remainder was imported principally in the form of newsprint, of which about 3,000,000 tons came from Canada.

In addition to the imports of paper, large quantities of pulpwood and wood pulp of certain kinds are imported annually for manufacture into paper in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, and the lake states. About half of the wood fiber in the United States is grown on foreign soil.

Instant Sea Soundings

Standing on the bridge of the liner Mauretania the navigating officer can watch an indicator giving an instant and continuous measurement of the depth of the sea under his keel. Taking soundings formerly was the work of ten minutes or more, says Popular Mechanics. The radio echometer, using a high-frequency beam reflected from the ocean floor, records the depth of water many times a minute by a "peak" of light on a calibrated scale. Thus it plots a graph of the contours of the sea bed and helps the navigator verify his position by comparison with charts of known contours.

Glass on Wheels

A railroad train, the coaches of which were constructed entirely of glass between wheels and roof, left Liverpool, England, in November, 1937, on a tour of important cities of England, Scotland and Wales to demonstrate the possibilities of glass for construction, homes building and equipment. It required more than 120,000 pieces of special glass to construct the exterior of the train. The interior even had a glass bathroom. Manufactured by a Lancashire firm of glass makers, the train was equipped with practically every known product of the glass-making industry.

American Bridge Builder

The late Joseph Baermann Strauss built nearly 500 bridges in the United States, Canada and abroad. He was co-designer of the Montreal-South Shore bridge, designer and engineer of the Columbia River bridge, designing engineer for the bascule span of the Arlington Memorial bridge and consulting engineer to the Port of New York Authority on the George Washington Memorial bridge. He originated the five types of the Strauss trunnion bascule bridge which has become a world standard, and two types of Strauss lift bridge.

In any type of varnish refinishing work, it is highly important to select the kind of varnish best suited to the job, because different surfaces are subjected to different kinds of use and exposure.

So the LOWE BROTHERS COMPANY has prepared five special NEPTUNITE VARNISHES, each of which is designed to do a particular job. They are:

1. INTERIOR — Made especially for woodwork, when a lasting lustre is desired.
2. FLOOR (Quick-Drying)—Dries quickly, has good body, and stands hard wear.
3. SEAT—For chair seats, church pews and other surfaces where unusually hard-drying is required.
4. RUBTONE—Designed for interior woodwork and floors where a rubbed finish is preferred.
5. RUBBING—For use when the finish is to be rubbed.
6. SPAR—For outside use. Holds up unusually well.

NEPTUNITE VARNISHES are all heat-proof, mar-proof and water-proof. They never turn white and won't even scratch white. Be sure to pay us a visit before you refinish.

Specialist Names Causes Of Many Foot Disorders

Most foot disorders can be traced to certain anatomic defects in the framework of the bones themselves, Dudley J. Morton, M. D., New York, maintains in a recent issue of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

Pointing out that such troubles are usually vaguely attributed to "faulty footwear" or "weakness of foot muscles and ligaments," Dr. Morton declares that they are most frequently caused by the failure of the first metatarsal (the bone of the big toe) to assume its share of weight bearing and the consequent thrusting of an extra burden on the adjacent bone.

There are two reasons for this situation First, the metatarsal bone may be short. "This shortness is really an evolutionary defect," Dr. Morton states "In the ideal foot, the first and second metatarsals are of the same length. But when the first bone is short, the whole weight falls on the slender second, placing a terrific burden on its joints and causing intense abnormal strain inside the foot."

The second cause is laxness of the ligaments of the first metatarsal, so that they permit the bone to wobble like the loose leg of a chair. "Once more the second metatarsal is called on to assume the brunt of the burden," the author explains "As a result the foot rolls inward, and this uneven distribution of weight causes the condition spoken of as 'fallen arches' or 'flat feet.'

" 'Weak muscles' are erroneously blamed for the collapse of the arch. But tests have proved that the muscles which run under the arch are not directly involved in weight bearing. Normally, only a slight effort is required of them.

"But when the foot rolls out of its normal position and the muscular effort is vastly increased, these muscles are subject to constant overtension with resulting pain and fatigue "

Although examination by X-ray is indispensable in determining such structural defects, Dr. Morton points out that the nature of foot ailments is often left to mere guesswork.

Traveler Should Study Currency Regulations

The American traveler abroad should take great care in the transportation and exchange of currency and should obtain full information before leaving and along the way about the various regulations in force in foreign countries in respect to currency Some European countries, notably Germany, Italy and the Soviet Union, have strict regulations regarding the amount of foreign currency that may be brought in or taken out.

They and other countries also have various special kinds of "tourist" currency for transportation and living costs within the country. It is necessary that every traveler today inform himself of the currency regulations of all countries he expects to visit so as to avoid trouble and to avail himself of the opportunities of the various bargain tourist rates.

In most European countries and in the Americas the money and exchange problem rarely presents difficulties. The safest and most convenient way to transport American money for use in all foreign countries is by travelers' checks for small and intermediate amounts and a letter of credit for large sums. Under ordinary circumstances it is unwise to travel with large sums of cash.

Shakespeare's Home

To reach the country where Shakespeare dwelt requires a railroad journey from London to Leamington, which is a celebrated health resort about 100 miles to the northwest. When the train deposits you at Leamington it lands you in the heart of a matchless territory Stratford is a short drive. Warwick castle is a stone's throw away. The stately ruins of Kenilworth are at hand. Rugby is a neighboring town. Just north is the industrial city of Birmingham. And close by is Banbury, where, if you are interested, there is the slim chance of seeing a fine lady ride on a white horse.

For Hard Paint

A combination of zinc oxide and white lead produces a harder paint and chalks less readily than the leads without the zinc oxide. Furthermore, they fade less and do not discolor or soil so much with dirt and water. Zinc oxide is whiter than lead and possesses a greater spreading capacity because it takes more oil. The content of zinc oxide should not exceed one-half of that of the white lead by weight, else the paint will be too hard and crack badly Zinc oxide alone dries too hard and quickly becomes brittle and cracks.

Sun Spots Upset Radios

If your radio gives consistently bad reception, think twice before blaming the manufacturers. It may be due to sun spots, according to A L. Durkee, engineer of the Bell Telephone laboratories, who explains that the latest 11-year sunspot cycle is due to reach its peak sometime in 1939. Studying the record of 18 such cycles, Durkee has found that the cycle maximum is followed by a period of magnetic disturbance that may twist words beyond recognition, make the philharmonic sound like a group of amateurs.

Calendar, Man's Record Of the Passing of Time

The calendar was brought about by evolution It has been regulated by mathematics and astronomy It has been compounded of superstitions, of religious rites. It has provoked some of the great dramatic situations of history, relates Seymour Korman in the Chicago Tribune.

The reckoning of time is as old as history itself. Primitive man noted the new moon, watched it wax and wane again. He knew the moods of the seasons. There was cold and warmth and he sensed they came at regular intervals.

The ancient Egyptians calculated time from the rising of the Nile (in mid-June). The North American Indians reckoned a journey in so many "sleeps."

The Incas of Peru erected cylindrical pillars and estimated solstices by measuring the sun's shadow. The theory of this stone and shadow reckoning is familiar in the sun dial.

Civilizations such as the Mayan, the Scandinavian, and the Babylonian had distinctive calendars many thousands of years ago. In classical Greece nearly every large city had its own calendar

The calendar depends on the sun, the moon, the earth, and a star The rotation of the earth around the sun gives the year, the rotation of the moon around the earth gives the month, the spin of the earth on its axis defines the day, the position of a star in the heavens gives the starting point from which to measure the year.

All of the celestial motions are chronologically independent There never can be an exact number of full days in any lunar month or solar year, nor can there be an exact number of lunar months in the solar year.

Hairy, Downy Best Known Among Woodpecker Family

Two of the best known woodpeckers, the hairy woodpecker and the downy woodpecker, range over the greater part of the United States. They differ chiefly in size, their color being practically the same The males, like those of many other woodpeckers, are distinguished by a scarlet patch on the head, notes a writer in the Missouri Farmer.

One of the larger woodpeckers familiar to everyone is the flicker, or golden-winged woodpecker, which is generally distributed throughout the United States from the Atlantic coast to the Rocky mountains There it is replaced by the red-shafted flicker, which extends westward to the Pacific. The two species are as nearly identical in food habits as their respective environments will allow. The flickers, while genuine woodpeckers, differ somewhat in habits from the rest of the family, and are frequently seen searching for food upon the ground.

The red-headed woodpecker is well known east of the Rocky mountains, but is rather rare in New England. Unlike some of the other species, it prefers fence posts and telegraph poles to trees as a foraging ground.

Woodpeckers apparently are the only agents which can successfully cope with certain insect enemies of the forest, and, to some extent, with those of fruit trees also.

'Cent' Name for 'Penny'

The word "cent" is the official name of our 1-cent piece, "penny" being merely a colloquial name for the coin. An act of congress passed August 8, 1786, prescribed the word "Cents: The highest copper piece of which 100 shall be equal to the dollar." On October 16 of the same year congress ordained "that no foreign copper coin whatsoever, shall after the first day of September, 1787, be current within the United States of America." This law removed the English penny which had circulated freely in this country until after the Revolution But the name penny had been transferred to our cent in popular usage and has clung to it ever since.

Discovery of the X-Ray

German physicist, Wilhelm Konrad Rontgen, discovered the X-ray in 1895 and gave it that name because he did not understand the nature of the ray (X standing for an unknown quantity in science). He was professor of physics and director of the Physical institute at Wurzburg and while experimenting with a highly exhausted vacuum tube, on the conduction of electricity through gases, he observed the fluorescence of a barium platino-cyanide screen which happened to be lying near. He found that this radiation had the power of passing through various substances which are opaque to ordinary light, also of affecting a photographic plate.

Defects in Southern Pine

Most commonly recognized defects and blemishes that may occur in Southern pine are the following: Checks, decay, holes, imperfect manufacture, knots, pitch, pitch pockets, pitch streaks, pith, shakes, splits, stain or discoloration, wane and warp. Naturally the better grade of southern pine, the freer it is from defects or blemishes. The decay is defined as disintegration of the wood substance due to the action of wood destroying fungi. The words dote and rot mean the same as decay.

Once Barbaric Words Now in Common Usage

There was a period in the early days of the United States when American writers shivered with fright at the thought of what critics writing in English literary publications would have to say about the latest "barbarisms" inflicted upon the mother tongue by their New world cousins.

As the new republic grew in size, population and achievements in the field of letters this tendency to regard the mother English as a more "respectable" language decreased. Today it was given further scholarly refutation in the sixth section of the New American English dictionary by the University of Chicago Press.

For example, the word "cowcatcher," which not so many years ago would have caused any right thinking Englishman of letters to tear his hair out with cries of rage, is now accepted as a practical example of the compounding of words by Americans. "Cowcatcher," which appears in the newly issued section of the dictionary is, it was pointed out, a word associated with sheep, pigs, horses and bulls, as well as cows, and it does not "catch," but rather "brushes aside."

Trends in the origin of words and word combinations of strictly American vintage, revealed in sections previously published, show patterns which make "American" compare favorably and with no need to blush, according to scholars compiling the work. The new section starts with "corn pit" and ends with "dew."

The dictionary is being completed at the rate of about four sections a year under the editorship of Sir William Craigie, co-editor of the famed Oxford-English dictionary, and James B. Hulbert, professor of English at the University of Chicago. They are aided by a trained corps of research workers.

Stratford-on-Avon Still Magnet for Americans

Unperturbed by the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy and its periodical revivals, the American visitor to Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's birthplace, approaches not in controversial spirit, but with zeal and reverence. The number of visitors increases annually, and the proportion of Americans increases in proportion with the general total. The overseas tourist goes to Stratford as certainly as he goes to Westminster abbey, the Tower of London, or the National gallery.

Shakespeare's house is in excellent preservation. It was restored in 1847, and the work was done with such care that the timber framework remains unaltered, and the place must bear a close resemblance to that in which the poet resided.

The ground floor contains living room, kitchen, and a smaller room; up one flight of stairs is shown "the room in which Shakespeare was born." A few chairs, a table, and a bust of the poet furnish this room There is an ancient fireplace and a timbered ceiling reminiscent of his time.

The walls are virtually covered with the signatures of visitors—Scott, Carlisle, Thackeray, Browning, and many others—but this tribute is no longer allowed. Here also is a Shakespeare museum, in which there are many memorials, including early editions of the plays, the Ely portrait and manuscripts addressed to the poet. The garden contains flowers and trees mentioned in the plays and poems.

The June pig survey indicates a considerable increase in hog production.

mmer Mood Expressed in Enchanting Sheer Cottons

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TH the new emphasis on al-lure, romance and the sweetly ine which is coloring every de-f the season's fashions, the g mode for summer becomes exciting than it has been in decades. Romantic traditions eing revived with endlessly ing skirts billowing from r fitted basques or high bod-smooth shoulders gleaming quaint puffed sleeves and the est of materials heralding a mood of enchantment.

here is this new influence thrillingly interpreted than in e of delicate sheer imported s for picturesque evening . Fine Swiss organdies, ngly versatile in their effects nishes, are ideally adapted to rous styling. Deceptively e and delicate in appearance, combine practicality with their g daintiness, for these im-cottons carry a permanent us finish which survives any r of tubbings or trips to the r. They may be depended to retain their original fresh-nd vitality indefinitely.

ly beyond words are the cut-mbroidered organdies in geo-and floral patterns which adorably youthful frocks when along simple lines that en-the charm of the fabric. A me frock of the sweet sim-type that uses cutout em-ed organdy is shown to the the illustration. Here deli-ith chic is achieved, plus a tic play on color via the strik-e of deep garnet colored or-embroidered in a trailing vine patterning as trimming p blue Swiss organdy sim-embroidered. The frock is styled on period lines having a tiny low-cut basque bodice with very full skirt banded in the deep garnet organdy. The matching bolero tunes it to informal wear.

It's the fashion for dainty cotton sheers to be made up in the sweet simplicity mode with ribbons run through yards and yards of beading and other cunning details that are reminiscent of great, great grandmamma's day. See in the gown pictured to the right how entrancingly this scheme of things is being tuned to current style trends. The material for this fetching gown is a sheer cut-out embroidered Swiss organdy with fitted basque bodice and detachable puffed sleeves. Deep rose grosgrain ribbon bandings show through the transparent weave most quaintly and effectively.

The beautiful draping quality of Swiss cloque organdy is stressed in an off-shoulder style for festive wear as shown centered in the picture. A fine star patterning with a tiny eyelet in each star is printed on a pale blue background to make this ingenious dinner and evening frock with its softly gathered off-the-shoulder bodice and full sweeping skirt.

Among the hosts of lovely organdies and Swisses whose endearing "young" charms are making such definite fashion appeal for summer there's nothing prettier to be found than the more-popular-than-ever transparent organdies that are delicately shadow-printed in subtle lace motif accented by use of matching lace as trimming. Then there are such delightful effects as an apple green permanent finish Swiss organdy in a floral shadow-printed bouquet patterning on a crisp, clear transparent ground.

Crystal clear organdies both in pastel monotones and deep tones are beguiling for gossamer sheer dinner and evening gowns styled to emphasize the daintiness of this type.

Bustle Dress Is In Style Picture

It is difficult to imagine the bustle dress coming back into the style picture, but from signs that tell it is not only coming but it's here. The movement began with a disposition among several Paris couturiers who advocated fullness brought to the back in skirts—a fashion that is widely accepted at the moment. Designers recently returned from the Paris openings say that the theme has been taken up to such an extent many dresses reflect the bustle influence in no uncertain terms via big bows placed at the waistline and via hip drapery that terminates in a bustle line at the back. For the most part the bustle trend is confined to formal evening gowns although several afternoon flowered chiffons have taken on tiers of ruffles at the back starting at the waistline.

Mother-Daughter Styles in Favor

The idea of styling parent-and-child costumes alike is as popular as ever. Some clever new versions turned out for this season include the skirt of many gores for both mother and little daughter done in a monotone weave or in the popular stripes if you choose. Shirtwaists of dotted or striped washable crepe are tailored identically, size their only distinction.

Waves on Shore

There's a great wave movement in the present silhouette trend, seen in fullness, flounces and gathers. Even the tailored suit is softer and more feminine.

JEROBOAM: A MAN WITH A GREAT OPPORTUNITY

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 11:26-31, 37-40.
GOLDEN TEXT—In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.—Proverbs 3:6.

Strength of personality apart from good character will not assure success but will, on the other hand, cause only intensified failure and disaster. We may even add divine promises of blessing which are given on condition of right living, and the man of courage and strength without good moral or spiritual character will only dissipate both promise and power and will become what is even worse than a failure—a bad example and a leader of wickedness.

I. Opportunity and Treachery (vv. 26-28).

Opportunity misused may become a curse, but that is the result when a man takes what might be a blessing and turns it into a blight. The life of Jeroboam is a warning against such sinfulness and at the same time it offers us an occasion to encourage young people to make the most of their opportunities for the glory of God.

That which commended Jeroboam to Solomon was that he was a man of courage and industry (v. 28). That combination will carry a man or woman to unlimited heights. The world is so full of timid and lazy folk, that the one who has a heart of valor and a willingness to work hard stands out in bold relief. Every sensible employer knows that fact and is quick to lay hold of and advance such an individual. Times are hard and work is scarce, but opportunity still knocks at the door of the boy or girl, man or woman who is brave and diligent.

The sad thing was that there was treachery in the heart of Jeroboam. Had he been willing to wait God's time he would have received all that he did ultimately receive and more, but his strength of personality did not include good character, and he at once began to plot against the king who had given him his chance to develop and advance. Let us teach our young people to be loyal and true, as well as to be brave and ambitious.

II. Promise and Condition (vv. 29-31, 37-39).

God had reached the end of His patience with Solomon. He who had begun on his knees in the house of God, seeking wisdom that he might rule his people aright, had come to the end of his life in apostasy and in wicked indulgence of the wishes of his heathen wives. Through His prophet Ahijah, God made known the purpose to divide the kingdom into ten tribes and two—a separation which knew no reunion while Israel was in the land.

Jeroboam was promised the ten tribes with the assurance of the great blessing which had been given to David, but this was definitely on the condition that he would "hearken—walk—do—keep" (v. 38) God's statutes. The fact that he failed only emphasizes the folly and wickedness of the man, for he went on his way to destruction in spite of opportunity and blessing. Men are doing the same thing today. Oh, that we who teach this lesson might be enabled to stop some such prodigal on this coming Lord's Day.

III. Danger and Exile (v. 40).

Although Jeroboam in accordance with God's promise did ultimately come to his throne, it was by way of danger and a flight into Egypt. Solomon determined to destroy him and Jeroboam had to flee into exile. If he had gone God's way to the throne and had abided God's time, he might have spared himself both danger and exile in a heathen land.

Perchance some one who reads these lines is just now languishing in the exile of an Egypt of despair because he has failed to obey God. To such a one we say, do not follow Jeroboam who went from exile on into greater sin and sorrow. Turn back now, seek God in confession and contrition, and if need be, in salvation. Get back to God's way and enjoy His blessing.

In making application of the lessons learned from the life of Jeroboam, let us not fail to point out that all down through the historical records he is referred to repeatedly as the man "who made Israel to sin." "Jeroboam's sins were not the sins of a common man. It is only kings, and kings' counselors, and popes, and bishops, and ministers, and elders, and such like, who can sin and make nations and churches and congregations to sin. But they can do it. And they are doing it every day . . . The commonest and meanest man among us has more than enough of this terrible power of both sinning himself and making other men to sin" (Alexander Whyte).

To Be Saved

When a man is saved he is saved from something that does him harm. But that isn't all. He is saved to something that is good for him and everybody he comes in contact with.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Three Boxes Make a Davenport Frame.

THERE comes a letter from a reader who says: "Thanks for the article telling how to make a chair of lumber and cover it. I wish there were more things that husbands and wives could do together. I have made all the curtains for our house and some slipcovers, but this chair that we both worked on was much more interesting."

Here is something that looks ambitious but is really simple. Anyone that can make three wooden boxes and then screw or bolt them together, can make this davenport frame. The center box is made to fit an inner spring mattress of any size desired. All the other dimensions are given here.

One way to make the cushions is to bind flat sheets of newspapers together and then pad this base with cotton. Covering material in a rather heavy, rough textured cotton goods in a plain color or a conventional design will harmonize best with the modern lines of this piece of furniture.

Klemme Girl On Tour In East

Miss Thelma Chambers returned home Monday from her trip in the east, while Miss Novella Bredbenner and her group from Cedar Falls went on to Philadelphia and Washington, D. C.

The girls spent a week at North Field, Mass., attending a National Kappa Phi Convention. They also spent 3 days in Boston and 4 days in New York City visiting historical places and the World's Fair as post-convention trips.

Novella will visit her grandmother in Benich, Pa., friends in Pittsburgh, Pa., and a college friend in Illinois before returning home.

In Fedeal District Court, San Juan, P. R. appeared eight-year-old Juan Rivera as a witness. Judge Robert Cooper asked the boy if he knew what an oath was. The boy did not answer. Judge Cooper asked him if he knew where he would go if he told a lie The boy was silent Judge Cooper tried again: "What will happen to you if you tell a lie?" The boy whispered· "I'll get warts." The judge ruled he was qualified to testify.

Best Musk Produced by Deer of the Himalayas

Throughout the long roll of the centuries there have been innumerable perfumes.

However, the bases—the fixatives—were a few natural products, the most famous of which is musk. Several animals produce musk, but the best comes from the male musk deer of the Himalayas, according to an authority in the Philadelphia Record.

The musk deer is only 20 inches high, has no antlers and its teeth project like tusks in the male. This tiny deer carries beneath the skin of his stomach a sack about the size of an orange, in which is found a dark brown substance, somewhat like wet gingerbread (found only in the male).

This "musk" is about the strongest smelling substance known, rather aromatic and pleasant. The deer is killed, the musk sack extracted and dried, then packed by camel caravan across the immense plains of Asia to the centers where it finds its way into world trade.

Long before the Christian era men were killing musk deer and dealing in the musk they obtained from them.

Musk is mixed with many other ingredients, whose odors it seems to blend into a whole. In color it is dark purplish, in texture dry, smooth and unctuous to the touch, in taste bitter.

So pervading is it that the scent remains for centuries. In 1558 "Bloody" Mary of England ordered Lady Cecily Cholmondoley imprisoned in the Tower of London. The governor of the tower, who sympathized with his fair prisoner, had her cell perfumed with musk. The characteristic perfume is still discernible after nearly 400 years.

Chemically musk contains ammonia, cholesterin, fatty matter, a bitter resinous substance and other animal principles.

Aaron, Name Given High Priest of Jewish Nation

The name Aaron, of Hebrew origin, has the picturesque meaning "lofty mountain," further interpreted as "enlightened" and "inspired," relates Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Aaron, elder brother of Moses, was the first high priest of the Jewish nation. Yielding to the demands of the Jews, he made a golden calf for them to worship, a sin for which Moses secured Jehovah's forgiveness. Aaron lived to be 123 but, like Moses, did not enter the promised land.

St. Aaron was a British martyr of the early Fourth century when Emperor Diocletian was trying to root out Christianity.

Aaron Hill (1685-1750) was an English writer of poems, plays, etc., and joint author of "The Plaindealer."

Rev. Aaron Burr (1716-57) was organizer and first president of Princeton university, then the College of New Jersey. He died the year after the birth of his son of the same name (1756-1836), senator, attorney general and vice president, destined to be the outstanding bearer of the name Aaron in this country. The younger Burr was a brilliant statesman but his career was blighted by his killing of Alexander Hamilton in a duel and by his attempt to found an independent empire in the Southwest, for which latter he was indicted for treason but was acquitted. He died in poverty and ostracism.

Passenger Pigeons Once Numbered Into Millions

Passenger pigeons were formerly numerous throughout most of the United States and southern Canada east of the Great Plains. Audubon and Wilson, early naturalists, reported that they saw these wild pigeons flying in flocks eight or ten miles long, more than a mile wide and so compact that the sun was hidden from view as they passed. When they settled down on a forest for the night, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News, trees broke down under their weight. Their cooing and the whirring of their wings were so loud that the report of a gun could not be heard. During the breeding season hundreds of them would nest in a single tree. The entire species is now extinct.

According to the United States biological survey, the last known survivor was a captive bird which died in the Cincinnati zoological gardens in September, 1914. Many theories have been advanced to account for the complete disappearance of these birds. The early settlers and hunters shot them by thousands and knocked them down with clubs and poles.

It is generally believed by naturalists that this indiscriminate slaughter of the passenger pigeons led to their ultimate extinction as a species. As civilization encroached upon the wilderness the birds began to disappear and kept on disappearing until there was not a single specimen living. One writer, however, believes that the birds were destroyed by a species of chicken mite introduced from Europe He reported that during the seventies and early eighties he found thousands of dead squabs under the trees where the pigeons were nesting. Upon examination they were found to be literally covered with mites.

Kitchen Kinks

Add one fourth teaspoonful of cream of tartar or a tablespoonful of Karo to frosting or fudge candy to keep it from sugaring.

Keep brown sugar in the refrigerator or in the bread box to keep it from getting so hard.

Roll your dry bread into bread crumbs and keep them in a fruit jar, and they are ready for use for thickening baked dishes, or for buttered crumbs on top.

When hanging your large bath towels on the line to dry, just put an extra clothes pin in the middle and you will be surprised how much nicer and straighter they will dry.

When hanging sheets on the line hang them the long way so the hems will be at the end. This way the hems will never get rust or dirt on them from the line. It does take more line room to hang them this way, but they are up from the ground far enough so that they will not touch anything to get them soiled.

GOOD NEWS!

MANY PHEASANT CHICKS DISTRIBUTED LAST MONTH

Conservation groups in 22 Iowa counties received more than 9,500 2-week-old pheasant chicks last month The birds are being distributed from the State Game Farm near Boone, and delivery will be made to other cooperating groups as birds become available.

Applications for 23,150 young birds have been received from groups in the 46 counties participating in the year's game distribution program, according to Taylor W. Huston, superintendent of Game and Enforcement

Expect 30,000

From 4,500 to 5,000 pheasant chicks are being hatched each week at the game farm The last setting of pheasant eggs will be made on July 1, and hatching will be suspended on July 25 Production is expected to exceed 30,000 this season.

At present hatching of quail and chukar partridge is in progress, and production of 700 chukar partridges and 2,500 to 3,000 quail is anticipated this year

Chukar Partridge

The chukar partridge is a new game bird to most Iowa farmers It is being released experimentally this year. Very few data have been gathered showing whether chukar partridge is a desirable game bird That data will be gathered this year when the birds are released They are being released only in areas which do not produce shootable surpluses of quail or pheasant Future planting will be made with the same idea in mind

All chukar "plantings" are being made on farms which have Soil Conservation Service agreements and wildlife production and management programs.

DR. BYRNES MISSMAN BEGINS DENTAL PRACTICE AT GARNER

Dr. Byrnes Missman, son of Dr W. F. Missman, has opened the former Dr. Specht office at Garner and the first of the week began practicing his profession, that of a dentist

Dr. Missman has purchased a lot of new equipment and will have a modern office at Garner He graduated from the University of Iowa and recently passed the State Board examinations.

GRAIN HARVESTING GETS UNDER FULL SWING IN THIS COMMUNITY

The annual job of cutting oats is well under way in this community and there are many fields of small grain now in the shock. A few fields were cut the latter part of the week, and the end of this week will see most fields in the shock.

Iowa's Tall Corn

Iowa's tall corn continues to grow taller. Plenty of rain with warm days and nights have sent the corn skyward. A number of fields of corn in this vicinity are beginning to tassle out. Corn fields display a dark, rich-green this year and tourists remark about the beauty of Iowa fields this year. Indications now point to a good corn crop in most sections.

Iowa Department Of Health Gives Advice For Hot Summer Weather

ADD A PINCH OF SALT TO YOUR DRINKING WATER THIS SUMMER

In the face of the current spell of hot weather, officials in the Iowa state department of health cast aside the oft-repeated advice to "drink at least 8 glasses of water a day," and told Iowans "to drink all the water you can these days" in order to replace bodily fluids lost through prespiration.

However, the officials warned against drinking "too much ice water" as cramps or other undesirable after-effects may result.

"Also, drop a pinch of salt in your drinking water as often as possible to prevent cramps," they said "Nervous depression, exhaustion, and in some cases, collapse, occur when excesive amounts of water and salt are lost and not replenished '

The officials added the advice not to overeat and said the diet should consist largely of starchy food, fruits and vegetables, with little proteins and fats.

With regard to heat exhaustion and "sunstroke," it was explained that these are different conditions, and the temperature of the body falls below normal in heat exhaustion but rises in cases of "sunstroke" Symptons of heat exhaustion include weak pulse and heart action, giddiness, and nausea. In sustroke, however, there are head pains, feeling of oppression, dizziness and occasiontlly nausea and vomiting. Unconsciousness, flushed skin, rapid pulse and high temperature follow.

As a safeguard against these conditions the person should find a cool place and rest at the first sign of these symptons, according to the doctors.

J. C. THOMAS BUYS BUILDING, WILL REMODEL FOR SHOP

Monday, J. C. Thomas purchased the August Baack building located just west of the Post Office. The building has recently been used as a cafe.

Mr Thomas plans to remodel the building and will locate his barber shop in the front part, and the rear rooms and upstairs will be used for living quarters. Mr. Thomas expects to begin remodeling operations soon and will move his barber shop equipment into the new quarters as soon as work has been completed.

MISS IRIS SHERWOOD IS BRIDE OF RUSSEL MAN

Announcement has been received of the marriage of Miss Iris Sherwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs W. L. Sherwood, and Mr Clell Lafavre of Russel, Iowa.

The couple were married Saturday, July 1st at the Baptist Church in Unionville, Missouri, and after the wedding they left for the home of the groom's relatives at Russel.

Mrs. Lafavre was graduated from Drake University affiliated with the Delta Sigma Epsilon Sorority of which she has kept her membership After graduating from Drake she accepted a position in the Numa Schools and continued as a teacher in the Junior High department there for three years. Later she was Dramatic teacher in the Latimer High School system and remained there for five years. She was re-elected for the coming year.

Mr. Lafavre grew to manhood in Russel, graduated from the high school and finished his education in the Junior College at Albia.

They will make their home in Des Moines at 1621 Pleasant St.

Important Ruling Must Be Obeyed By All Iowa Schools Next Year

KLEMME WINS!

SOFTBALL GOING AT TOP SPEED IN KLEMME

Two Local Teams Take Victories In Sunday Games

Softball has taken with local sports fans and a good crowd was out to see the Klemme team tangle with Renwick in a double header Sunday The locals walked off with easy victories in both games, behind the pitching of Brinkman and B Ausburn.

While these games were going on, yet another was being played at a diamond two miles north of town between, the Katter team from this community, and Garner. The Katter outfit also had an easy time of it and doubled the score on the Garner ten.

Forest City Next Sunday

Next Sunday at 2:00 p. m the Klemme team will tangle with Forest City in the first game of a double header. These two teams met in the tournament at Garner the Fourth and Klemme took the short end of a 5 to 2 count. The locals will be out for revenge Sunday and the games should provide plenty of entertainment.

HANCOCK RESIDENTS SPEND $200,225 ON CARS & TRUCKS

GARNER—Hancock county residents have spent $200,225.06 on new cars and trucks between Jan. 1 and July 3 this year, according to a report made by County Treasurer Roy L. McMillin. On this total $4,003.20 in use tax has been paid.

Mr. McMillin pointed out that $43,490 81 of the total amount was spent in June, and that during last month 23 cars and trucks were purchased outside of Hancock county at a cost of $21,046.

Eight new trucks and 37 new cars were licensed in the county during the month, and this was a gain over the five new trucks and 21 new cars licensed in June a year ago.

FAMILY GATHERING AND PICNIC DINNER HELD HERE SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wille's children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, and the Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch family gathered at the Henry Wille home Sunday noon.

All brought well filled baskets of food and a big picnic dinner was enjoyed by the seventy-five persons present. The afternoon was spent in visiting.

Those from Garden City, Minn., who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Palmby, Gladys and Clarence; Miss Davis and Mrs. Raymond Palmby and baby.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED TO COUPLES

GARNER — Four marriage licenses have been issued for Charles T. Owens and Mrs. Mathilda Erickson, both of Garner, and both of legal age; John Metsig, 28 Chicago, and Barbara Schmidt, 19, Garner; Donald Wilson, 38, and Blanche Marie Bird, 30, both of Woden; Howard R. Wayman, 26, Webster City, and Louanna McCurry, 18, Renwick.

MADE TRIP TO MASON CITY ON BICYCLE

Clarence Schide, son of Mr. C. C. Schide, inspector on the Klemme School project, made a trip to Mason City and back on his bicycle last Wednesday. The distance over and back is 60 miles, but Clarence enjoyed the trip.

IOWA SCHOOLS MUST GO NINE MONTHS

DES MOINES—All Iowa schools will be required to maintain nine months of school during the coming school year regardless of teachers' contracts made prior to the time the new school law became effective, according to information sent out last week from the office of the state superintendent of schools.

The opinion had been held by some that where a school board had contracted with a teacher at a certain wage for the eight months of school as formerly conducted, the new law would not affect such existing contracts. Apparently this is not the case.

The letter sent out from the state superintendent is as follows The question raised relative to the requirements for nine months of school next year has been discussed with the legal advisors in this department.

"I find that they have just recently taken this question up with the office of the attorney general and were informed hat all schools will be required to maintain a nine-month school year next year, regardless of whether or not they had already contracted with a teacher for eight months. This decision rests on the fact that a teacher's contract presumably covers all statutory requirements with reference to the schools of the state

"A similar ruling was given with reference to the requirements in connection with the minimum wage law when the new went into effect."

GRASSHOPPERS WORST IN TEN YEARS, DRAKE SAYS

Farmers in western Iowa are laying down a heavy barrage of grasshopper bait to rout the heaviest "hopper" infestation of any season in the last ten years

So far about 500 tons of grasshopper bait have been brought into the state according to Dr. Carl J. Drake, state entomologist at Iowa State College. Harrison and Plymouth counties, two of the most heavily infested, are putting out about 20 tons of bait daily.

The extreme western portion of the state is the most seriously infested section. Elsewhere rains largely checked the pest.

In the southern part of the state chinch bug control work is nearing its end. Drake reports that in a few days it will be useless to build barriers as the bugs will all have reached the winged stage.

About 75,000 gallons of creosote were brought into the state for use against this pest Most of this was used in the vicinity of Guthrie Center and Red Oak.

Dried up bluegrass pastures early this spring ruined the quality of many lambs being prepared for market.

New Government Lending Plan Will Hit Trouble, Say Experts; Strikes Spending Key for 1940

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

POLITICS:
Looking to 1940

"A year ago when the President sent his $4,500,000,000 lend-spend message to congress, I said it was like putting a shin plaster on a cancer. This plan now is just another shin plaster."

What looks like a shin plaster to North Carolina's Sen. Josiah W. Bailey looks to dubious U. S. business men as a timely reiteration of the politico-economic philosophy President Roosevelt expounded before congress last January 4, namely, that "government investment" in U. S. financial stability should not merely be an emergency stop gap, but a long-range standard policy. The new plan:

Government agencies would issue extra-budgetary federal-guaranteed securities for financing self-liquidating projects. Special U. S. authorities would loan a total of $3,860,000,000 within periods ranging from two to seven years, the total program to be divided as follows:

SENATOR BAILEY
Shin plaster for a cancer.

|---|---|
| Non-federal public works like bridges, hospitals and waterworks | $350,000,000 |
| Toll roads, express highways, city by-passes, etc. | 750,000,000 |
| Railroad equipment to be leased to carriers | 500,000,000 |
| Rural electrification expansion | 460,000,000 |
| Farm tenancy program | 500,000,000 |
| Increase in U. S. Housing Authority's borrowing power | 800,000,000 |
| Loans to foreign nations to purchase U. S. surpluses | 500,000,000 |

While Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley assured reporters the measure would pass immediately, political wiseacres took great pains to make an undiluted election issue of it. Almost universally overlooked was the White House's violent retreat from the costly, ineffectual pump-priming methods it has tried before, which consisted not of loans but straight spending. Also overlooked was the small size of a seven-year $3,860,000,000 program compared with $20,678,000,000 the New Deal spent on recovery and relief from 1933 to 1938. Nevertheless many a vital hole and many a political portent could be read from the measure:

Politics. With 10,000,000 still unemployed and national income about $12,000,000,000 under the "ideal" of $80,000,000,000 a year, the administration will obviously seek to perpetuate itself in 1940 by stimulating a temporary recovery as in 1938. Republicans and conservative Democrats point out that the new lending plan provides $870,000,000 to be spent next year; with FHA's new lending power ($800,000,000), with the emergency relief appropriation ($1,735,000,000) and record agricultural subsidies ($1,000,000,000) the coming fiscal year will bring expenditures of $4,405,000,000 as a prelude to the campaign and election. However sincere the President's intentions for recovery, the political connection is inescapable and leads many observers to believe Mr. Roosevelt will positively seek a third term.

Finance. Fears of orthodox U. S. financiers went unnoticed in the deluge of political comment. Among the fears:

¶ It was recalled that even Brain-truster Adolf Berle Jr., assistant secretary of state, recently said such lending methods must eventually lead to government absorption of the country's most productive plants.

¶ Mr. Roosevelt's insistence that the so-called "self liquidating" bonds be taxable brought investigation which revealed many projects are self-sustaining by so close a margin that to tax the bonds would make them a losing investment.

¶ Loans to municipalities will be blocked in many cases by local laws and state regulations covering municipal indebtedness. Most large cities, moreover, have already reached their debt limit.

¶ Since the Johnson act forbids new loans to nations already indebted to the U. S., only South America and Scandinavian countries could use the $500,000,000 trade-boosting loan. Financiers fear a loss here, since there is no method to force collection short of war.

¶ Leasing of equipment to railroads would, it is alleged, be an unsatisfactory substitute for the remedial legislation necessary to place U. S. carriers back on their feet. Restoration of rail prosperity is regarded as far preferable.

FRANCE:
Lesson

When French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet signed a mutual assistance pact with Turkish Ambassador Suad Davaz, Italo-German aggression into the eastern Mediterranean seemed effectively stymied. Moreover, for Signor Benito Mussolini it was an object lesson in gentlemanly behavior. Results: (1) Turkey is wooed away from the Rome-Berlin axis; (2) Anglo-French wartime control of the strategic Dardanelles makes German invasion of the Balkans less likely; (3) pro-Nazi Bulgaria is isolated; (4) Turkey's big neighbor, Russia, should now be more willing to enter a military agreement with Britain.

TURKEY'S GAIN
It pays to be a gentleman.

Mussolini's object lesson was that Turkey won the strategic Republic of Hatay (Syrian Alexandretta) in return. Though the transfer was probably illegal in League of Nations' eyes, under whose mandate France ruled it, Turkey nevertheless gained by negotiation what Italy has been unable to gain by threat. Stubborn Frenchmen still refuse to bow before Mussolini's demands for Suez canal rights, the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad and Italian minority rights in Tunisia.

NAVY:
Speed-Up

Fiscal year's start July 1 means new funds for new work in most U. S. government departments. Biggest appropriations for the 1939-40 fiscal year cover rearmament, and before July has passed into history the navy will be well under way with three new jobs:

Bases. Costing $65,000,000 are 12 plane and submarine bases for which congress has appropriated $31,621,000 to handle the first year's work. Outlying bases will be at San Juan, Puerto Rico; Kaneohe and Pearl Harbor, Hawaii; Sitka and Kodiak, Alaska; Midway island; Johnston island and Palmyra island in the western Pacific. Continental bases will be at Pensacola and Jacksonville, Fla., and Tongue Point, Ore.

Ships. Early June found 75 warships under construction, the program running ahead of last year. Meanwhile 24 new ships are being rushed, including two 45,000-ton "super" battleships. All will be laid down in 1940 and will cost about $350,000,000.

Planes. Effective immediately the "speed-up" policy will be applied to 500 new airships, whose completion during the 1939-40 fiscal year will bring the navy's total to 2,132.

HEADLINERS

REAR ADM. HARRY YARNELL

A pop-eyed Japanese consul in Shanghai received an unexpectedly brusque message recently for transmittal to Tokyo. It said that the American navy will go "wherever necessary" to protect American citizens and that it expects no interference from Japan, who has been trying to shove Occidentals out of the Orient.

The message came from Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, spare native of Independence, Iowa, director of America's Asiatic fleet and unofficial Far Eastern diplomatic representative since October, 1936. It was almost the parting shot of a man who has won virtually all disputes with Japan growing out of the Chinese war. For Mr. Yarnell, who meantime has won the admiration and even the respect of Japan, will reach statutory retirement age in July.

Veteran of the Spanish-American war, Philippine insurrection, Boxer campaign, Vera Cruz occupation and World war (where he commanded the U. S. S. Nashville), his most difficult assignment is the present one. He will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, possibly returning to his prairie home after a job well done.

How It Works

ANGLO-U. S. BARTER PACT

Most nations are deficient in some natural resources and have too much of others. In wartime, inability to export non-essentials and import essentials would be a military handicap. Friendly nations can prepare in advance against such emergencies without disturbing their economic balances. Under the new American-British barter treaty, the U. S. will give England $30,000,000 worth (or 600,000 bales) of surplus

COTTON, such as Britain needs for shells like these. It will come from 11,300,000 bales held by the U. S. as security for loans to farmers, thereby relieving pressure on the domestic market. In return, Britain will give the U. S. 85,000 tons of RUBBER, such as the army would need in wartime for purposes like tires for the above anti-tank gun. Britain will buy the rubber on open market. Each nation will hold the reserves for seven years as war stocks. Later other materials may be bartered, for America needs items like tin, chromium and manganese. Although the U. S. deplores barter as fostered by Germany, the new arrangement will merely supplement existing "favored nation" treaties and is not a basic economic tenet.

AGRICULTURE:
Strange Feeling

America's "dust bowl" lies roughly in the Panhandles of Texas and Oklahoma, eastern New Mexico and Colorado, and western Kansas. In 1936, at the drouth's depth, some 16,000,000 acres of once-valuable grain and grazing land lost part of its topsoil under ferocious winds that brought no moisture.

Reclamation followed, featured chiefly by conservation of rainfall and "fastening down" of the soil with hardy vegetation. Thousands of square miles were terraced and cultivated in contour furrows that held the moisture and stopped erosion. By this spring the 16,000,000 "blow" acres were reduced to 800,000.

As wind-weary farmers began harvesting the summer's crop, they could look back on a prodigious job well done. Whereas 1935 yielded a wheat crop of only 4,000,000 bushels, the dust bowl's elevator men expect from 15,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels when this season's grain is threshed.

Smiling, likewise, were drouth-ridden farmers of northern plains states (Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Montana). Though their land was still quite dry and this year's prospects none too good, they have felt something unusual this summer—rain.

TRANSPORTATION:
Pedestrians

"He has been sadly neglected and has had to shift for himself. He has evolved the simple philosophy that his job is to get across the street as best he can. He joins with other pedestrians in mass violation of traffic lights. In rural areas he walks on the pavement, on the wrong side of the road, and wears dark clothing at night."

This, said the National Safety Council's Leslie J. Sorenson, is the plight of U. S. pedestrians who in 1938 accounted for three out of every five persons killed in traffic accidents. What made the situation more startling were figures showing two-thirds of pedestrians killed were violating a traffic ordinance or committing an unsafe act. Thirteen per cent of them had been drinking; only 9 per cent of drivers involved in fatal accidents had been drinking.

Suggested cure: Make pedestrians obey stop signals and other traffic regulations just as automobile drivers must do; build sidewalks in the country.

FORECAST

PURGE—Succeeding retiring Gov. Richard W. Leche, the late Huey Long's brother Earl is expected to "purge" the political machine created by his illustrious brother, thereby preserving an air-tight organization being threatened by dissension. First to leave: Dr. James Monroe Smith, whom Huey Long named president of Louisiana State university.

WRECK—Evidencing the need for better submarine rescue equipment, salvagers of the sunken U. S. submarine Squalus predict the boat will not be raised until at least late July.

FARM TOPICS

ROTATIONS MAINTAIN SOIL PRODUCTIVITY

Get Higher Yields at Much Lower Cost.

By DR. HOWARD B. SPRAGUE

Many experiments have been conducted during the last 50 years on yields obtained with common crops grown in different rotations as compared with continuous cultivation of one crop. The New Jersey agricultural experiment station, Rutgers university, reports that higher yields were maintained at considerably less cost with a good crop rotation than even when liberal amounts of fertilizer were applied to land planted to one crop continuously.

Among the various reasons for better yields under the better crop rotations, which include sod crops, is the more adequate maintenance of soil organic matter. So important is this factor and the associated nitrogen content of the soil, that organic matter and nitrogen frequently serve as an adequate measure of the soil's producing power. In the New Jersey corn-growing contests of 1936 and 1938, it was clearly shown that high yields per acre and low costs per bushel were obtained only when there was a liberal supply of organic matter.

The maintenance of soil humus and nitrogen is much more convenient and inexpensive when clover, alfalfa, or other legumes are used or included in plantings for hays or pasture, than when grass alone is grown. One of the present-day problems in intensively farmed regions is to devise crop rotations which will balance cultivated crops properly with the soil-improving sod crops, or to find other means of restoring the organic matter which is being constantly depleted by every plowing, cultivation or other working of the soil. On some farms, land not cropped at present may be used to grow mulch crops which may be added to the soil in place of manure or other organic matter.

Cherry Trees Yield Heavily if Fertilized

Sour cherry trees have produced half again as much fruit when they were fertilized annually with five tons of manure per acre or 400 pounds an acre of ammonium sulphate containing about 80 pounds of actual nitrogen.

Such is the report of Dr. Louis R. Bryant, associate horticulturist, and Robert Gardner, associate agronomist, for the Colorado State College Experiment station at Fort Collins.

Increases in yield as great as 50 per cent from annual applications of 400 pounds of ammonium sulphate an acre or five tons of manure per acre resulted from increases in the amount of fruit set and matured. Although these treatments gave increased yields, there was no significant change in the size of individual fruits. Soil moisture records indicate that the cherries were not much larger than before they were fertilized because of a shortage of water in the soil during the growing season.

Livestock Thrives In Clean Quarters

One economical way of protecting live stock from disease and parasites is to clean the barns and yards thoroughly each year or oftener, according to Dr. O. V. Brumley, dean of the veterinary college, Ohio State university.

The remnants of old straw stacks furnish excellent harbors for bacteria and filth. Farmers who cannot spare the time to haul this straw to the fields where it will help the soil, should burn it in place as a live stock prevention measure.

Mudholes used as hog wallows help perpetuate animal parasites and are no hindrance to the spread of disease. These holes usually can be drained quite easily, and clean water will keep hogs as cool as water mixed with mud, bacteria, and parasites.

Rats, mice, pigeons, and sparrows are carriers of some animal diseases. No one holds any brief for rats and mice, and the farmer must decide for himself whether he has a greater interest in pigeons and sparrows or in his live stock.

Holes under buildings should be boarded up to prevent the entry of live stock, and animals should be fenced off from manure piles. Scrubbing feed boxes and live stock quarters and the use of disinfectants will round out the clean-up campaign.

Butter Market

In the 13 months prior to March 8, 1939, the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation and the Dairy Products Marketing association bought over 155 million pounds of butter in the open market to remove surpluses that kept prices unprofitably low and to increase consumption by providing butter for relief families. The increased consumption of butter as a surplus commodity by relief families accounted for millions of pounds.

★ Ingenious Quiz Program

IT BEGINS to look as if those girls who made "Four Daughters" what it was (with the aid of John Garfield), have a life-time job. They appear again in the new "Daughters Courageous" with him, and will shortly make "Four Wives." The studio had intended to have them do "Four Mothers" as the next of the series, but now the wives will come first. Of course, they could go on forever, becoming grandmothers, widows, and then possibly "Four Second Wives." Just see what you, the public, started when you acclaimed the three Lane sisters and Gale Page in that first picture!

In case you're interested in that picture Samuel Goldwyn has been making, bringing Jascha Heifetz to the screen, the title has been changed again. "Music School" has been abandoned in favor of "They Shall Have Music," which is going to be a bit harder on the men who fit the names of pictures into theater marquees.

When you see Brian Aherne in "Juarez"—if you haven't already seen him—you might pretend that you're a movie mogul and study his performance with the idea of offering him the role of "Christopher Columbus" in the movie version of that famous Italian's life. That's what Edward Small did.

On second thought, maybe you'd better not bother. For it would be a shame to do anything that would take your mind off the grand picture that Aherne, Paul Muni and Bette Davis made together. "Juarez" deserves all your attention.

For a long time it seemed likely that Rudy Vallee would be remembered as the man who started the "crooner" wave that swept over the country. Now it seems far more likely that he'll be famous as the fellow who discovered and developed more celebrities than anybody else.

Tommy Riggs, Edgar Bergen, Bob Burns—they're just three out of a list of more than one hundred radio celebrities who owe their fame to the chance that he gave them.

Those quiz programs, in one form or another, seem likely to go on forever, which is bad news for all the singers whom they have crowded off the airways.

One of the newest and most ingenious is that presided over by the two writers of mystery stories who sign their output "Ellery Queen." It's known as "The Adventures of Ellery Queen." Each week a mystery story is dramatized, with Mr. Queen and four guest detectives listening. As soon as Queen knows who the murderer is he stops the play, and each guest is asked to give his solution of the mystery. Then the dramatization is resumed and the author's solution given. It's lots of fun to follow from your own arm chair.

One of the radio singers for whom quiz programs hold no threats is Felix Knight, who's just had another renewal of his contract on that half-hour preceding the Vallee show. He appeared on it for one guest appearance, something like 84 weeks ago, and has been a regular ever since.

—*—

Lum and Abner are going back to their old home in Arkansas this summer, partly for a vacation, partly to make sure that they haven't lost their accents (as if they could!) and the home folks are beginning now to prepare a proper celebration.

ODDS AND ENDS—"Tarzan Finds a Son," with little Johnny Sheffield as the son, is a lot of fun, and just about the time it was released Maureen O'Sullivan, who plays "Tarzan's" mate, was celebrating the birth of her first baby . . . Metro has once more temporarily postponed filming "It Can't Happen Here" . . . Now it's Benjamin Franklin whose life is to be screened . . . Joan Blondell gives her usual expert performance in "Good Girls Go to Paris, Too" . . . Whatever you do, don't miss Jack Benny and his valet, Rochester, in "Man About Town."

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

VENTY-FIVE years ago this month a President of the nited States stood on the parapets of a fort and heard the ullets of enemy soldiers whistling about his ears—the ase on record of a Chief Executive having that experience his term of office. The President was Abraham Lincoln e scene of his narrow escape from death was Fort Stevens outskirts of Washington on July 12, 1864. It came about way:

Then, just as the Confederates started to deploy along a two-mile front for a concerted attack, Wright attempted a magnificent bluff.

A skeleton regiment of 400 men of the Twenty-fifth New York dismounted cavalry, commanded by Captain Chamberlain, which had just arrived from Baltimore, where it was being remounted and reorganized after being cut to pieces during the fighting in Virginia, filed into the rifle pits. Suddenly they leaped out, and, yelling like demons, charged through the picket line, drove back the Confederate skirmishers and recaptured the stone houses where the Gray sharpshooters were hiding. Acting as though Grant's "Invincible Sixth Corps" were backing them up, instead of a few thousand ineffective troops, they completely fooled the invaders and stopped their advance.

GEN. JUBAL A. EARLY

Early hesitated—and let slip his golden opportunity to capture Washington and perhaps end the war. As the forts increased their fire he began to withdraw his troops. A few hours later Grant's veterans of the Wilderness marched into the capital. Washington was saved!

That night there was heavy skirmishing in what is now Rock Creek park and Brightwood with the guns of Fort Stevens and Fort De Russey still roaring defiance at the invaders. During the night Early learned from his spies how he had been fooled and, filled with rage at the thought of his lost opportunity, he resolved to renew the attack despite the arrival of the Union reinforcements.

On the morning of July 12 he again advanced to the attack, after sending his sharpshooters forward to open fire on the defenders of the forts. During the morning President Lincoln arrived on the scene in his carriage, accompanied by Mrs. Lincoln. As General Wright advanced to greet him, the President extended his hand, saying, "General, I am very glad to see you. This looks as though we were going to do something."

"Mr. President," replied the general, pointing toward Fort Stevens, "if you'll just come along down there with me, I'll show you one of the prettiest little fights you could wish to see." Years later, General Wright told of the historic incident thus:

"No sooner were the words out of my mouth than I deeply regretted having uttered them. I fully realized that the President's life was far too valuable to be brought into danger by any careless words of mine. But it was too late. He not only accepted my invitation but insisted upon accompanying me, notwithstanding all I could say to prevent him. He sent his wife back and when I mounted the parapet, there he was beside me, looking out upon the scene with a great deal of interest. The enemy's sharpshooters were firing pretty closely, and I explained to him that the place was entirely too dangerous for him.

" 'It is not more dangerous for me than it is for you,' he replied coolly.

" 'But it is my duty to be here while it is your duty not to expose yourself. Your position requires this, and I particularly request you to remember it.'

"Just then a sharpshooter's bullet struck a surgeon who was standing near the President and I became really alarmed for his safety and I have no doubt, a little excited, as I said firmly:

" 'Mr. President, you must really get down from this exposed position. I cannot allow you to remain here longer and if you refuse I shall deem it my duty to have you removed under guard.'

" 'I suppose the absurdity of my threatening to put the President of the United States under arrest amused him, for he smiled, looked at me quizzically and got down behind the parapet, where I provided him with an ammunition box for a seat, but he wouldn't sit still a minute at a time and was constantly stretching up his long form to see what was going on, thereby exposing fully half of himself to danger in spite of all I could do; and thus he continued to bob up and down until the action was over, when he cheered lustily along with the rest and bidding us good night, got into his carriage and rode away home.' "

Soon afterwards the whole Confederate line moved forward but counter-attacks from Fort De Russey drove the flanks in toward Fort Stevens. Despite the hot fire poured into the Confederates, they advanced to within a short distance of the rifle pits before their lines broke and retreated. Under the cover of darkness, General Early withdrew his forces and crossed over into Virginia at White's Ford into Loudoun county. His retreat was a masterly one and accomplished with such skill that the Union forces were not aware of his withdrawal until he was too far away to be overtaken

In recent years a reproduction of old Fort Stevens, whose valiant defenders saved the nation's capital 75 years ago, was constructed by CCC workers and today a granite monument marks the spot upon which Lincoln stood as he watched the fighting. A bronze tablet on the monument reproduces the historic scene of July 12, 1864—the only time an American President was under combat fire while in office.

GEN. HORATIO G. WRIGHT

This bronze tablet was executed from a sketch made by James E Kelly, a famous sculptor and artist of Civil war scenes. Early in 1896 Kelly was in Washington while his model submitted in competition for the proposed equestrian monument of Gen. W. T. Sherman was on display in the war department. At that time Wright, who had been retired from the army was in the capital. Kelly had known Wright while both were living in New York during the seventies and had made a medallion portrait of him.

On January 17, 1896, the artist accompanied the general to the site of Fort Stevens near Brightwood, D. C., and there, under Wright's direction, he sketched the picture of Lincoln standing on the parapet of Fort Stevens, exposed to the fire of General Early's sharpshooters. That picture, signed and dated by Wright, is now in the possession of Dr. George Hope Ryder of New York city, owner of the Kelly collection of Civil war sketches.

Later this sketch was made into a finished drawing which was used for the tablet erected on the spot and dedicated on July 12, 1911. This finished drawing was first reproduced in the United States Army Recruiting News, by whose courtesy it is reproduced with this article.

When Lincoln stood on the parapets of Fort Stevens and watched the fighting, he little realized that a fellow-Kentuckian, who was an old political opponent of his, was watching the battle from the other side. Yet such was the case, for two of Early's divisions were commanded by Maj. Gen. John C. Breckinridge, one of the Democratic candidates whom Lincoln had defeated in the presidential election of 1860.

During the attack on Washington, Early and Breckinridge made their headquarters at Sil ver Spring in the home of Francis P. Blair, famous as a member of Andrew Jackson's "Kitchen Cabinet" and editor of the Washington Globe, which was established at Jackson's request as the official administration newspaper. Blair and Breckinridge were cousins and before the war Breckinridge had often visited in the Blair mansion at Silver Spring.

GEN. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE

So he saw to it that Early's soldiers did not molest Blair's private correspondence, consisting of letters from Jackson, Henry Clay and other notables, which had been left in the house. He even had Blair's silver plate transferred to another house for safekeeping and sent a note to Blair telling him what he had done. However, the home of Blair's son, Montgomery Blair, postmaster general in Lincoln's cabinet, did not escape so easily. It was burned to the ground by Early's soldiers.

There is an amusing story of how they captured two gamecocks owned by the Washington correspondent of Horace Greeley's New York Tribune. Although gamecocks are not the most toothsome kind of chicken, the Grayjackets are said to have taken unusual delight in boiling and eating the two which had been owned by "Old Horace's" representative!

After Early's departure a volume of Lord Byron's poems was found in which a Confederate soldier had written this message to the President: "Near Washington, July 12, 1864. Now, Uncle Abe, you had better be quiet during the balance of your administration. We only came near your town this time to show you what we could do, but if you go on in your mad career, we will come again soon, and you had better stand from under. Yours respectfully, The Worst Rebel You Ever Saw. Fifty-eighth Virginia Infantry."

Play Clothes Smartly Styled Of Dependable Wash Fabrics

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLAY clothes have come to be a theme of themes with costume designers. The idea of wearing just any old duds when you go out to play or to rough it in camp life or mountain climbs or just simple cross-country hikes is completely taboo these days. No woman of modern outlook can afford to sidetrack the issue of being smartly and appropriately garbed wherever she goes. There's absolutely no escaping the new demand for "style" tuned to environs of the time, the place and the game. Indulge in any outdoor pastime you will, but be sure you "look the part" in the matter of correct attire.

Designers have risen so valiantly to the occasion of creating an entire wardrobe of play clothes that all one has to do is to go to specialized departments and make your needs known and you will be outfitted to the 'nth degree of correctness for this sports occasion or that.

However, there is more to the play clothes challenge than just style, for dependable wearability that will withstand the ravages of roughing it is of such vast importance one needs must meet the issue with all the art and science at command. Which is exactly what fabric manufacturers are doing.

Note the play clothes pictured. They are extremely fabric conscious we can assure you, demonstrating perfectly the fact of their non-shrinkableness and their color fastness. Describing these timely modes, from left to right, the perfectly tailored slacks and shirt on the standing figure is of a wool and cotton flannel which has been scientifically sanforized shrunk in Switzerland.

A dark blouse with lighter skirt, both of sturdy cotton gabardine that has been pre-shrunk, as shown centered in the group will undoubtedly be a first choice with outdoor girls who know their 1939 fashions. Note the impeccably tailored pockets.

The Gay Nineties dressmaker bathing suit comes back again. Full skirt, basque bodice, snug-fitting waistband and tiny puffed sleeves with touches of narrow black velvet ribbon against demure yellow and white and black printed cotton describes the 1939 version of this quaint type as illustrated above to the right. Underneath this sanforized-shrunk cotton outfit jersey tights fit snugly making a complete trim and ship-shape ensemble.

Full of Nineteenth century charm, yet intensely modern with its brief bras is the beach ensemble on the seated figure in the foreground. It can be relied on to give perfect wear in that the flower print cotton which fashions it is pre-shrunk and fast color. Quaint ruffles edge the snug shorts and finish the formal little semi-fitted basque-like coat. The platform shoes are also interesting.

Hats, Tiny or Big

There is no excuse for not having a flattering hat this summer for every type is included in the showings from tiniest toques to brims that go to extremes in the matter of size. The diminutive hat for dinner and evening wear, as shown below, gains daily in popularity. It is here interpreted in soft irridescent feathers with a touch of shell pink velvet. The black veil is strikingly embroidered. Compared to some of the new brims the large mushroom hat shown here of black Milan is in reality quite conservative. There's no limit as to brim dimensions.

Favor Tweed-Like Linens for Suits

Although this year's linens abound in the traditional smooth finishes of the sort that denote well-bred aristocracy, many new versions are appearing. Something for the home make-your-own-clothes designer to get excited about is the smart new slubbed, nubbed and tweed-like linens which combine the celebrated coolness of flax with a fine aptitude for tailoring that insures a suit of distinction and comfort for town or travel wear.

Fruit Trims New White Straw Hats

Perfectly charming among summer-girl fashions are the new, usually large, rough white straw hats that are trimmed with clusters of gay colored fruit instead of the usual flower garnitures. This new fashion is wonderfully effective whether the hat be worn with an all-white costume or with a gay and festive silk print. It adds to the glory of this mode to carry a matching white straw handbag that is similarly fruit-trimmed.

Deck White Suits In Brass Buttons

There is a tendency to impart a military air to summer dresses and suits made of white sharkskin or white gossamer sheer wool by the use of handsome brass buttons, and in some instances epaulets of gold braid have been added. The fad for all white with gold trimming is also carried out in that gold kid belts are being worn with classic white dresses the draping of which takes on a sculptural beauty.

Fishnet Trim

A New York designer, on the search for something different to distinguish summer clothes, has turned to fishnet.

KLEMME YOUNG MEN IN ARMY CAMP FOR FOUR WEEKS TRAINING

Dorance Grange and Dwaine Jonhson left Tuesday for Fort Des Moines where they entered the Citizens' Military Training Camp for four weeks. This is the first year any Klemme young men have taken advantage of the opportunities offered by the camp.

The boys will take the Basic, or first year course, and if they perform their duties satisfactorily, they can return next year and take an advanced course of military training.

Pavey and Mrs. Verner Lewis, drove to Buffalo Center, Sunday, to attend the funeral services of Mr. Fred Wesendorf.

Correction

The Times reported last week that Mrs. Herman Stille was a patient at a Hampton hospital and was recovering from a major operation. We were mis-informed and we are glad to report that Mrs. Stille is enjoying her usual health.

FOUND AFTER 40 YEARS

Long ago, John Ricklefs of near Ireton lost his watch. The watch dropped in a field, was given up for lost. Forty crops were taken from the field, the field was plowed every year and disced many times. A few days ago the watch was found by Arthur Eits, hired man, who works for John Ricklefs' son, Eilt, who now operates the farm. In spite of its 40-year exposure, the watch was in good shape and with a little cleaning was as good as new.

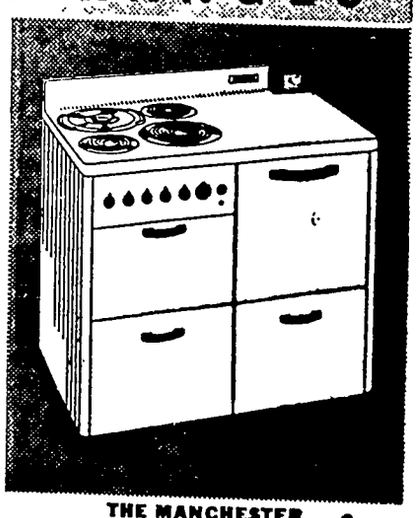
Hotpoint
ELECTRIC RANGES

Smart women have learned that electricity, the truly modern fuel as used by Hotpoint for cooking, is the one way to cook and keep cool.

Electricity generates no excess heat. It is conducted through bottom of pans to food. None escapes around sides of utensils to raise kitchen temperature.

Heavy oven insulation keeps heat in the oven.



THE MANCHESTER
Hotpoint's big value, built-to-the-floor electric range. Full porcelain enamel. All Select-A-Heat Calrod units. Big oven.

Calrod Cooking Unit Targets the Heat

1. Calrod heat is conducted through bottom of pan into food. There's no flame.
2. Calrod heat is efficiently applied for faster, thriftier cooking. Utensils, curtains and walls stay cleaner.
3. Calrod is accurately controlled. Five different speeds from one switch.

When a skunk bites a man, that's news. James Fisher, 90 year old resident of West Branch, was attacked by a skunk that came at him "wrong end to" —that is, for a skunk. His son killed the animal after it had bitten Mr. Fisher. Later the animal was found to have rabies Authors hunting for a new metaphor for "unpleasantness" ought to be able to find it in this brief story of a skunk with hydrophobia

July fourth is ordinarily regarded as a day of celebration and rejoicing But in some 400 families this year, it was a day of tragedy as highway accidents, drownings and other mishaps ran up an appalling total of fatalities Iowa reported number of deaths by automobile and drowning. Aviation claimed two victims near Waterloo.

-oOo-

Residents of Rockwell, Iowa, had an unpleasant sunrise salute on July fourth. The city's water tank "blew up" with a tremendous roar The tank was located in a shallow pit in the city hall and the pressure was kept up with compressed air The explosion took out both ends of the city hall and damaged the water pumps.

Star Design Doilies Crocheted in String

Pattern 6350.

It's such fun to have a bit crochet under way—something that's going to add beauty to your home! Get busy on these handsome star doilies. They're perfect for luncheon or buffet sets. And so easy to crochet in mercerized string. Of course they can be used separately to beautify occasional tables as well. Pattern contains instructions for making doilies; illustrations of them and of stitches; photograph of doily; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern send cents in coins to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., W. 14th St., New York, N. Y.

Please write your name, address and pattern number plainly.

Six Points

The best way for a young man who is without friends or influence to begin is: First to get position; second, to keep his mouth shut; third, observe; fourth, be faithful; fifth, make his employer think he would be lost in the fog without him; sixth, be polite.

NERVOUS?

Do you feel so nervous you want to scream? Are you cross and irritable? Do you scold those dearest to you?

If your nerves are on edge and you suffer, you need a good general system tonic, like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made especially for women.

For over 60 years one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Pinkham's Compound. It helps nature build up more physical resistance and thus help calm quivering nerves and lessen discomfort from annoying symptoms which often accompany female functional disorders.

Why not give it a chance to help YOU?

Over one million women have written reporting wonderful benefits from Pinkham's Compound.

Watch Your Kidneys.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Cheese Souffle.
(Serves 5)

1½ cups milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter
½ pound American cheese (sliced thin)
4 eggs (separated)
⅛ teaspoon paprika
2 drops tabasco sauce
¾ teaspoon salt

Combine milk, bread crumbs, and butter in the upper part of a double boiler and heat. Add the cheese, and stir until the cheese is melted. Beat egg yolks until very light, add paprika, and tabasco sauce, and gradually stir in the cheese mixture. Add salt to egg whites, beat until stiff, and fold into a hot cheese mixture. Pour into greased baking dish and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Serve immediately.

Hot Cheese Dreams.
(Serves 4-5)

6 slices bread
6 slices American cheese
⅓ cup chili sauce
6 slices bacon

Remove crusts from bread. Toast one side of each slice. On the untoasted side place a slice of cheese and a tablespoon of chili sauce. Cut bacon slices in halves and arrange two strips of the bacon on each sandwich. Broil until the bacon is crisp and brown. Serve with small sweet pickles.

Tomato Jelly Salad With Cottage Cheese.

4 cups canned tomatoes
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 bay leaf
½ cup celery (chopped)
1 tablespoon onion (chopped)
4 whole cloves
2 tablespoons gelatin
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine the tomatoes, salt, pepper, bay leaf, celery, onion and cloves. Cook gently for 10 minutes and strain. Soak gelatin in cold water and add to the hot tomato mixture, together with Worcestershire sauce, stirring well. Chill until set. Turn onto a large platter and serve with cottage cheese with chives in lettuce cups.

Appropriate Draperies

Linen, chintz and homespun draperies are appropriate in a colonial room, such as early American bedrooms where poster beds, patchwork quilts, hand-hooked rugs and roomy mahogany highboys furnish charm. Rooms furnished after the Southern colonial manner in lovely Chippendale, Sheraton or Heppelwhite pieces need find damask or satin draperies and upholsteries.

Serious Mien Required to Cure Hysteria

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

AN "UP" patient in a large hospital was suddenly stricken with what the attendants thought was some kind of fit. He threw himself on the floor, struggled with an imaginary foe, working his face, arms, legs and body. The visiting psychiatrist took one look at him, ordered the attendants away and advised the patient to behave himself as there was nothing really wrong.

Dr. Barton

The "fit" was simply hysteria where the individual, starving for attention, desires to be the central figure or hero in the "show."

Instead of a "fit," there may be loss of speech, no appetite, vomiting, inability to swallow food, or loss of memory. Dr. S. Barton Hall, Liverpool, in the Practitioner, states that before a patient's condition can be called hysteria it must fulfill the following requirements:

1. An examination of the patient from head to foot, including laboratory investigations, shows that there is really no organic cause for symptoms.

2. The underlying circumstances causing the patient to use any of these methods to call attention to himself should be found. There must be something giving him a feeling of inferiority, a feeling that he is not a success.

3. The underlying cause or reason must be related in some way to the patient's symptoms.

Look Into Past.

4. As there is always some background for the behavior of the individual, something that has happened in years past, this something must be located.

"The patient appears to her (or his) friends as somewhat selfish and self-absorbed; there is a lack of genuine emotional power, a defect which the patient attempts to make up for by these melodramatic acts."

In treating these cases Dr. Hall suggests that the physician should adopt the same serious attitude that he applies to patients with organic disease. He must not try to ridicule or suggest that the patient is "acting." He must by careful examination and explanation show that there is no basis, no organic condition, that could cause the symptoms.

Dr. Hall further suggests that getting the patient away from the surroundings where his fits or other "behaviorisms" make an impression is an important part of the treatment.

Patients Should Tell Story

A few years ago when a patient consulted a physician about his nerves—sleeplessness, lack of appetite, anxiety—and the physician could find no organic trouble, he referred him to a "nerve specialist" because there might be something wrong with the patient's nerves which the general practitioner did not understand. Today, when the physician, after making a thorough examination, can find no organic trouble responsible for the symptoms, he does not refer him to the nerve specialist or psychiatrist but gives the necessary treatment himself.

In speaking of some of these nervous states—anxiety and depression—Dr. Franklin G. Ebaugh, Denver, in Southwestern Medicine, says that in the anxiety state the patient often complains of being cold and unable to keep warm. He is tense, restless, uneasy, apprehensive, with cold, clammy hands and feet and dry mouth. There is a rapid pulse and high blood pressure, which are down to normal during sleep.

Avoid Direct Advice.

"In treating a patient with the anxiety complex it is important to avoid the pitfalls of telling him that he should stop worrying or that nothing is wrong with him, since he is unable to stop thinking about his trouble and knows quite definitely that something is wrong." The physician must spend an hour or more letting the patient tell his story about his family, business and social life. As there is no organic trouble present and the patient now has confidence in the physician because he has shared his story with him, the physician is often able to give the needed help or advice. This means that the physician, while not exactly acting in the capacity of a priest, minister or lawyer, nevertheless, with the whole background of the patient now known to him, can advise a holiday for the patient or a member of his family, a change of scene, perhaps a change of occupation, perhaps more rest and a gentle laxative.

The big point is that the physician now recognizes that the nervous or anxious patient needs to be given time to tell his story, if he is to obtain any real help.

REHOBOAM: A MAN WHO MADE A FOOLISH CHOICE

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 12:1-5, 12-17, 20.
GOLDEN TEXT—A man's pride shall bring him low.—Proverbs 29 23.

"He did evil because he prepared not his heart to seek the Lord"—this is the divine epitome of the life of Rehoboam as given in II Chronicles 12:14.

Life is full of choices, and the decisions we make determine our destiny both in this life and in the life to come. Since the great issues of our life may hinge on the simplest of choices, it is obvious that we need guidance at every point and in every moment of life. The counsel of men, the right impulses which are born of good breeding, the light of knowledge—all these may help us to make right choices. But since there is only One who has all the knowledge, who can see the end from the beginning, who has all the power to make His decisions effective, it is obviously folly of the highest degree to do without His holy guidance, especially since God is willing to give it without money and without price even to the humblest believer.

Men and women, let us not follow the foolishness of Rehoboam. Let us seek first God's kingdom and His righteousness, and then we are assured that everything else shall be added unto us (Matt. 6:33).

The picture before us is astonishingly up-to-date. People were crying for relief from tax burdens. One group of leaders counseled moderation; another group, said in effect, tax them all you can and keep on spending. The king, who in a monarchy had the final decree in his power, replied to the plea of the people with the 900 B. C. equivalent of our modern slang expression, "Oh, yeah?" and the ten tribes promptly revolted.

I. A Reasonable Request (vv. 1-5).

Governments exist for the people, not the people for the government. Political leaders seem to forget this axiom and begin to rule as though they need not listen to the reasonable pleas of the people. Tax burdens rise, regimentation of the life of the nation takes place, and sooner or later the people rise to overthrow the government. It happened in Rome, it was back of the French Revolution, it brought an uprising of the serfs of Russia, it can and will happen elsewhere if men who rule do not listen to reason.

Rehoboam made at least one wise decision—to wait three days before speaking and to seek counsel. He needed this, for having been brought up in the palace of Solomon, without proper training for his place as king, he was quite unable to make immediate answer to their request. Incidentally, we note that much of the folly of Rehoboam is chargeable to the neglect of his father to rear him properly. May that terrible thing never be said about you and me regarding our children.

II. An Unreasonable Refusal (vv. 12-15).

The picture of the two groups of advisers is a most graphic one and should afford the teacher an excellent opportunity to show young people especially, how important it is to heed the counsel of their elders. Even so youth stands today at the fork of the road. Let us in all kindness, love, and tact seek to help them choose the right way.

III. The Inevitable Revolt (vv. 16, 17, 20).

The people, long submissive and apparently servile, ultimately come to the point where they think, and when they do, dictatorial rulers tumble from their self-made thrones. Would that the people of the earth realized the power which they have and that they would use it for the glory of God. Rehoboam felt the power of the people who revolted, others have followed him, for it is still true in the world that the rulers "do evil" because "they prepare not their hearts to seek the Lord."

Rehoboam, who had awaited the arrival of this crucial hour in anticipation of taking his place as the king of the ten tribes, was ready, and was at once chosen as the leader of those who withdrew from the rule of the house of David Rehoboam's sin brought this about, but it was also in the counsels of God (v. 15). As Alexander Maclaren expresses it, " the historian draws back the curtain. On earth stand the insolent king and mutinous people, each driving at their ends, and neither free of sin and selfishness. A stormy sea of people, without thought of God, rages below, and above sits the Lord, working His great purpose by men's sin. That divine control does not in the least affect the freedom or the responsibility of the actors. Rehoboam's disregard of the people's terms was 'a thing brought about of the Lord,' but it was Rehoboam's sin none the less."

HOW TO SEW

Oilcloth Folders for Your Cooking Booklets.

EVERY efficient kitchen has a book shelf. The paper back booklets that all homemakers love to collect may be placed in bright oil cloth folders so that they will make a brave show along with the bound cook books.

The prettiest folders of this sort that I have seen were made in green and yellow to match the kitchen color scheme. The diagrams given here show exactly how they were made. It is generally best to sort the booklets according to subjects rther than size.

The folders are stiffened with cardboard so they hold booklets of different sizes neatly. The cardboard should be cut the size of the largest booklet in the group. The fabric side of both pieces of oilcloth should be entirely covered with paste to make it stick smoothly to the cardboard. Letter or write the general subject of the booklets on a label and paste it on the back. Place the folder flat under something heavy until it is dry.

NOTE: Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties, and Embroideries, are now 15 cents each, or both books for 25 cents. Readers who have not secured their copies of these two books should send in their orders at once, as no more copies will be available when the present stock is sold. Your choice of the QUILT LEAFLET illustrating 36 authentic patchwork stitches; or the RAG RUG LEAFLET, will be included with orders for both books for the present, but the offer may be withdrawn at any time. Leaflets are 6 cents each when ordered without books.

Everyone should have copies of these two books containing 96 HOW TO SEW articles by Mrs. Spears, that have not appeared in the paper. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING'S BEING DONE ABOUT SIZE 6 SUITS NOT FITTING 6-YEAR-OLD JOHNNY

That age is no indication of size has been proved time and again by the repeated returns made of children's clothing Retail merchants report that at least $10,000,000 worth of children's clothing is returned each year because of "wrong size" Many children are "small for their age," are especially heavy or tall, and this causes confusion in buying correct sizes of clothing

A nation-wide survey of 150,000 children between the ages of 4 and 17 recently was conducted by Ruth O'Brien of the Bureau of Home Economics, U S D A Body measurements of the children were taken and findings show that a lengthwise and crosswise measuring combination is a reliable indicator of a child's body build

Miss O'Brien reported the results of the survey to a conference called by the American Standards Association, and a sub-committee recommended to the clothing trade the use of height and hip girth as future standards for classifying children's clothes according to size recommended The adoption of

The adoption of these two measurements would make possible purchasing Sue's new dress and Danny's snowsuit to fit by giving the clerk only the two measurements These measurements are easily and accurately taken with a tapeline

Some manufacturers are now selling boys' trousers by waist and length of leg rather than by age, one of the first steps taken toward using body measurements as the basis for better fitting clothing

NEW TRACTOR WITH "CULTI-VISION" PREVIEWED AT MASON CITY

"I couldn't believe it until I saw it," said Mr. Overholt who has just attended a preview of the new Farmall-A tractor, held at Mason City by the International Harvester Company

"This latest rubber-tired addition to the Farmall line," continued Mr Overholt, "which sells for a new low Farmall price, brings the grower of row crops something he has never had before—full vision of the work that is being done directly under the tractor. Just as television brings the radio listener something he has never been able to see, so the Farmall-A enables the man who is cultivating corn or other row crops to see what he is doing without having to crane his neck or twist his body.

"It's all in the design of the tractor," said Mr. Overholt. "The engine is cleverly placed so it does not obstruct the view of the rows. The driver rides easily in a comfortable sponge-rubber upholstered seat and watches the cultivator shovels at the same close range that is possible on a horse-drawn riding cultivator.

"It's surprising," Mr. Overholt said further, "how much more power and low-cost service have been built into the new Farmall-A It will bring power farming to the man who farms small acreage, with 40 to 60 acres under cultivation It will also be welcomed by the big grower who needs a second or third tractor to supplement the power of his large tractor.

"A complete line of quick-attachable field machines has been designed to fit the Farmall-A. The owner will be independent of horse power and freed from the tiresome chores and expensive upkeep of horses.

"At its interesting low price this new Farmall-A will be in big demand immediately. Production at the factory is in full swing and samples should arrive soon. Nothing of such importance has happened in the agricultural implement field for a long time. Growers in this vicinity will look forward with interest to seeing and trying out the new Farmall-A as soon as the first shipment arrives."

HERB BAILEY FIRST TO THRESH IN THIS COMMUNITY

Herb Bailey, who lives southeast of Klemme, is probably the first farmer in this community to thresh. Mr. Bailey threshed wheat last Friday, and from the sample he brought to town, it is of good quality. Iowa farmers certainly get things done up in a hurry now-a-days.

August 7-8 Will Be Big Anniversary Celebration

Five Rides, Many Attractions Here

CELEBRATION WILL BE HELD IN AND AROUND KLEMME PARK

Interesting Program Planned To Take Place In Band Stand

Klemme's Fiftieth Anniversary Celebration and Home Coming has been definitely set for Tuesday, August 8th Festivities will begin, however, on Monday evening, August 7th, when concessions and attractions will be ready for the public

Park Site Chosen

A large group of men, chosen from the Legion, the Fire Department, Civic Club, School Board and Town Council, and who were appointed as chairmen of the many celebration committees, met in session Monday evening and after consideration from all angles decided to hold the program, concessions and attractions in and around the Town Park.

The concessions, rides, etc. will be located around the park while the park itself will be used for the speaking program, presentation of old residents and general gathering place for the public. There will be plenty of seats in the shade for everyone.

It is planned to use a public address system so that speaker in the band stand may easily be heard all over the park.

Five Rides Already Booked

The committee in charge of concessions and amusements have already booked five rides which consists of a ferris wheel, marry-go-round, loop-o-plane, kiddy ride and whip. The committee also reports a full line of concessions will be booked, all of wihch will be located around the outside of the park itself.

Variety Of Street Sports

The committee in charge of sports have announced a complete program of races, stunts, etc. for boys and girls, men and women and also plan to play off the finals in a soft ball tournament on celebration day Cash prizes will be offered to winners in the many contests.

Free Dance Will Be Given

The dance committee have made arrangements to put on a free dance and music will be furnished by a good orchestra. A corn game will be operated by local committees, the proceeds of which will be used to defray expenses.

Parade Is Also Planned

A parade has also been planned and details are being worked out by another committee. It has also been decided to have two bands and two drum and bugle corps in the parade and there will be plenty of music throughout the day.

The parade will especially feature the period of fifty years ago and leading up to the present time in the way of decorations, etc.

Those who have articles of historic value, old pictures and other articles should get in touch with Levi Ridder. Old articles are wanted to be used in window displays at the various stores. Several pieces of machinery used fifty years ago, will be brought to town for the day Many smaller articles will be brought in by the people of this community.

Two Nights, One Day

Beginning on Monday evening, August 7th and continuing on through Tuesday and Tuesday night. August 8th, there will be something doing every minute in that time Local residents are asked to communicate with relatives and friends inviting them to Klemme for this great home coming event, celebrating Fifty Years Of Progress in Klemme.

LARGE CROWD AT SHOWER HELD AT VAN BUSKIRK HOME

Friends and relatives gathered at the Paul Van Buskirk home near Klemme, Sunday, honoring Mrs Leon Gilpin with a shower.

Those present included the following·

Refrigerator Meals

It's a smart stunt to get meal preparation out of the way in the cool of the morning. Knowing that dinner's ready and practically waiting to be served helps you to look and feel cool, calm and collected, and it leaves you free for "vacationing" during the hot hours of the day.

Here's a menu that can be prepared in the morning, almost down to the last sprig of parsley, so that it will be ready to serve at the appointed dinner hour with only a little additional work.

Pineapple Upside Down Loaf
Tomatoes Stuffed With Macaroni
Buttered Fresh Peas
Minted Pear Salad
Hot Biscuits
Strawberry Fluff

Biscuits.
(Makes 12-14 Biscuits).

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
⅔ cup milk

Sift dry ingredients together and cut in shortening. Add liquid slowly. Turn dough onto lightly floured board, pat to ½-inch thickness, and cut in rounds. Place on greased cookie sheet. Brush biscuits with melted butter and store in refrigerator until 20 minutes before dinner. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) for 15-20 minutes.

Pineapple Upside Down Ham Loaf.
Sliced pineapple
Whole cloves
1½ pounds ham (ground)
¾ pound veal (ground)
1 green pepper (minced) ½ cup
1 cup rice (cooked)
2 tablespoons onion (minced)
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg (beaten)
⅓ cup chili sauce or catsup
½ cup water

Dot several slices of pineapple with whole cloves. Arrange in the bottom of a loaf pan.

Combine meat, green pepper, rice, onion and seasonings. Add egg, chili sauce (or catsup) and water. Shape into loaf, and bake at 375 degrees for one hour. Turn out onto platter. Serve hot or cold.

Buttered Fresh Peas.

Simply place the shelled peas in a saucepan, partially filled with water. Set in refrigerator, then just before dinner, cook in this same water. For variety, sprinkle finely chopped garden mint over peas before serving.

Tomatoes Stuffed With Macaroni.

Remove the centers from the desired number of tomatoes and fill with cooked and seasoned macaroni, topping with slices of cheese, or better yet, if the refrigerator divulges some freshly kept, left-over macaroni and cheese, this may be used instead, with a buttered crumb topping. Chill until dinner time, then bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for about 20 minutes.

Minted Pear Salad.

1 package mint-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup cold water
¼ teaspoon salt
5 or 6 pear halves (canned)
Lettuce
Salad dressing.

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water, add cold water and salt. Let stand in refrigerator until cool. Dip pear halves in cold gelatin mixture and arrange in ring mold. Place in refrigerator until set, and fill the mold with the cooled gelatin mixture. Chill until firm. Serve on large platter with a small bowl of salad dressing and lettuce for garnish.

Strawberry Fluff.

And for dessert, combine whipped cream, sliced strawberries and marshmallows cut in quarters. Place in sherbets and chill for several hours or overnight.

Pure Cellulose Curtains Look Like Rare Chintzes

Pure cellulose curtains that look like printed linens and rare chintzes are making home-decorating history for 1939. So low is their cost that an entire house can be redraped for less than $10, and when the curtains are soiled they can be thrown away and replaced for a cost equal to or less than the cost of laundering.

Looking like vellum and feeling like fine percale, these materials are soft, pliable, with permanent drapability and "hand." They are available in a wide number of patterns and designs in rich, sunfast colors. Coming completely finished and ready to hang, with matching tiebacks, the drapes are sold in three lengths.

Little Niceties Make Cheerful Guest Room

Summer guests will appreciate a cheerful guest room—one that has its own style furniture and not just miscellaneous discarded pieces. Essential as the bed itself are a chest of drawers for odds and ends, a smart vanity for the feminine visitor and a bedside lamp and table.

A chaise longue and some good books and magazines will help take care of those in between moments. Most important of all, for comfort's sake, are a good mattress and a good spring.

Logs for the Apartment

There are now fireplace logs suited to the apartment dweller. They are compressed under great pressure out of sawdust and shavings so that each log is bone dry, clean, uniform in size (4 by 12½ inches), and has no splinters. There is almost no storage problem, as each log burns for four hours, and a month's supply can easily fit into the closet along with the umbrella and galoshes. These logs give off a colored flame—blue, orange, purple or green—very much like fires made from driftwood.

Dining Bay Excludes Flies

If you want to eat outdoors in warm weather, but the flies make the meal a nuisance, how about adding a bay to your living or dining room? You can sit with windows on practically three sides of you, but by screening them, banish the annoying and unsanitary little insects.

Sealing Jellies

Paraffin used for sealing jellies should be "smoking" hot, since it sterilizes as well as seals. Tilt the glass in order that the melted paraffin may form a seal around the side of the glass as well as a covering for the top.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Potential Enemies Help Reich Build Powerful War Machine; 'Neutrality' Looks Like Myth

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

INTERNATIONAL:

Armaments

What constitutes absolute "neutrality" in wartime has never made itself quite clear. Superficial neutrality under the U. S. law bans sale of arms and munitions—"lethal weapons"—yet under the amendment of Ohio's Rep. John M. Vorys such indispensable war-making equipment as trucks and commercial airplanes may be sent abroad. Early July, when the neutrality bill was making its way through congress, found the agriculture department proposing government subsidized export of cotton in a program whose chief benefactors would be aggressive Germany and Japan, both of whom need cotton to stuff into their ammunition.

But U. S. participation in dictator rearmament is only part of the picture. Though France has just banned shipment of scrap iron to Germany, though Britain's new ministry of supply will have the right to ban such shipments, profit-conscious democracies and dictatorships have no moral compunctions about such things; scrap iron or any other material of Mars is sold abroad to the highest bidder until domestic rearmament demands that it be kept at home. Samples:

SCRAP IRON SHRAPNEL
British steel, British deaths?

Last month Britain's liberal Lord Davies told how scrap iron and steel exports from the United Kingdom to the Reich rose from 4,500 tons in July, 1938, to 17,000 tons in August, 21,000 tons in September (month of the Munich crisis) and 23,000 tons in December.

France gave Germany 350 tons of pig iron last August when the Czech crisis was just rising, gave her 19,000 tons in September when the crisis was at its peak, and 75,000 tons in November. In March, when Germany took Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia, France still had no compunctions, selling the Reich 67,000 tons.

Still more revealing are Germany's 1938 foreign trade statistics, showing that 1,059,800 tons of Germany's total 1,146,027 tons of 1938 scrap iron came from Belgium, Luxemburg, France, Great Britain, Holland and the U. S., all potential enemies. In March, 1939, the same countries contributed 161,344 tons, which would make 1,936,128 tons if the same import level were maintained throughout the year. From the U. S. in 1938 came 462,782 tons; in March, 1939, came 20,175 tons.

Other import figures for Germany:

Most logical deduction is that the next World war may find British, French, Canadian, Belgian—and possibly U. S.—troops dying of wounds inflicted by armaments made of metal from their own homelands.

MEDICINE:

Cancer

Standard treatment, but no sure cure for cancer is 200-volt X-ray treatment. Ten years ago Dr. Albert Soiland of Los Angeles began experimenting on animal and plant tissues with half-million volt X-rays, finding no visible difference in the biological effectiveness of the heavier ray. Only obvious result was that higher voltage penetrated deeper, with less burning of skin. Clinically, Dr. Soiland found something else. Reporting at Oslo, Norway, to the Northern Society for Medical Radiology, he said hundreds of cancers have been cured by the heavier ray after the 200-volt charge had failed. His conclusion: "A biological difference in action must exist if the final analysis is drawn from observations based on clinical facts.

PHILIPPINES:

No Fears

World economists have long enumerated reasons why Japan should want the nearby Philippine islands, which even now are undergoing an orderly withdrawal from U. S. supervision. But never have military strategists told why Japan should not want the Philippines, moreover why such a conquest would be militarily and financially impossible.

Such, however, is the opinion of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former U. S. chief of staff and now military adviser to the Philippines. Asked point blank for his opinion, General MacArthur admitted there were "so many imponderables involved I would be a fool to play the part of a prophet," yet offered an opinion based on "broad basic facts." The opinion:

GENERAL MacARTHUR
No prophet, but he has opinions.

Such a war must be brought to the Philippines, would cost more than $5,000,000,000 and 500,000 men, would risk almost certain foreign intervention by a powerful fleet, and might not then insure concentration of superior forces at any vital Philippine area.

Whether Japan even covets the islands is doubtful to the general. Puzzled over such popular beliefs, he told reporters such ownership would actually be a strategic weakness to Japan, splitting the empire militarily into two parts separated by broad oceans and with Chinese enemies between the two parts.

POLITICS:

Invitation

Soon each major political party must choose its 1940 convention site. Though both groups look favorably on Chicago, no city or state could frame so flowery an invitation as that received by Democratic Chairman James A. Farley from the California legislature:

"Whereas, California is an ideal state within which to hold such a convention because of its adequate convention facilities . . . unsurpassed cuisine . . . best entertainment in the world . . . most equable spring climate . . . unexcelled vacation attractions . . . magnificent lakes . . . friendly, loyal people . . . foremost and most progressive state in the greatest nation on earth, now therefore, be it

"Resolved: That the assembly and senate of the state of California memorialize the national Democratic committee . . . to designate a major city in the state of California as a place where the 1940 Democratic national convention shall be held."

HEADLINERS

DR. JAMES MONROE SMITH

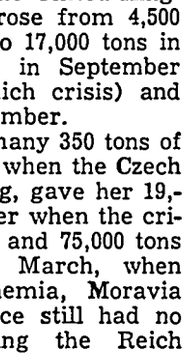
Nine years ago the traveling president of Louisiana State university arrived at Baton Rouge in a Model T Ford and a 35-cent haircut. Late in June when he left for Canada, two New Orleans banks and one at Baton Rouge said he had $500,000 of their funds. The university missed $118,000 in good bonds.

A follower of the late Huey P. Long, who set out to build Louisiana State as revenge against Tulane, where he had been denied an honorary degree, Dr. Smith earned his doctorate at Columbia university teachers college, New York, in 1927. Meanwhile he served 10 years (1920-30) as dean of education at little Southwestern Louisiana institute.



Dr. Smith's disappearance climaxed a stormy career, a feature of which was his censorship of the school newspaper in 1934 to protect Huey Long from criticism. It is now reported that he raised his salary from $12,000 to $18,000 a year without the supervisory board's knowledge. Lush with oil and gas revenues from the state, busily spending money on an amazing building program, the university voted bond issues on which signatures were allegedly forged to secure the money with which Dr. Smith is said to have traded in more than 1,000,000 bushels of wheat.

TERRITORIES:

Paradox

As a newspaper and magazine editor Dr. Ernest H. Gruening became an opponent of "big-stick" policies, a foe of U. S. colonial acquisition and general all-around irreconcilable anti-imperialist. But time found him entering the interior department to head the division of territories and island possessions, which heretofore maintained jurisdiction over Hawaii and a few other territories.

But July 1 found this anti-imperialist assuming the most imperialistic job ever created by the U. S., an enlarged division of territories and islands which smacks of Great Britain's "colonial office." For the first time in history all U. S. offshore possessions excepting Guam and Samoa are included under the division's jurisdiction. Paradoxically, Dr. Gruening becomes chief administrator of colonies whose acquisition he has many times attacked. He also becomes the butt of "imperialist" and "dictator" charges.

Quitting his job would be one salvation, but he prefers to stick it out and continue crusading for liberalism, meanwhile seeking a solution for his No. 1 problem child, Puerto Rico, now applying for statehood and presenting one of the most difficult tasks in insular administration.

EUROPE:

August Crisis?

Continental crisis have come with such regular frequency the past year that most Americans have become bored with them, confident no boil will ever burst. By early July this sentiment was also felt in France and London, despite Nazi war counsels at Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat and mysterious goings-on in Danzig, which is Germany's next goal. No such confidence was felt by Paris and London officialdom, however. There were intimations that the most serious crisis yet is expected in August, delayed simply because German and Italian farmers must harvest their wheat before going to war. By that time both Nazi and Fascist war maneuvers will bring dictator armies to their peaks.

Neither Premier Edouard Daladier nor Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain will confirm this fear, but confirmation is needless in view of preparations:

Britain. Summer leave for the home fleet has been advanced from August to July because of a decision to hold "exercises in August." More than 400,000 officers and men of the territorial army (like America's national guard) have been instructed to pack their furniture and wind up personal affairs before reporting for annual training period in August. A "white paper" announced an 89,300-man increase in the standing army. Meanwhile the first 34,000 conscripts under the universal service law were ordered to report July 15. Trial "blackouts" were planned at strategic points throughout July, followed by a big "blackout" smothering half of England August 9 and 10.

France. After telling parliament of a propaganda plot to split France and Britain, Temporary Dictator Daladier recessed his audience for the summer, but warned that an outbreak of war was momentarily possible, hence parliament might be recalled at a moment's notice. With an estimated 3,000,000 armed men on his borders, M. Daladier placed the nation on full war footing.

WASHINGTON HOROSCOPE

QUIZ—Congressional investigations always precede the last legislative session before an election year. Forecast in the coming recess are these highlights: Monopoly committee hearings; house committee hearings on banking and taxes; investigations of the national labor relations board and fair labor standards administration; WPA quiz; Dies committee on unAmericanism; civil liberties committee.

DATE—Originally set July 15, then advanced to August 3, adjournment of congress is now unpredictable. A special session may result if all "necessary" legislation is not passed.

What War Really Is.

...rst, let me say something ... this experience of what war ...y is. Those who lived in it,

HERBERT HOOVER
(From the drawing by Clarence Mattei.)

and our American boys who fought in it, dislike to recall its terribleness. We dwell today upon its glories—the courage, the heroism, the greatness of spirit in men. I myself, should like to forget all else. But today, with the world driving recklessly into it again, there is much we must not forget. Amid the afterglow of glory and legend we forget the filth, the stench, the death, of the trenches. We forget the dumb grief of mothers, wives and children. We forget the unending blight cast upon the world by the sacrifice of the flower of every race.

I was one of but few civilians who saw something of the Battle of the Somme In the distant view were the unending trenches filled with a million and a half men. Here and there, like ants, they advanced under the thunder and belching volcanoes from 10,000 guns. Their lives were thrown away until half a million had died. Passing close by were unending lines of men plodding along the right side of the road to the front, not with drums and bands, but with saddened resignation. Down the left side came the unending lines of wounded men, staggering among unending stretchers and ambulances. Do you think one can forget that? And it was but one battle of a hundred.

Ten million men died or were maimed for life in that war. There were millions who died unknown and unmarked. Yet there are miles of unending crosses in a thousand cemeteries. The great monument to the dead at Ypres carries the names of 150,000 Englishmen who died on but a small segment of the front. Theirs was an inspiring heroism for all time. But how much greater a world it would be today if that heroism and that character could have lived.

Humanity Suffers.

And there was another side no less dreadful. I hesitate to recall even to my own mind the nightmares of roads filled for long miles with old men, young women, and little children dropping of fatigue and hunger as they fled in terror from burning villages and oncoming armies. And over Europe these were not just a few thousands, but over the long years that scene was enacted in millions.

And there was the ruthless killing of civilians, executed by firing squads who justified their acts, not by processes of justice, but on mere suspicion of transgression of the laws of war. Still worse was the killing of men, women, and even children to project terror and cringing submission. To the winds went every sense of justice. To the winds went every sense of decency. To the winds went every sense of tolerance. To the winds went every sense of mercy. The purpose of every army is to win. They are not put together for afternoon teas. They are not made up to bring good cheer or justice or tolerance. They are made up of men sent out to kill or be killed. Whatever the theory, the act that wins is justified in war.

And there were the terrors of the air. In a score of air raids I saw the terror of women and children flocking to the cellars, frantically, to escape from an unseen enemy.

Starving Women and Children.

In another even more dreadful sense I saw inhuman policies of war. That was the determination on both sides to bring subjection by starvation. The food blockade by the Allied governments on the one side, and the ruthless submarine warfare by the Central powers on the other, had this as its major purpose. Both sides professed that it was not their purpose to starve women and children. But it is an idiot who thinks soldiers ever starve. It was women and children who died of starvation. It was they who died of the disease which came from short food supplies, not in hundreds of thousands, but in millions.

And after the Armistice came famine and pestilence, in which millions perished and other millions grew up stunted in mind and body. That is war. Let us not forget.

We were actually at the front in this war for only a few months, but it cost us the lives of 130,000 men. It has placed 470,000 persons on the national pension list already. It has cost us 40 billions of dollars. And that represents more than just dollars. Today we have a quarter to a third of the American people below a decent standard of living. If that 40 billions of wealth had remained in America, these people would not be in this plight. A large segment of our people have already been impoverished for a quarter of a century. And the end is not yet.

We may need to go to war again. But that war should be on this hemisphere alone and in the defense of our firesides or our honor. For that alone should we pay the price.

The endless books tell us how the Great War originated. They do not agree. But some salient facts do stand out that are pertinent today. It began by a quarrel between three dictators—the czar of Russia and the emperors of Germany and Austria. They were competing for "power." France, a democracy, was dragged in because, out of fear of the dictators of Germany and Austria, she, a democracy, had made a military alliance with the czar. The British democracy was drawn in partly out of idealism to defend liberty, but also partly to save its trade and its possessions from too great a concentration of "power" on the continent. We finally joined in the war wholly out of idealism.

I dodge no responsibility. I reluctantly joined in the almost unanimous view of our countrymen that America must go into that war. We had been directly attacked. But, more important, I believed we could bring the endless slaughter to an end. I believed that with our singleness of purpose we could impose an enlightened peace; that we could make it a war to end war. I believed we could make the world safe for the spread of human liberty. If experience has any value to nations, there are in the wrecking of these hopes a thousand reasons why we should never attempt it again.

Prayer for Real Peace.

When President Wilson arrived in Paris, the common people of the world were praying for a real peace. There were good men there, and there were high aspirations. But there were also concentrated there the invisible forces of age-old hate and greed. Mr. Wilson met a determmation to crush the enemy in a Carthaginian peace. He met the sinister demands for power. He met a greed for possession of world resources. Above all, he met with the pressures of populations and the unsolvable problems of European boundaries and economic life. He worked valiantly to combat the evil forces. He spread American idealism at the peace table. He argued and cried out for reason and justice—not because he felt that mankind must turn its face to the future and its back on the past. When Germans blame him, little do they know what Germany would have looked like had it not been for Woodrow Wilson.

To Mr. Wilson I criticized bitterly the provisions of the peace treaties before they were signed. I felt that instead of healing the wounds of the world they would spread disaster over a generation. I have before me a memorandum that I gave to Mr. Wilson two months before the treaties were signed, urging their lack of vision and the dangers to America. He won some victories for sanity. He helped some nations to freedom. He hoped that, with time for hate and avarice to cool, the League of Nations could reconstruct the failures of the treaty.

Americans will yet be proud of that American who fought a fight for righteousness although he partially lost. But he proved that American idealism and American ignorance of the invisible forces in Europe can only confuse the grim necessities of European peace.

What is happening today? Europe is suffering repeated earthquake shocks from the fault of the Treaty of Versailles.

But, beyond all this which is obvious, something else is moving. Europe is again engaged in a hideous conflict for power. Stripped to its bones, today the quarrel is much the same. Dictators in Germany and Italy rise to power on opposition to Communism, launched into their peoples by the dictator of Russia. Again the dictators are in conflict for power. Again France, a democracy, ties herself to the dictatorship in Russia. England becomes endangered should the dictators of Germany and Italy overwhelm France. And thus again begins this dreadful treadmill.

What is proposed? That we join to stop inevitable movements and readjustments of peoples; that we engage in ideological wars. Who will pay for it in blood and treasure? Our children.

The time may come when we could arbitrate the quarrels which arise in that game at some point before shooting begins. But if we sit in the game we shall never be arbitrator and we may be drawn into the shooting.

My sympathies are with the democracies. But the democracies of Western Europe have the resources to defend themselves. They comprise great empires of hundreds of millions of people with all the resources needed to secure their defense. Whether they preserve their democracies is a question of their own will.

America's Service.

America can be of service to the world. We can hold up the standards of decency in the world.

We should hold that the basis of international relations should not be force, but should be law and free agreement.

The greatest immediate service that we can render is to join in economic co-operation with other nations to relieve the economic pressures which are driving the world constantly to instability. A great part of these pressures for war are economic. The greatest healing force that could come to the world is prosperity. There is a vast field for American action which is free from political entanglements. We should resume the conferences which were started under such good auspices by our country in 1932.

But, far beyond that, we can hold the light of liberty alight on this continent. That is the greatest service we can give to civilization.

THERE seems to be a new cycle starting in the movies, one involving young actresses who hail from Ireland. If they have red hair and green eyes so much the better.

Let me refer you to Greer Garson as a starter. She was launched in this country in "Goodby Mr. Chips," you know, and is a red haired, green eyed beauty. Geraldine Fitzgerald is another product of the Irish theaters. Maureen O'Hara, who arrived in this country with her mother recently, also with Charles Laughton, is the latest example. He felt that she should play "Esmeralda" when he does "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for RKO.

She was born and brought up in Dublin, studied at the Abbey theater's school, and did a few bits in British pictures before she appeared in his "Jamaica Inn."

Perhaps ambitious youngsters who want to land in pictures would do well to rush to Ireland, achieve red hair, and start in with the Abbey Players, if this cycle is to continue. The only difficulty would seem to be acquiring green eyes, and exceptional ability to act.

If you read that delightful novel, "Rebecca," which until recently led so many best-seller lists, you'll be interested to know that Laurence Olivier has been signed to play the role of the hero.

Although he is young, Olivier has had years of experience on the stage and in the movies, but until this year he never reached the heights. Now it seems as if everyone wants him for a new production. He is appearing on the New York stage in "No Time for Comedy," with Katherine Cornell, and you can see him giving an even better performance in "Wuthering Heights," opposite Merle Oberon, than he gives in the play. He'll be perfect for the part of "Max de Winter" in "Rebecca."

If a brand new squabble breaks out between two radio stars, don't be surprised, and don't take it seriously. There isn't a really good feud raging on the air now, and radio stars discovered long ago that feuds whip up interest in their programs.

The best one of all took place years ago, between Rudy Vallee and Will Osborne, but that one was rather serious. Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie started theirs on purpose, and kept it going for years. A certain press agent has been trying to start one of those serialized battles between Sammy Kaye and Kay Kyser, with the question of which one originated the idea of singing song titles as the bone of contention, but be it said to the everlasting credit of Kyser and Kaye that they're too proud to fight.

Pat Friday, the 17-year-old co-ed from the University of California, who is singing on Bing Crosby's program this summer, will probably be a top-notcher in movies and radio in a few years. Crosby heard her sing at an amateur night at a Beverly Hills restaurant, and recently she made her coast-to-coast debut on the air, under his direction. The telephone switchboard at the Hollywood NBC studios was promptly jammed with inquiries about her, and the following morning two movie companies offered her contracts. She turned them down; wants to work only in radio until she finishes her college course, two years from now.

ODDS AND ENDS—"One Man's Family" has again been named the best serial dramatic program on the air in the annual Radio Guide poll . . . But in the same poll the Charlie McCarthy program won six awards . . . Errol Flynn has passed his U. S. Department of Commerce tests and has a private pilot's license . . . Bette Davis has had to shave her eyebrows and forehead to play "Queen Elizabeth"—the studio will have to give her a vacation after she finishes, to let them grow in again.

By H. A. Grantham

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

HIGH POINT

Of course many jobs were given to Republican worthies during the first few months of the Wilson administration but the high point came on July 1 when the state's largest departments passed into Republican control. Thousands of applicants who were unsuccessful in earlier attempts to find state jobs believed that Republican administration of the highway commission, tax commission and liquor control commission would be the answer to their prayers. Perhaps they will provide many new jobs but first they must undergo the Wilson laboratory test for the elimination of excess employees and expense. In every department coming into the Republican fold this month there will be a generous application of the streamlining treatment designed to consolidate services and departments which in the past only dovetailed slightly or which only operated in duplication of each other. Close to 100 additional employees have been removed from the payrolls within the last three weeks in those departments which were not Republican in administration until July 1

LIQUOR CONTROL

More inclined to resist patronage demands than any other, the Liquor Control Commission seems little inclined to capitulate to thoughtlessness. It was never intended as an organization for the promotion of liquor sales but is, as its name implies, a commission for control and regulation. It was founded during a Democratic administration and the results of a recent survey which revealed its personnel over the entire state was apparently ninety per cent Democratic did not surprise anyone. According to Commission Chairman M. L. Curtis, Republican control of the commission efforts will be directed toward adjustment for higher personnel standards; not mere turn-over in retaliation. Like all other state departments the commission may be expected to streamline its executive office staff for economy and efficiency. Operation of the local stores will be synchronized to the demand and requirements of the 170 communities in which they are located.

RENTAL PROBLEM

Study of rentals for necessary state office space which began with the installation of a Republican administration in Iowa and which drew much attention in the 48th G A., continues in the joint interest of the executive council and an interim committee from the legislature. Chief focal point of the current survey is the Mulberry building which houses the executive offices and central warehouse of the Liquor Control Commission. A lease which called for an annual rental of $30,000 expired May 1 and the executive council refuses to renew at that figure A counter offer of $18,000 is reported to have met with rejection by the owners of the property. The state regularly has upwards of a million dollars worth of liquor stored in the central warehouse. Fully a year ago Republican leaders who were growing alarmed at the spread of state offices over downtown Des Moines and the huge sums being spent for rentals, pointed out that many other states where liquor sales were a state monopoly required liquor companies to make their own storage arrangements. It was claimed this had no effect on the retail price of liquor. Such an arrangement for this state is reported among the proposals now under consideration. Still another plan envisions use of a single building, several of which are reported available, in which all overflow offices could be housed at but a fraction of the present annual cost.

PLUGGING MORE LEAKS

Legitimate income of the state has shown a steady increase as the many departments tightened up upon their regulatioss and plugged the many loopholes that chiselers have developed. Foreign corporations, corporations which have qualified their organizations under the laws of some other state, are required to qualify also in this state before they can do business. Last year a spectacular case against several large companies involving huge penalties broke into the news and then was squelched. Now Secretary of State Earl Miller is beginning to ferret out these violators with the expectation of recovering $75,000 to $100,000 for the state. Of course a large percentage of foreign corporations of good standing do comply with the law willingly and Secretary Miller's present campaign is designed not only to bring to the state its legitimate income but to protect those companies who are willing to operate legally.

Collector Purchases First Bill of Rights

Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach of Washington, D. C., has acquired the original manuscript of the bill of rights, which the congress of the United States assembled to consider 150 years ago.

The noted collector of rare books and manuscripts has declined to indicate from what source it had come into his possession.

It was on March 4, 1789, that the congress assembled in New York city, then the national capital, to consider the first 12 amendments proposed for the Constitution. Of these original 12, the first two concerned the number of members in the house of representatives and the manner in which their salaries could be altered. These two were rejected, so that Article III became the first amendment, and so on down the list to Article XII, which became the tenth amendment—the first 10 constituting what the world has since known as the bill of rights.

The manuscript acquired by Dr. Rosenbach has been placed on display at Philadelphia. Written on parchment, it bears the signatures of Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg, then speaker of the house, and of John Adams, then vice president of the United States and president of the senate. The document was attested by John Beckley and Samuel A. Otis, respectively, clerk of the house and secretary of the senate.

Majority of Stutterers Are Men

Nine out of ten of the 1,350,000 stutterers in the United States are men, Dr. James F. Bender, authority on stuttering, has revealed. "The radio and talking movies have made the nation more speech-conscious," Doctor Bender said. He reported the results of a study he has made of 249 college stammerers, over a period of seven years, at the American Speech Correction association's convention here. He is the association's director of information. His survey showed that college students suffering from dysphemia (stuttering) made higher scores in intelligence than comparable groups of non-stutterers. It showed also that stammerers were less sociable and more emotional than persons with normal speech.

The Ides of March

In the Roman calendar the month was divided into unequal parts by the days which were known as the calends, nones and ides. The calends were always the first day of the month, the nones came on the fifth or seventh, and the ides the thirteenth or fifteenth. Although the term strictly speaking refers to only one day, it is sometimes loosely used of the seven days preceding The phrase "Beware the Ides of March" is used as a warning of impending and certain danger. The allusion is the warning received by Julius Caesar before his assassination.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—As Andre Maurois becomes an "immortal," it would seem that there ought to be honorable mention, or at least a simple garland of some kind, for Mme. Maurois. Here a few weeks ago, explained how his wife, also a person of distinction, learned typing and stenography to keep his script coming smoothly and legibly to the publishers. He writes only in longhand, said to be quite as cramped and illegible as that of Horace Walpole, and she alone of all mortals can translate it. Seat No. 35 in the French academy might still be vacant but for Mme. Maurois.

for Spouse
rois Might Be Mortal

He was born Emile Herzog, in Alsace. His literary divagation was the first short-cut to immortality in a line of ancestral woolen drapers reaching back to the year 900 A. D. He was a bachelor of arts at 15 and a doctor of philosophy at 18. He began work in his father's factory, but left right on the job as a philosopher and literateur, so, when he was assigned to the British as an interpreter in the World war, he could fill them in on Byron, Shelley and Keats, and did so. Later he explained Disraeli to the English, and, around the clubs, they bit their pipe-stems and admitted that this French chap knew a lot of things they hadn't even suspected. "Ariel, the Life of Shelley" put him in the big literary tournament in 1923, where he has been ever since.

He is slight in stature, dapper and fastidious, with his thinning hair deployed carefully left and right, gesturing only cautiously with the sensitive hands of an artist. He has an acute, skeptical mind, interested in politics only in its historic sweep. He weighs words like an apothecary and it is as a craftsman and finished wordsmith that he glorifies for the academy. With keen insight, he has experted American on his numerous visits here, taking us through the valley of despond. His latest appraisal found us moving out of national adolescence into fully rational, adult statehood. He hopes for the best, but is not a fuzzy optimist. The "decline of the humane ideal," he thinks, is the most disquieting trend of the modern world.

WALTON MOORE, of the state department, who will be 81 years old next February, like Mr. Chips, thinks the way ahead lies through the humanities. Mr. Chips showed he was no fossil when they had to bench him, and no more is Mr. Moore—boarding the Pan American clipper for Europe.

He is amenable in old-fashioned behavior—a tall, quiet, gay, courteous Southerner—and perfectly adaptable to all new degrees of living. He is keenly interested in aviation, having taken many airplane flights along the Coast, and one on the German dirigible Hindenburg. The state department's participation in international arrangements for landing fields and the like has been in his hand.

In congress from 1919 to 1930, from Virginia, he was a colleague of Secretary Hull. President Roosevelt gave him assistant secretary of state in 1933 and later counselor for the department. He is a bachelor, living 15 miles to his work from Alexandria, Va. He looks as if he could call war talk just by serving mint julips all around.

SLEEPING SICKNESS PRECAUTION URGED

Two Doses Immunize Horses For 8 Months.

Horses treated with two doses of chick embryo vaccine to prevent sleeping sickness are immune to the disease for a period of at least eight months, it is indicated by immunity tests being conducted by the division of animal pathology and hygiene, college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

Further tests on immunity will be conducted at the agricultural college to keep veterinarians and live stock owners informed with reference to the period of immunity established by the vaccine.

In the meantime, it is suggested that all good horses be immunized immediately with two doses of chick embryo vaccine to avoid losses which were reported in 85 different counties last year.

Horses that had the disease and recovered last year and horses that were vaccinated should be revaccinated, it is recommended by staff members of the division of animal pathology and hygiene.

It is hoped that tests under way at the college of agriculture will determine if horses are immune longer than eight months.

Suspicious clinical cases of sleeping sickness in horses have been reported from different sections of the state. However, tests of materials submitted to the laboratory of animal pathology and hygiene have as yet failed to yield the virus of the disease.

Mulching Commendable For Soil Conservation

In order to preserve its strength, soil must be protected with some kind of covering to prevent rains from washing away the finer particles. In the opinion of Russell E. Underwood, extension soil conservationist at the New Jersey college of agriculture, Rutgers university, the use of mulch is valuable in this respect, especially where specialized crops prohibit the use of soil-conserving rotations.

"When specialized crops are grown on sloping land and clean cultivation is practiced to control weeds and check evaporation of soil moisture, the soil is exposed and very vulnerable to dashing rains," Mr. Underwood explains.

"Mulch should be applied in strips across the slope so as to cover from one-half to two-thirds of the land area. This applies to mulch grown on available adjacent land. Frequently, however, the mulch crop could be grown and not harvested but allowed to remain on the land for protection against erosion. Oats, barley and sudan grass planted in late summer will make fairly good growth before being killed by winter freezes. Such material offers good protection against winter erosion and has the advantage of being anchored to the soil so that it is not washed or blown away."

Nature Toes the Mark In Control Laboratory

Night or day, sunlight or darkness, temperature control within a fraction of a degree, and plant-life that can be "put to work or put to bed at will," all are under the control of scientists in a specially-designed chamber at the New York state college of agriculture.

The exactness of control is probably the greatest yet achieved in any laboratory, and the aim is to unravel the mystery of plant "vigor," the quality that makes any one stock superior to others, either in yield, disease-resistance, or in other ways.

In plant breeding, it is known that when two inbred or purebred strains are crossed, the result (a hybrid) may be astonishingly better than the parent stock. This is referred to as "hybrid vigor." Why and how this happens are subjects of study by plant physiologists.

Farm Topics

One of the best ways to cut the cost of growing heifers is to provide improved pastures.

The practice of fertilizing land with phosphorus bearing material is older than written records. The first acid phosphate fertilizer was made in 1842 by John Lawes, an Englishman who treated bones with sulfuric acid to make the phosphorus more readily available to plants.

Look Pretty as a Picture in Frocks of Dainty Silk Sheer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SO LITTLE MISSY and Miss Sweet Sixteen are dated up for just one party after another this summer? Hearts set all a flutter as to delectable gowns that will make young moderns look pretty as a picture? Which leads up to the why and wherefore of the accompanying illustration. This group of adorable party frocks conveys an all-important style message in regard to summertime party frocks, namely that of the supremacy of fine silken sheer fabrics in the mode.

The weaves in the category of silk sheers that are favored most include silk organdies in white or pastels, marquisettes, mousseline de soies, also either soft or starched silk chiffons, frothy white silk tulles, silk nets and of course the loveliness of silk laces is not ignored. Not a sheer in the above mentioned list but that works like magic in accenting the endearing young charms of party-going young daughters this season.

The outstanding characteristic of the new sheer frocks is a quaintness that reminisces of Civil war fashions. To give the ultra-feminine look and the coy simplicity that present styling implies, designers are indulging freely in such fetching details as flounces, dainty ruffles, bow-knot or flower appliques, and the newest gesture is the revival of gay ribbons (supposed to change the color of your ribbons to tune to your mood) run through yards and yards of beading, just like in the old-fashioned days.

The majority of party frocks look very bouffant with their wide skirts, and the most ultra models have nipped-in waistlines like heirloom daguerrotypes portray, for the trend at present is more and more to wasp waist silhouettes. The flounce that flourished in Civil war times have returned.

Sometimes just one knee-deep flounce gives added fullness about the hemline. Then again flounces are tiered one above another. The old-fashioned way of heading the flounce with lace or embroidery beading, through which colorful beading has been run, adds to the quaintness of present day styling.

In the lovely girlish frock to the left the bow-knot applique done in ribbon enhances the full skirt. The little girl in the background has her silk organdy dress similarly fashioned, thus carrying out the popular idea of sister fashions. Frocks of this type are equally lovely fashioned of either white or pastel chiffons or silk organdies.

The little girls in the foreground are charmingly gowned. The diminutive lace jacket worn, as shown centered in the picture, is enough to delight any little girl's heart.

Very prettily styled is the other little girl's dress. It is made all of lace with flutings of self lace adorning the bodice top and outlining the waistline.

A styling trend very noticeable in the smartest new gowns is that of the all-over shirred waist. The new sheers yield to this treatment very pleasingly. The shirring can be easily done by the home dressmaker, by loosening the tension of one's sewing machine and lengthening the stitch. Then when the machine stitching is done pull the top thread and even shirring will result. Thin paper placed under chiffon while stitching keeps material flat. It tears away easily.

Lumber-Jacket Top

The lumber-jacket influence continues throughout summer fashions. So much so many of the daintiest sheer lingerie blouses are now made with belts (some worked with lace insertion and edging) that fasten over the skirt. Printed silk sheers such as pictured proclaim the new fad in this youthful lumber-jacket silhouette that has come in on the crest of the widely heralded "little girl" vogue. Note how its belt buttons over the skirt. The remarkable thing about the silk that fashions this dress is that it is the new sanitized type, treated with process that acts as a deodorant.

Flare for Rubber Flowers Growing

The idea of wearing the new rubber flowers as a corsage or boutonniere elsewhere than on the beach is gaining. These lovely flowers are too attractive to confine within a limited realm. Then, too, they are eminently practical, for soap and water will keep them fresh-looking indefinitely.

Natural colors, grace of design and true reproduction of nature marks these corsages as outstanding. Anemones in pastel colors enliven a swim suit with true artistry. Deep pink camelias are lovely to wear in an evening coiffure. Roses of realistically colored rubber and dahlias in colors true on sport jackets are ever so effective and outstanding.

Stripes Back in Fashion Picture

The cycle of fashions continues to revolve and now the indicator stops at 1915, the era of the Castle walk and, from the sartorial standpoint, of stripes.

But striped materials in the hands of the modern designer have a spicy verve wholly different from those recorded in the fashion books of almost a quarter of a century ago. One of their paramount virtues is that they are slimming. However, their chief charm is that they lend themselves to such varied and exciting adaptions.

Flowers and Snoods

A charming evening headdress, if you wear your hair long enough to use a snood, is the combination of snood and flowers.

ASA: A LIFE OF TRUST

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 14:2-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on thee.—II Chronicles 14:11.

"In God we trust."

These are the words which appear on many of our United States coins. Do we believe them? The lesson for today reveals how real trust in God operates in the life of a nation. The divine principles which were in effect 900 B.C. are just as valid in A.D. 1900. A prayerful consideration of them in the Bible schools of our land today and the application of them to our national life may mean more for our country's welfare than the deliberation of statesmen or the operation of governmental agencies.

The story of the reign of Asa (one of the few godly sovereigns of the nation of Judah) reveals that trust in God calls for an upright life, for intelligent preparation, prayer, and faith. If we trust God we shall

I. Make the Life Right (vv. 2-5).

Asa "did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord." Only such a man or such a nation can really trust God and count on Him for guidance and blessing. Asa destroyed the idols and places of heathen worship (vv. 3, 5), but he also turned his people to the true God (v. 4).

Many are praying that America may have such a revival, which will result in the putting away of sin, which is becoming such a blatant commonplace in our land, and a turning to the true God in repentant and righteous living.

II. Prepare With Care (vv. 6-10).

Asa trusted God but he also made every possible preparation for that which his nation might face. In time of peace he fortified cities and trained his army. This was intelligent faith.

We need not pray that God will keep us warm, if we do not gather and conserve the fuel which He has provided. We must plant, harvest, and store the grain if we are to eat when winter comes. A proper preparation for the defense of our country should precede our prayers for God's protection.

In and through all it is God that works, but at the same time He expects us to do what we can as He enables us to serve Him. The work of the Church of Christ would make great strides forward if His followers would recognize that fact. "We have no right to look for divine co-operation until we have done our best; we are not to sit with folded hands and expect a complete salvation to be wrought for us, and then to continue as idle spectators of God's redemption of mankind. We are to tax our resources to the utmost, gather our hundreds of soldiers; we are to work out our 'own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure'" (W. H. Bennett).

III. Pray With Assurance (v. 11).

The Ethiopian host facing Asa's army was so great that humanly speaking his distinction was hopeless, but "one man with God at his back is always a majority." Take courage, Christian friends, trust God. Only be certain that you are on His side and that your life is right, and then be assured that He will give the victory.

The secret of Asa's victorious prayer was that he put no trust in himself, but did believe in God. Says Alexander Maclaren: "My consciousness of need is my opening the door for God to come in. Just as you always find the lakes in the hollows, so you will always find the grace of God coming into men's hearts to strengthen them and make them victorious when there has been the preparation of the lowered estimate of one's self. Hollow out your heart by self-distrust, and God will fill it with the flashing waters of His strength bestowed."

IV. Act in Faith (v. 12).

Asa went out to meet the Ethiopians, but he knew that God went before him, and therefore he saw God smite them.

Right living, proper preparation, and the prayer of faith must culminate in an act of faith. If we believe that God is for us, let us act as though we believed it and step out with confidence to do His will, come what may. God honors that kind of faith, whether it be on the part of a king, leading his nation into battle, or on the part of the humblest believer, seeking to bear testimony for Him.

Consecration

Consecration is not wrapping one's self in a holy web in the sanctuary; it is going into the world and using every power for God's glory. —Henry Ward Beecher.

A God of Justice

No one can exaggerate the goodness of God, save when he robs God of His justice and might, and paints Him as a benevolent but weak grandfather.

COMMITTEES PUSHING PLANS FOR BIG TWO DAY CELEBRATION HERE

August 7th And 8th Are The Dates For 50th Anniversary And Home Coming

The several committees appointed to work out plans for the coming two day celebration of Klemme's Fiftieth Anniversary and Home Coming to be held on Monday and Tuesday, August 7th and 8th, held a joint meeting with Chairman Ira Overholt, Friday evening to check up on work thus far accomplished.

Wellemeyer Is Historian

One of the most important tasks was assigned to Art Wellemeyer who has been gathering material for a complete history of the town and community. Mr. Wellemeyer has many interesting historical facts and stories to present at the park program to be held on Tuesday afternoon A public address system will be installed at the park where an interesting program will be given and at which time Mr. Wellemeyer's history will be given over the loud speaking syster W C Keraus is in charge of the program and will be the master of ceremonies Although the program is far from being complete at this time, plans are being made to have old time residents on the speaker's stand where they will be introduced to the audience. A number of former residents have written friends that they expect to be in Klemme for the celebration.

Sport Program To Be Big Attraction

Orville Stokesbary, who is in charge of street sports and stunts, has a vast array of events to attract the crowd. A soft ball tournament final will be played on Tuesday afternoon with a substantial purse offered to the winner. All of the athletic contests have cash prizes for the winners and there will be contests for women and children, men and boys of all ages.

Concession Committee Reports Large Variety

George Lawhorn, who is in charge of concessions, reports that there will be a large variety of attractions of various kinds, including a complete line of rides such as a merry-go-round, ferris wheel and three or four other rides There will be the usual line of stands and attractions for the midway Henry Lewis, chairman of the dance committee is making arrangements for a free dance and will have one of the best orchestras obtainable for Tuesday night. The orchestra will play both old time and modern numbers and everyone is invited to dance free.

Will Be Held At Park

The celebration center will be the Klemme town park where there is plenty of cool shade and plenty of seats will be provided The concessions and attractions will all be placed around the out side of the park, which will give a large space inside for the people to roam around, sit in the shade and really enjoy themselves.

FARMERS' ATTENTION CALLED TO CLASSIFICATION OF CROPS

The classification of several crops under the 1939 Agricultural Conservation Program is being called to the attention of Hancock County farmers by Ben V Greiman, chairman of the county committee

Flax for use as a nurse crop for biennial or perennial legumes or perrenial grasses may be harvested for grain and still be classified as a non-depleting crop providing that a good stand of such biennial or perennial grasses is obtained However, in cases where a good stand is obtained, but the legume or grass is plowed under before October 1, 1939, the acreage will be classified as soil-depleting

Also, oats used as a nurse crop for legumes or perennial grasses may be cut for green hay and be classified as non-depleting providing that a good stand of the legume or perennial grass sown is obtained Likewise, in cases where a good stand is obtained, but the legume or grass is plowed under before October 1, 1939, the acreage will be classified as soil-depleting

THRESHING UNDER FULL SWING THROUGHOUT NORTH IOWA TERRITORY

Threshing got off to a good start last week when the annual job was finished on a number of farms in this vicinity This week threshing is in full swing.

The oats crop is good this year and elevator men say it runs from 30 to 60 bushels per acre, and weighs an average of around 32 to 33 pounds. Some fields have yielded much heavier oats, however, while others will go below that mark The lightest oats brought to a local elevator Tuesday weighed out 28 pounds.

A big share of the threshing will be completed in another week.

Arnold Uses Popular Strategy In Construction Trust Inquiry; Charged With 'Copying' Dewey

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

HOUSING:
Political Vogue?

Periodically there arises a David who slays the wicked giant Goliath. Usually it sets a fashion until corruptness again catches hold. Last year New York's racket-busting States Attorney Thomas E. Dewey became a David, captured public fancy, inspired radio programs and placed wicked politicians on the defensive. The public obviously wanted reform and no more rackets.

When Tom Dewey began looming as a 1940 G. O. P. presidential possibility, reformation sounded like good strategy for any aspiring politician or party. By early July, Attorney General Frank Murphy had behind him an excellent record of smashing corrupt political machines (like Kansas City's Tom Pendergast) and tracking down income tax evaders. This was the signal for Scripps-Howard Columnist Raymond Clapper to charge that Frank Murphy was trying too hard to win the vice presidential nomination.

RACKET BUSTER DEWEY

Meanwhile there was arising another administration racket-busting program under guidance of the justice department's Thurman W. Arnold. Its aim: To drive trust practices, price-fixing and collusion out of the U. S. building industry. The day Mr. Arnold told his plans to the temporary national economic committee, Chicago Daily News' William H. Fort wrote from Washington that this was "obviously the New Deal's most ambitious trust-busting venture in its attempt to push young Tom Dewey's New York activities into the shade."

Designing or not, Thurman Arnold's drive bids fair to accomplish something. With 140 lawyers and an enlarged appropriation, the justice department expects to uncover plenty of reasons why a metropolitan dweller runs into trouble when he wants to build a house. Alleged monopolistic devices: (1) fixing of prices by producers of building materials and trade associations; (2) use of joint selling agencies; (3) control of sales and limiting of quantities; (4) elimination of competition by assigning business in rotation to the one next in turn; (5) refusal to sell direct to purchaser, so that all material must be bought through retail outlet.

JAPAN:
No Fooling

Two years ago this month the men of Nippon invaded China, stormed Peking and started the war which still remains officially undeclared. Anniversary time finds Japan at her wit's end economically, enjoying an artificial wartime boom but nevertheless ready to impose new taxes and new restrictions on an already sorely pressed people. How much longer the conflict will last is anybody's guess, but certain it is that China grows more unified each day and will be a thorn in Tokyo's side for years to come.

What troubles Japan today more than her Chinese problem is a second war, which international observers agree is now an actuality. The opponents: Japan and Russia. The participants: Japs and their puppet Manchukuoans versus Russians and their puppet Outer Mongolians.

For five years both nations have kept their troubles out of print by relying on convenient buffer states, but by early June there were signs of open hatred. Newspapers, first in Tokyo, then in Moscow, began boasting of incredible victories which never gibed with the enemy account. After several weeks of this, American correspondents finally reached the Japanese front lines from where they dispatched more accurate reports, yet there was enough Japanese good news in them to indicate official censorship. Most important, correspondents found well-equipped armies fighting on a nine-mile front in a region so remote from civilization that it might be on another planet.

At Tokyo, Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma officially discounted the importance of this warfare, but he was fooling no one. Knowing so, he made it clear Japan will show "a stronger front" to the Soviet on questions of fishing, coal and oil concessions.

EUROPE:
Balkan Pressure

In June Yugo-Slavia's regent, Prince Paul, visited Berlin. In early July Hungary's army chieftain, Gen. Henry Werth, attended German army maneuvers just as Bulgaria's premier, George Kiosseivanoff, was discussing "the general situation as well as specific German-Bulgarian questions" in Berlin with Adolf Hitler.

As well it might, this frightened Rumania. Reason: Adolf Hitler's three guests represented nations surrounding Rumania on as many sides, south, west and north. A second reason: Adolf Hitler is angry with King Carol for consorting with England and France. A third reason: From these visits may grow an anti-democracy Balkan entente composed of Bulgaria, Yugo-Slavia and Hungary, opposing the pro-democracy bloc composed of Rumania, Greece and Turkey.

Greatest reason, however, was Germany's apparent support of Bulgaria's long-standing territorial claim to Dobruja, which she lost to Rumania after the World war (see map). Should enough Rome-Berlin axis pressure for return of this territory be placed against Rumania, Adolf Hitler evidently presumes King Carol might be persuaded to drop his Anglo-French connections.

Biggest fallacy in Germany's plan for a pro-axis Balkan bloc is that the Reich must support two nations which want the same thing. Yugo-Slavia, though leaning axis-wise, could hardly be persuaded to ally with Bulgaria if it meant surrender of the land she gained from that nation after the great war.

SCIENCE:
Official Car

Within the antarctic circle lie vast iron, coal and oil resources coveted not only by the U. S. but by Norway, Germany and Great Britain. In previous trips to that region Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd staked out vast areas for the U. S., but no official claim was ever made. Several weeks ago congress appropriated $340,000 for a land-staking expedition which Explorer Byrd will lead out of New York early next October, hoping to claim approximately 675,000 square miles of antarctic wastes.

Equipment will include three ships, the coast guard's Northland, Admiral Byrd's Bear of Oakland, and the ice breaker North Star. Also taken will be ample air equipment, but what fascinates most landlubbers is the "house on wheels."

Since wide crevasses in the ice crust offer a mighty obstacle to explorers, ordinary tractors are useless. At Chicago, therefore, Dr. Thomas E. Poulter announced he was building a huge new snow cruiser 55 feet long, powered by diesel engines and tracked with endless tread wheels. In its spacious quarters four men can live comfortably with supplies to last a year. On its roof will be lashed a small airplane.

POLITICS:
Explanation

Ever since Chicago's Democratic convention of 1932, Indiana's presidential aspirant and former Gov. Paul V. McNutt has been at odds with National Chairman James A. Farley. Reason: Democrat McNutt allegedly tried to block Franklin Roosevelt's nomination in 1932. Thus when the white-haired Hoosier returned from his Philippine governor-generalship last month to start his presidential boom, he found no welcome at national headquarters. But a few weeks later he emerged from conference with Mr. Farley and political wiseacres smiled, for a feud based on misunderstanding had evidently been settled. The reported feud:

Since early days Illinois and Indiana Democrats have worked together, switching from one presidential candidate to another as occasion demanded. In 1932 the Chicago convention went into wee morning hours with Franklin Roosevelt still minus his two-thirds vote. As host, Chicago's Mayor Anton Cermak approached Indiana's Bosses McNutt and Frank McHale, got their agreement and planned to announce dramatically during the next vote that Indiana and Illinois were switching to Roosevelt.

But Chicago was also planning a world's fair one year hence. With nomination unlikely for two more ballots, Mayor Cermak moved for adjournment at 4:30 a. m. and planned his announcement the following evening when the nation's radio receivers would be trained on the convention. But he forgot to tell Chairman Farley of the plan.

By next evening Mr. Farley, thoroughly mad, had wooed and won California's Chairman William Gibbs McAdoo. On the roll call Mr. McAdoo was reached first; Democrats Cermak, McNutt and McHale never had a chance and their plan was never made public.

Such is the story. But if peace now reigns between Farley and McNutt, what can come of it?

AGRICULTURE:
Frozen Asset

Ten years ago science discovered perishable fruits and vegetables might be preserved by freezing, thus providing hotels, hospitals and restaurants with quasi-fresh products out of season. So well did the idea go over that last season a heavier-than-normal "freeze" was encouraged despite previous season's carryovers amounting to 20,000,000 pounds of vegetables and 90,000,000 pounds of fruit. But consumption dropped unexpectedly last winter. With a new packing season underway, food freezers are now surveying 46,000,000 pounds of vegetables and 86,000,000 pounds of fruit, wondering how to melt down almost 130,000,000 pounds of frozen assets.

HEADLINERS

CHARLES EDISON

The instant death came to 77-year-old Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, his position went automatically and without fanfare to the assistant who has actually managed that department for the past year—Charles Edison, son of the late Inventor Thomas Edison whom he closely resembles. Though many in administration circles predicted Mr. Edison would be named secretary to succeed Mr. Swanson, others thought the post might go to Adm. William D. Leahy, retiring chief of naval operations.

Charles Edison

Though only 49 years old, Mr. Edison is no newcomer to government circles. He became assistant secretary of the navy in 1936, but his real initiation came during the World war—while still in his twenties—when he directed manufacture of war materials. Mr. Edison's chief business interests follow in his father's footsteps, carrying on the utilization by mankind of the instruments that inventor perfected.

Just as many army administrative tasks have been given to Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson, so has President Roosevelt placed heavy trust in Mr. Edison for navy administration during Secretary Swanson's long illness.

GROWERS TRY NEW STRAINS OF CELERY

Combine High Quality and Disease Resistance.

By R. A. EMERSON

Celery growers are testing four new strains of cross-bred celery this spring, combining high quality and disease-resistance of the parent stocks.

Developed by the joint efforts of the departments of plant breeding and vegetable crops at Cornell, the new strains are a cross of the old Golden self-branching variety with the high quality and disease resistant green variety Giant Pascal. The growers have selected four strains for trial.

The new strains are said to be highly resistant to the yellow fungus, a serious celery disease in New York state. Though not all the celery land in the East is infested with the fungus causing the disease, the affected areas are extending more widely every year.

However, if growers continue to raise varieties that are susceptible to this disease, most of the muck land suitable for celery production will be infested before many years.

The cross-bed celery has better quality than most of the celery on the market today, he says. The plants were bred on the basis of length of stalk, thickness of stalk, and firmness; the resulting strains form thick stalks of celery that are "less stringy."

Good Breeding Birds Worth Protecting

Poultrymen who pedigree breeding are confronted each year with the problem of keeping breeding males in good condition from one breeding season to the next.

Since the progeny test is the basis of progressive poultry breeding operations, it is necessary that all males tested during their first year be kept until their breeding worth is determined. It is discouraging to discover that the best male, according to performance of his daughter in the laying house, has been beaten up by his mates during the summer months and cannot be used again for breeding purposes.

F. P. Jeffrey, instructor in poultry husbandry at the New Jersey college of agriculture, Rutgers university, says that because of their tendency to fight each other, it is unwise to allow male birds to run together in any large number unless they have access to a very large range which also provides a certain number of hideouts where the male can take refuge.

"A better system," Mr. Jeffrey says, "is to allow the males to run with females. It has been observed at the experiment station that three males with 100 females generally works out satisfactorily. This practice, however, is not desirable from the standpoint of sale of market eggs unless the eggs are given immediate cooling and retailed as quickly as possible.

"In case a valuable male breeder has been detected, it is worth while to keep him in a roomy, individual cage equal in size to one used for stud mating. The extra labor required in caring for him is well spent if he can be kept in good physical condition for the next breeding season."

Industrial Cycles Are Important to Farmers

Some of the nation's most important industries are "cyclical" in nature; their booms and poor times come in cycles, according to G. E. Brandow of the department of agricultural economics, Cornell university.

He cited buildings, textiles, and automobiles as the principal examples of industries that show these periods of activity and inactivity.

"The importance of industrial cycles to the farmer," he stated, "is mostly their part in causing changes in total business activity, which, in turn, influence the demand for many farm products. A long cycle in building is most important; its influence can be detected in the price of eggs and milk and in farm prices generally."

Mr. Brandow said the most important influence on profits in farming is the general level at which prices fluctuate or change. Industrial cycles and business activity do not cause changes in the general level of prices. he said, but they do explain many of the short-time ups-and-downs in prices and the time at which major changes occur in price levels.

Gardens Profitable

The farm garden returns as much from time invested as does any farm enterprise. The better the garden, the more returns it can make in food, fun, and profits to the family. Have the garden near the house. Odd moments can be spent there, and the lady of the house can easily gather the vegetables without waste of time. Nearness to the house also gives some protection against animals and thieves, but a permanent fence is the best insurance.

"You will immediately organize in your Division two composite companies of Infantry . . . selecting the largest, most snappy and best looking officers and men for these two companies . . ."

On May 10 the composite companies assembled at the Carnival grounds in Coblenz. The Third Army Composite Regiment was formally organized on May 18, 1919, the composite companies of the several Divisions being given regimental designations as follows:

| Composite Co. from: | Designated: |
|---|---|
| 1st Brigade, 1st Div. | Co. "A" |

Col. Conrad S. Babcock assumed command of the Composite Regiment on May 19, and the regiment began drilling and performed the usual camp duties at the Carnival grounds until June 15, when it entrained for Joinville-le-Pont on the outskirts of Paris.

Reviewed by Pershing.

On the afternoon of June 22 the third batallion tendered a reception to Gen. John J. Pershing at the Pershing stadium, following which the regiment was reviewed and inspected by the president of France and General Pershing.

On July 4, at 6:30 a. m., the regiment embussed for Paris to parade in that city, forming in the historic Place de la Concorde and passing in review before the president of France and General Pershing.

On July 14 a provisional battalion embussed at four a. m. for Paris, forming on Boulevard Neuilly. The American column moved forward over the parade route, passing under the famous Arc de Triomphe and paying honors to the monument of the war dead in the Place de l'Etoile and to the president of France at the head of the Boulevard Champs Elysees.

The Composite regiment left Le Havre on July 16 and arrived at Southampton, England, that evening. On the afternoon of July 17 it arrived in London.

Inspected by Prince of Wales.

The next morning the regiment formed in Hyde park and participated in a medal presentation ceremony, afterwards being inspected and reviewed by the prince of Wales and General Pershing.

Again the next morning the picked body of American soldiery formed in Hyde park for a parade past the saluting point at the Queen Victoria monument, the salute being received there by King George V in the reviewing stand.

On July 23 the Composite regiment entrained for Southampton, and sailed at six p. m., for Le Havre, arriving at the French port the following morning. Disembarking immediately upon arrival at Le Havre, the regiment entrained for its encampment at Joinville-le-Pont. On July 31, the regiment was reviewed by General Pershing, the last such review by the Commander-in-Chief, A. E. F., of the Composite regiment overseas.

Orders having been received for the regiment to move to Brest and prepare to sail for the United States, the command left Joinville-le-Pont on August 4 and detrained at Brest two days later. Until August 29 it engaged in drills and camp duties at Brest, embarking on the transport "Leviathan" on the twenty-ninth and sailing for the United States the next day.

Return to America.

The big steamship docked at Hoboken, N. J., on September 8, and the Composite regiment went into camp at Camp Mills on Long Island, N. Y. On September 10 the regiment paraded on Fifth avenue, New York city, as escort troops of honor to the general of the armies, John J. Pershing. Five days later it left Camp Mills and moved by rail to Washington, D. C., in which city it paraded with the "Fighting First" Division, A. E. F., on September 17. During the remainder of the month it was stationed at Camp Meade, Maryland, and was processed for demobilization, which was completed on September 30, 1919.

The "Grand Review" of May 23-24, 1865, was the idea of Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war in President Lincoln's and President Johnson's cabinet. To celebrate the end of the war and to give the people an opportunity to look upon the men who had saved the nation, he suggested that the Army of the Potomac and the Army of the West, then camped near Washington, be formally reviewed in the capital before being discharged from service and returned to their homes. Accordingly, Gen. U. S. Grant, commander-in-chief, issued an order for the review.

Public and private buildings in Washington were decorated for the occasion. Floating flags and draped bunting were everywhere and at prominent places along the line of march were erected triumphal arches covered with floral embellishments. In front of the White House four reviewing stands were built, decorated with regimental battle flags and flowers. The school children of the city, the girls dressed in white and the boys in black jackets and white trousers, were assembled on the terraces and balconies of the Capitol to sing patriotic songs as the soldiers passed.

Shortly before nine o'clock on the morning of May 23 a thrill of expectancy ran through the crowd as the magic word, "Here they come!" passed down the line. The blare of a trumpet, the roll of drums—and down the avenue came a little group of horsemen. At their head rode a bearded officer, on his shoulder-straps two silver stars. It was Maj. Gen. George Meade, the victor of Gettysburg, who was leading the Army of the Potomac. Behind him clattered his mounted escort and then in solid rank on rank the men who had fought with Grant at Spottsylvania, at Cold Harbor, in the Wilderness, and at Petersburg, and the men ho had divided their rations with the men in gray at Appomattox. Their uniforms were soiled and faded, for there had been no brushing up for this occasion. They marched in the garb in which they had fought.

General Meade lifted his sword in salute as he rode past the main reviewing stand in front of the White House. In it sat President Johnson and members of his cabinet. Grouped around them, in brilliant uniform, were the diplomats and envoys of foreign countries. On the President's left sat a stubby, bearded little man who had led this host to victory—Lieut. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. Back of them stood distinguished officers of the army and navy—Halleck, Meigs, Hancock "the Superb" and Burnside "the Splendid but Unfortunate."

Shortly before three o'clock that afternoon the first day of the parade had ended. It had taken the veterans of the war in the East more than six hours to pass the reviewing stand. On the morrow their brother veterans from the West would have their chance for the plaudits of the crowd. "Before daylight the fire companies of the city were out watering the streets for the splendid military display of General Sherman's army" reads a contemporary newspaper account of the second day of the review. "At nine o'clock General Sherman, heading the column, marched down Pennsylvania avenue amid the din of huzzas and congratulations and a hailstorm of bouquets and wreaths."

But if this review represented all the pomp and circumstance of war, there was a reflection of its horror and cruelty, too, in the march of Sherman's men. For along with them marched thousands of freed slaves, sheep, goats, pigs, cows and horses, which "Sherman's Bummers" had picked up along the way. In their ambulances and pack trains were game cocks, poultry, calves, jewelry and a miscellaneous collection of other articles, brought with them back from their campaign of devastation through the South. Perhaps the cheering crowds, looking upon these men in blue as the saviors of the nation, gave but little thought to the true meaning of that strange spectacle, nor realized the agony of defeat, or hunger, and of poverty for years to come for the people of their own blood which this part of the triumphal march represented.

COOLING DRINKS FOR SUMMER
See Recipes Below.

Cooling Summer Drinks

Can you think of anything more cooling and refreshing than a frosty glass of ice cold beverage sprigged with mint and tinkling with ice cubes? Neither can I! There's something about a cold, tart-tasting drink that seems to lower the temperature several degrees.

I like to keep a variety of chilled drinks in my refrigerator to meet the demands of sultry weather; a sparkling punch to serve during mid-afternoon when everyone is wilted and weary; old-fashioned lemonade for thirsty youngsters and grown folks, too; or cool, refreshing iced tea to serve with meals, or whenever the occasion warrants.

Iced tea is a summer standby, and properly prepared it's truly delicious. Follow these simple rules for making it, if you like to serve to your family and your guests the clear, sparkling, faintly fragrant tea that's delightfully refreshing.

Iced Tea.

1. Rinse teapot with boiling water.
2. Place tea in teapot—allowing one teaspoon of tea per cup to be made.
3. Pour freshly boiling water over the tea leaves.
4. Allow tea to steep—not boil—for 3 to 5 minutes according to strength desired.
5. Cool hot tea infusion quickly by pouring it over a generous supply of chipped ice.
6. Serve at once. Lemon slices or a sprig of mint may be used as an accompaniment if desired.

Ginger Julep.
(Serves 4-5)

Few sprigs mint
2 lemons
¼ cup superfine powdered sugar
1 quart gingerale
Cracked ice

Place the mint leaves and the lemon rind, cut in strips, in a pitcher. With the back of a spoon, crush the leaves and the rind. Add lemon juice and sugar, and place in refrigerator for about an hour to ripen. When ready to serve, add gingerale, and pour into tall glasses filled with crushed ice.

Old-Fashioned Lemonade.

1 cup sugar
2 cups water
¼ cup lemon rind (grated)
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 quart cold water

Place the sugar, 2 cups water, and the lemon rind in a saucepan. Cover and cook for 5 minutes. Add lemon juice and cold water. Chill thoroughly, and garnish with a sprig of mint or a marshmallow in each glass.

Spiced Syrup.

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup water
Pinch salt
3 teaspoons whole cloves
6 inches stick cinnamon

Bring sugar, water, and salt to the boiling point and boil one minute. Remove from fire and add spices. Cover and cool. Strain before using.

Frosted Grape Juice Ade.
(Serves 6)

4 cups grape juice
Juice of 3 oranges
Juice of 1 lemon
1 pint water
¼ cup sugar
Crushed ice

Combine the fruit juices and water. Add sugar. Dip the rims of tall beverage glasses in lime juice, then in confectioners' sugar to make a frosted edge. Allow to dry. Half fill glasses with crushed ice, and pour in the beverage.

Iced Coffee.

Prepare hot coffee in the usual manner making it a little stronger to allow for dilution. Then pour over crushed ice or tea cubes in tall glasses, and serve at once.

Mocha Freeze.

Pour chilled coffee into tall glasses. Add a generous spoonful of vanilla ice cream to each glass and top with whipped cream.

Bowling Green Punch.
(Serves 8-10)

3 cups orange pekoe tea infusion
Ice
1½ cups spiced syrup
½ cup lemon juice

¼ cup orange juice
1 pint gingerale

Pour warm or hot tea over ice. Add lemon and orange juice and spiced syrup and mix thoroughly. Add gingerale just before serving.

Make Modern Laundry Out Of Waste Space Upstairs

Waste space upstairs can easily be fashioned into a modern laundry, brightened up with paint and hung with some of those attractive low-priced curtains that are always bobbing up in such variety. If you read floor plans of modern houses you have discovered the growing trend for off-the-kitchen-laundries. Equipment designed for such rooms includes washers that pump themselves empty.

Ironing has always been an upstairs operation, possibly because it is easier to transfer ironed clothes to proper storing places without danger of over-mussing. Many ironers have table tops that serve a real purpose in the small kitchen, and there are washers tailored to kitchen size, too.

House Cleaning Is Made Easy by Use of Vacuum

The days are gone forever when, to clean a rug thoroughly, it was necessary to hang it on a clothesline or lay it on the grass and beat it with a bamboo or steel wire contraption.

Today, thanks to electricity and the vacuum cleaner, rug beating is a thing of the past in millions of homes. Moreover, in addition to eliminating much work and drudgery, the vacuum cleaner raises practically no dust and thus greatly reduces the time required for dusting.

Household Refrigerator

To get the best results from the household refrigerator, it is well to decide in advance which foods are to go in and which ones to be taken out instead of pondering the question while the door is open. Every time that happens the temperature goes up and the longer the door stays open the higher up it goes. Another wise precaution is to make sure that cooked foods are well cooled before putting them into the food chest, otherwise the heat and moisture generated will also cause the temperature to rise.

Yellow for Light

To brighten a poorly lighted bedroom, a color scheme includes walls painted daffodil yellow, a paler yellow ceiling and white woodwork with thin lines of orange color.

Care of Dishcloths

To save your dishcloths use a medium-sized cork dipped into scouring powder when polishing paring knives or other cutlery.

COLLECTIONS UP

Gasoline tax collections show an increase since January 1 far beyond the normal increase in the number of cars and trucks. The increase in receipts up to July 1 amounted to $624,000 over the same period last year and State Treasurer Bagley believes the increase may reach $1,000,000 by the year's end. Mr. Bagley acknowledges what appears to be an increased cooperation between his offices and gasoline dealers. The State Treasurer further believes that his gasoline tax collection staff, particularly those in the field who conduct audits and checks, have generated much of this voluntary cooperation by their attitude of interest and helpfulness. Since four-niths of gasoline tax collections returns to the counties and five-ninths to the state highway program, this circumstance is of genuine significance.

OVERHEAD DOWN

Well remembered is Governor Wilson's first conference with the Highway Commission shortly after he took office in January. With a program of farm-to-market roads in mind he drew a reluctant admission from the Commissions engineers that engineering and adminstrative costs could be reduced by more than a million dollars per year without hampering the progress of the primary road program A program of farm-to-market roads financed by use of funds which originate in gasoline taxes, brought forth momentary remonstrances from those who feared use of the funds might threaten payment of highway bonds. However, it was again demonstrated that Iowa farms off paved highways might be brought closer to all-weather roads without the slightest threat to bond and interest requirements—and with plenty of room to spare. Now it would appear from Mr. Bagley's report of gas tax collections that efficient administration of public office is also a source of revenue. It is much less painful and much more sensible, he points out, to conserve funds already collected than it is to search out new taxation schemes.

MINERS APPLAUD

Iowa coal miners and mine operators alike cheered Govenror Wilson's charge to the state board of education last week when he urged the purchase of Iowa coal for use at institutions under the board's control. Reported to be preparing to let contracts for some 55,000 tons of coal for use at the University of Iowa, most of which was to come from outside the state, miners and operators asked the Governor to intercede in their behalf. An act of the 48th General Assembly was apparently intended to permit purchase of Iowa coal even at a higher figure than from outside the state if such action would promote employment and react to the general welfare of the state.

WISE ECONOMY?

Southern Iowa coal mining communities have been hit hard by unemployment. The heaviest relief load in the state occurs in those counties which produce the bulk of Iowa coal and the legislature obviously believed Iowa miners preferred a job and wages to enforced idleness and relief. Notoriously close in his approval of expenditures of any sort, Governor Wilson nevertheless viewed purchase of outstate coal as an unwise economy "It does not seem wise economy," he said, "to save $1 on coal bought outside the state and then spend that dollar for relief of unemployed miners" The amount of coal involved has been estimated as large enough to furnish 143 days of work for 100 miners. It is understood the board was reluctant to act at once on the governor's suggestion and evaded an immediate decision by requesting an opinion from the attorney general's office regarding the legislature's liberalizing act. Letting of the contracts was deferred.

MORE CARS OUT

Ten more state owned automobiles are to be turned over to the executive council. Following the lead of Governor Wilson and all other state officers, the Liquor Control Commission recently ordered these cars out of service as unneccesary and costly. Four of these cars have been in storage since January when the Republican administration first evidenced its intention to eliminate all unnecessary expense. The Liquor Control Commission passed into Republican hands July 1 and six more automobiles were declared excess baggage. The first four, stored since the first of the year, had been maintained for the use of two commissioners, the secretary and warehouse superintendent. To what use the secretary and warehouse superintendent put these cars was not explained.

CORN ACREAGE

In complying with AAA corn acreage reduction requirements, Iowa farmers took as many acres out of production as all other states combined According to a recent survey in the Des Moines Register, based upon government reports, Iowa farmers contributed half of the total acreage reduction Farmers in twenty-five other states reported some reduction while at the same time eighteen states reported they had increased corn acreage. Kansas showed the greatest gain in corn acreage and it was explained that while Kansas farmers cut their wheat acreage to comply with AAA, wheat acres became corn acres. Like Kansas the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Minnesota and Wisconsin, are not wholly restricted as is Iowa and as a result report increased corn acreage

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

Although the number of Iowans to receive old age assistance increases steadily, new economics and new funds under the present administration have made possible a slight increase in the monthly check. The steady year in and year out increase in the number of applications for old age assistance constitutes a phenomena that has puzzled actuaries. It was expected a point where natural removals through death and voluntary withdrawal would equal applications would have occurred long before this but applications each month continue to exceed removals. The commission receives an average of 1,000 new applications per month and about 300 new names are added each month. To meet this continued demand on the fund, the Social Welfare Board is striving to eliminate every possible overhead expense and make certain that funds alloted for old age assistance are not dissipated or diverted.

TAG ENDS

Iowa liquor stamps which have cost the state $1.50 per thousand since the commission was founded, will hereafter cost eighteen and one-half cents per thousand . . . . the number of Iowans now receiving old age assistance is at the highest point in history, 52,364 . . . . . sales in the 170 state operated liquor stores dropped for June although store No. 1 in Des Moines showed an increase . . . . . current Federal debt total $40,440,000,000 . . . . your share $311.08.

Many From Here Honor Marble Rock Couple On Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Schaefer of Marble Rock were greatly surprised Sunday when about 40 friends and relatives gathered at their home to help them celebrate their wedding Anniversary.

The following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Schaefer, Ed. Suckow, Mr. and Mrs. Emery Schaefer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Schaefer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hansen and family, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schaefer and family, and Mrs. Wilson and daughter, Florence, all of Klemme; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Wilson of Rockford; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ridder of Nora Springs; Mrs. Rose Asling and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Suant and daugther, Betty, of Marble Rock.

All brought well filled baskets and enjoyed a picnic dinner. The afternoon was spent in a social way and the guests departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Chris Schaefer many more happy anniversaries.

Canada Uses Air Maps To Plan Timber Work

Experiments and field work conducted by the dominion forest service of the department of mines and resources, in co-operation with various other organizations, have proved the value of air photographs for forest surveys in Canada. Already more than 100,000 square miles of forests have been classified from air photographs and 132 maps prepared for various projects in British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

These air surveys were later proved to be as accurate as expensive ground surveys. In all cases where air photographs are used for mapping and estimating timber their effect has been to cut ground work to a minimum and to reduce the time required to produce an estimate.

Air photography, which has been employed with such remarkable success in Canada for the preparation of topographic maps, now permits a minute examination of timber holdings and is being used to prepare forest inventories. A good air photograph faithfully records a wealth of information that may later be employed to classify and map the forest types, and by means of special methods recently developed, to provide surprisingly accurate estimates of existing stands of timber.

The estimating of timber stands from the air is an accomplished fact and a science rapidly advancing through research instituted and developed by the dominion forest service. To this end, methods of determining the heights of trees have been developed by measuring their images or shadows in the photographs.

Not only are air photographs being used to advantage in mapping and estimating forest types, but berth-holders are employing them for actual woods operations. Equipped with air photographs and a stereoscope the woods foreman can obtain a clear picture of the area in which operations are to be conducted.

Silver Scent Boxes Were Stylish in 18th Century

Small silver scent boxes and vinaigrettes came into fashion late in the Eighteenth century, writes Alice R. Rollins in the Los Angeles Times. They were considered an indispensable part of a woman's toilet a century and a half ago. Every woman carried one in her pocket or reticule or suspended from her chatelaine. It was the fashion to sniff at it delicately whenever the opportune time came, for the oftener a woman of those times came to swooning the more highly was she regarded. The women, however, were not alone in using these small trifles. Those for the men were larger and more masculine in taste. They included such designs as a skull, a fish or fruit. They were worn suspended from the watch chain or carried in the pocket.

Vinaigrettes were usually made of silver, but a few of gold and ivory are known. One of the latter is described as being egg-shaped, pierced all over and unscrewing in the middle for the insertion of the sponge soaked in aromatic vinegar. The silver ones are of many shapes and sizes. On the inside of the box was a grilled compartment that held spices, musk or a tiny sponge that had been moistened with sweet-smelling liquids.

In shape they were round, oval, convex, and flat. Sometimes in the form of tiny books, pocketbooks, letter wallets or shells. Fish-shaped scent-bottles and vinaigrettes from Holland are not uncommon.

America's 'Discovery'

America in all probability was "discovered" a great many times before European history made any definite record of the fact. A Norse sea captain, one Herjulfson, was blown out of his course while taking a load of colonists to Greenland in 986 A. D., and sighted the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador. He did not land, but his story moved Leif Erickson to investigate, and Leif, in 1001 A. D., visited Nova Scotia, New England and probably lands farther south. But none of the discoveries really "took" until that of Columbus, October 12, 1492.

Definition

The federal alcohol administration defines beer as a malt beverage produced by bottom fermentation possessing the characteristic flavor and aroma distinctive of beer and containing not less than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol by volume. The administration defines ale as a malt beverage produced by top fermentation, possessing the characteristic flavor and aroma of ale, having an original gravity of not less than 13.50 balling, containing not less than 5 per cent of alcohol by volume and of light color.

Force Defined

A force is something which causes the velocity of a body to change in the direction in which the force is directed. A force applied to a motionless body causes it to start moving. Applied to a moving body, it speeds it up, slows it down, or changes its direction. Until it is subjected to a force a motionless body will remain motionless and a moving body will continue to move at unvarying speed to the end of space.

Morning Glories

Frank Finger, 75, of Ackley, was killed last week in a binder accident. He was untangling some morning glories from a binder when his team started up. His right leg was cut, the left leg broken and the knee dislocated. Injuries and shock caused his death.

Broken Necks

Three broken necks, none fatal, occured within a few miles of each other recently. At Shell Rock, Adam Eichner was struck on the side of the head by a hayloader. At Plainfield, Lewis Hill fell from a load of hay. At LaPorte City, Ralph Bunyan was hit by a truck. Box score: Three broken necks, no casualties.

Diesel, Engine Inventor, Without Funds at Death

Dr. Rudolph Diesel was crossing the English channel on the night of September 29, 1913. He was going to London to attend a meeting of manufacturers, and to confer with the British admiralty, according to the Toronto Star Weekly.

It was ten o'clock when he said good-night to his friends and went to his stateroom. The next morning he did not appear. He was never seen again His disappearance became an international sensation When the war broke out there was a rumor that Diesel had been killed by the Germans to keep him from giving technical secrets to the Brit ish

Rudolph Diesel was one of the greatest of inventors His name has become a common noun, Diesel liners furrow the seven seas, Diesel trucks rumble along the highways, Diesel-powered planes criss-cross the skies, Diesel tractors plow our fields.

Behind the facade of Rudolph Diesel's confident manner, his big house in Munich, and his position of world renown, he was at the end of his rope All his property was heav ily mortgaged, he faced bankruptcy. to him an intolerable disgrace

"If my friend Diesel had only said one word to me!" exclaimed Adolphus Busch, the St Louis brewer There were a dozen other men who would have helped him, but his stubborn pride forbade.

He had discussed methods of suicide with his son, Rudolph Jr, and the boy, never dreaming that his father was serious, said that he thought the best way was to jump off a fast-moving ship. When he left for England, his farewells were unaccountably affectionate Channel crossings are dismal affairs at best. He was alone after an evening of forced cheerfulness, and impending disaster loomed before him with double force He went back on deck, and before him lay the dark, oblivious sea.

Over a week later, a Dutch boat pulled a body aboard. It was battered beyond recognition, and after removing the contents of the pockets, they dropped it overboard. Later a coin purse, a pocketknife, and a spectacle case were identified as Dr. Diesel's.

Weight Is Basic Factor In Methods of Control

One of the marked trends in present-day industry is toward the use of weight as a means not only of checking quantity and quality but of actually controlling processes of manufacture. There is an excellent mechanical reason for using weight as a means of control whenever possible, writes Roger William Riis in "The Scientific American." Weight is gravity in action; gravity is the one unchanging force known in the world. Every other force, every other source of power, changes and shifts. The force exerted by gravity on any object may conveniently be indicated with great accuracy. Hence gravity makes an ideal measuring medium.

The principle of automatic weighing is applied today in industry to check quantity, to package and fill, to ascertain breakage, yardage and moisture content, to count small parts, to check quality, to direct, supervise and check mixing and batching. These functions fall into three general groups. The simplest includes such jobs as checking quantity and ascertaining breakage, yardage and moisture content. The next is automatic packaging and filling. The most advanced is the automatic control and supervision of batching and mixing.

Flag Display

The American flag should be displayed during the business hours of all working days. As soon after sunrise as it is practicable, the flag should be hoisted and so displayed that the union is at the peak of the staff At sunset it should be lowered and carefully stored. In addition, it should also be displayed on the following holidays: New Year's day, George Washington's birthday, Pan-American day (April 14), Mother's day (second Sunday in May), Memorial day, Flag day, Independence day (July 4), Labor day, Columbus day (October 12), Armistice day (November 11), Thanksgiving day and Christmas day.

Valuable Art Gift

The Rodin museum is in Philadelphia. It was planned as a gift to the city by the late Jules E. Mastbaum, who made the collection prior to his death. Many originals and more than 200 recasts of Rodin's sculptures are placed in and about the grounds. The exhibits include some 500 of Rodin's letters, together with many paintings, drawings, and studies from his hand. The collection is administered by the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

Big Island

Jamaica is third in size of the many islands comprising the West Indies. Its area is 4,450 square miles—about the size of Connecticut. Its greatest length is 144 miles and its width 49 miles. Jamaica is 90 miles from Cuba, 550 miles from the Panama canal and 1,457 miles from New York city. Jamaica and its dependencies have more than a third of the area and nearly half of the population of the British West Indies.

National Consumption of Fruit Juice in Huge Gain

The average American today drinks 24 times as much fruit juice as he did eight years ago, according to Bruce McDaniel, general manager of the Mutual Orange distributors of Redland, Calif.

Last year the nation's pack of unfermented fruit juices, exclusive of cider, was 24 million cases; in 1931 it was slightly over one million cases, McDaniel stated At least 14 different juices are being packed today, with citrus fruits and pineapple leading the field, he said.

"Changes in public taste are responsible only in part for this huge increase," McDaniel said. "A bigger factor is said to be the rapid development of America's efficient mass distribution system, which has brought an abundant supply of fresh fruits and vegetables within the budget range of millions of families in the lower income brackets."

McDaniel cited a recent nation-wide citrus fruit campaign launched by chain stores and other retailers to move bumper crops in Florida, California and Texas, as a graphic example of the operation of this system During the campaign, consumption of citrus fruits and fruit juices was boosted as much as 60 per cent over the same period of the previous year, he said. In two of the three 10-day periods of the campaign, one chain store organization alone moved approximately 78,000,000 oranges, equal to two and a half oranges for every family in the nation.

"Extensive newspaper advertising, co-ordinated sales promotion efforts and consumer education programs were utilized by 240,000 participating chain and independent stores," McDaniel said. "The campaign was the latest of more than a score of similar 'producer-consumer' movements staged to assist producers and at the same time provide substantial savings to housewives."

Agricultural War Budget

Marauding insects and destroying fungus disease kill three billion dollars' worth of crops annually in the U S., according to the department of agriculture, which reports that an increase rather than a decrease in these attacks is probable. For the war against these plant enemies, the annual budget is estimated at not less than $100,000,000 for supplies of such insecticides and fungicides as sulphur compounds, arsenicals, oils and nicotine.

Hairy, Downy Best Known Among Woodpecker Family

Two of the best known woodpeckers, the hairy woodpecker and the downy woodpecker, range over the greater part of the United States. They differ chiefly in size, their color being practically the same. The males, like those of many other woodpeckers, are distinguished by a scarlet patch on the head, notes a writer in the Missouri Farmer.

One of the larger woodpeckers familiar to everyone is the flicker, or golden-winged woodpecker, which is generally distributed throughout the United States from the Atlantic coast to the Rocky mountains. There it is replaced by the red-shafted flicker, which extends westward to the Pacific. The two species are as nearly identical in food habits as their respective environments will allow. The flickers, while genuine woodpeckers, differ somewhat in habits from the rest of the family, and are frequently seen searching for food upon the ground.

The red-headed woodpecker is well known east of the Rocky mountains, but is rather rare in New England. Unlike some of the other species, it prefers fence posts and telegraph poles to trees as a foraging ground.

Woodpeckers apparently are the only agents which can successfully cope with certain insect enemies of the forest, and, to some extent, with those of fruit trees also.

'Cent' Name for 'Penny'

The word "cent" is the official name of our 1-cent piece, "penny" being merely a colloquial name for the coin. An act of congress passed August 8, 1786, prescribed the word "Cents: The highest copper piece of which 100 shall be equal to the dollar." On October 16 of the same year congress ordained "that no foreign copper coin whatsoever, shall after the first day of September, 1787, be current within the United States of America." This law removed the English penny which had circulated freely in this country until after the Revolution. But the name penny had been transferred to our cent in popular usage and has clung to it ever since.

Discovery of the X-Ray

German physicist, Wilhelm Konrad Rontgen, discovered the X-ray in 1895 and gave it that name because he did not understand the nature of the ray (X standing for an unknown quantity in science). He was professor of physics and director of the Physical institute at Wurzburg and while experimenting with a highly exhausted vacuum tube, on the conduction of electricity through gases, he observed the fluorescence of a barium platino-cyanide screen which happened to be lying near. He found that this radiation had the power of passing through various substances which are opaque to ordinary light, also of affecting a photographic plate.

Pastels Vie With Prints in Midsummer Fashion Picture

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN it comes to the voguishness of prints versus pastels the present mode the matter resolves itself into pretty much of a fifty-fifty proposition. Which is to say that the midsummer collections are made up of a goodly showing of each.

There is no doubt as to the importance of pastels especially for everly tailored daytime dresses at observe a nicety of detail which ves them "class" in the eyes of criminating women who know ir fashions. Favor for pastels expressed not only in silk crepes d sheer woolens but a hue and is resounding for smart linens delectable muted pinks and es, rose shades, cool-looking ens and grays, light yellows, lavders and novelty shades as cyclaen, tulip shades and such. White ens and linens au natural are o chic.

One reason for the big splurge t linens are making this season that through the wonders of modn scientific processing newer lins carry a promise of nonrinkling and non-shrinking.

At the top of the picture to the see the attractive spectator rts dress of pastel blue creaseistant imported linen. It has one the very smart umbrella-tucked rts. A belt braided in matching e, fuchsia and yellow silk floss s color in unmistakable terms. e boutonniere is of self-linen and cunning poke bonnet is of white aw.

The dress to the right in the backund of this group is of a nubby er, pure linen in a delectable ll pink. Fitted waistline and eves cleverly appliqued with contrasting bands of periwinkle blue and strawberry linen are highspots in its styling. Sunburst tucks at the neckline, and unpressed pleats in the skirt, are also significant details. Every dress with a jacket is fashion's decree this season which accounts for a matching shell pink bolero which you carry or which you wear according to pomp and circumstances.

Before leaving the linen theme, just a word in regard to the smart looking redingotes tailored of white or natural linen which ladies of fashion are wearing over their lingerie frocks this summer. They are a modern version of the one-time honored "linen duster."

In regard to the silk prints that are everywhere present, and which are in friendly rivalry to smart linens, there is a decided flair among women who dress in the height of fashion for patternings that run to neat checks, and to plaids and stripes with nothing less than a stampede for dotted effects of every description. As the midseason approaches suits of the new check silks will come into play in perfect fashion.

To the left in the foreground of the illustration a fashionable miss is wearing a smart frock for a day under the sun in the country. The dress is of blue silk with white pin dots. The collar piece is white, likewise belt and buttons.

A gay and colorful evening gown is shown to the right. It is of Scotch plaid trimmed with lace. The white organza blouse is also trimmed with lace. The full floor length skirt of gay print with dainty lingerie shirtwaist is a favorite evening fashion formula.

New Hobby

Looms a new hobby on the horizon. It's handkerchief collecting. Not just ordinary handkerchiefs, but handkerchiefs that depict memorable events in American history There is an interesting group of four, just out, created by Burmel, designer of note. They include Mark Twain's Mississippi, Covered Wagon, Mount Vernon and the Landing of the Pilgrims, printed in vivid tableaux against fetching floral borders. Landing of the Pilgrims is the theme of the handkerchief design carried by the charming collector pictured.

★ Film Folks on Stage

★ Ann Waited and Won

★ Kenny Signs Up to Talk

By Virginia Vale

HOLLYWOOD is planning for next summer, and you ought to do the same, if you're interested in seeing your favorite stars of the screen on the stage. It's all because of Charles Coburn, who has been an actor for the last thirty or forty years, and for the last two has been in Hollywood. During the last year he has appeared in "Idiot's Delight," "Made for Each Other," "Alexander Graham Bell," and the recently released "Bachelor Mother." And before long you will be able to see him with Carole Lombard and Cary Grant in "The Kind Men Marry."

But the project to give film stars stage experience is largely due to his experience as the guiding genius of the Mohawk Dramatic festival, which takes place each summer at Union college, Schenectady. There, experienced stars perform in well-known plays.

After his first year in Hollywood Charles Coburn discussed various faults of the motion picture industry with some of the directors and producers. He was asked to do something to remedy those faults—to start something like the Mohawk Drama festival, in fact. But he saw trouble ahead, with each big company demanding the leading roles in his theatrical productions for its stars. He felt that the best way out was for him to line up plays if some college would take over the festival.

The University of California came forward, and now it seems to be all set. Stars, featured players, and even bit players and extras will have a chance to get theatrical experience—and the great public will have an opportunity to look on while they get it.

Ann Sothern deserves congratulations for knowing what she wanted and going after it, although sometimes the going was hard. It's more than a year since she refused to play any more of those ga-ga heroines and declared that she'd do nothing but character roles. She had a long wait—and in Hollywood it's scary to wait too long between pictures, because the public forgets you so soon.

Then came her chance in "Trade Winds," just what she wanted. Another wait, and she was signed up for "Maisie." She was so good in that one that Metro wanted her to sign a contract, but she'd have none of it unless she could be assured of getting the kind of parts that she wanted. She'd rather be off the screen altogether than be on it with no chance to do anything but look beautiful.

So—Metro gave her the contract that she wanted, and her first picture under the new deal will be "Busman's Holiday," made in England with Robert Montgomery.

—*—

New York had its picture taken from the air the other day, more extensively than ever before. A complete crew of cameramen and sound technicians spent several days shooting the harbor, the skyline, the World's fair, and everything else that they thought might be of interest to you when you see the forthcoming Walter Wanger production, "Eternally Yours." Mr. Wanger is doing everything possible for that picture; look at the names in the cast—Loretta Young and David Niven, Hugh Herbert, Billie Burke, Dr. Aubrey Smith, Zasu Pitts. If you pass this one up it won't be his fault.

—*—

Kenny Baker has a nice contract for next year, and Jack Benny will have to find a new singer to replace him. One of the big oil companies has lured Baker away, giving him a handsome salary, and a contract that will permit him to talk as well as sing, which Benny's sponsors didn't want him to do.

—*—

ODDS AND ENDS—Paramount is in favor of making Martha Raye a blonde for her next picture, and she doesn't like the idea . . . Maybe Sally Eilers was no lady when she dumped her ice cream soda into the lap of the woman who insisted on taking the seat Sally was reserving for a friend—but she was doing what thousands of ladies have yearned to do . . . When Dorothy Lamour went to Waukegan for the opening of "Man About Town" she was assigned to the hotel suite where she stayed when she eloped with Herbie Kay.

JEHOSHAPHAT: A LIFE OF OBEDIENCE

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 17:1-6, 9-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.—Matthew 6:33.

Obedience is one of the old-fashioned virtues which has been pushed aside in our present mad rush of self-expression. It needs to be revived if we are to have a happy, contented, and useful people. The lesson for today affords an excellent opportunity to give class members a right perspective. Many regard obedience as something which is exacted by those who desire to have authority over us, but as a matter of fact it is a principle established by God for the right and orderly conduct of life, the observation of which results in blessing and prosperity, and the ignoring of which brings chaos, fighting, bitterness, and disappointment. Obedience to parents, to the law of man, and to the law of God should be taught and exemplified by us, even as it was by Jehoshaphat. Obedience in his life made him

I. A Good Son (vv. 1, 3, 4).

He followed his father Asa and his forefather David insofar as they had followed God. Apart from God and the influence of the Christian faith, the tendency is quite the other way. Frequently we see that a father who came up from poverty by his own diligence and ability will have a wastrel son who amounts to nothing, or even worse, one that ruins himself and others. Blessed is the son who has a godly father and who has sense enough to follow in his steps in obedience to God.

II. A Capable Administrator (vv. 2, 5, 12).

Jehoshaphat faced real problems. The nation was prospering, but there were many difficult questions of foreign relations and in domestic affairs Especially was he concerned about their fellowship with the sister nation of Israel. Idolatry was still common in the land, new territory had to be consolidated and fortified.

The man who is obedient to God's law and whose heart is lifted up toward Him may expect that all his faculties will be stimulated, and that, furthermore, he will have the guidance of God in the discharge of his duties. This is true not only of kings and national leaders, but of each one of us. If we trust in God and are obedient to His guidance, He will bring about astonishing results in the lives of any one of us.

III. A True Worshiper (vv. 3, 6).

He walked in the ways of his forefathers in his obedience to God. A man does not need to be a blind worshiper of the good old days to realize that America could profit by walking in the ways of those of our forefathers who daily walked with God.

Note also that Jehoshaphat had a real personal spiritual experience of his own. "His heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord" (v. 6). Spiritual exaltation makes a man better fitted to live in the daily round of life where he must keep his feet on the ground. There is a dearth of new personal spiritual experiences in our time. How long is it since you and I have felt our souls strangely warmed? God is ready and willing to do this for us now, as He was in the days of Jehoshaphat.

IV. A Wise Educator (v. 9).

Here was a real program of religious education. A wise teacher knows that it is not enough to remove the bad, he must replace it with the good. Jehoshaphat tore down the places of heathen worship, but he substituted the teaching of the Word of God. That kind of a program of nation-wide Christian education would be tremendously worth-while in this year of our Lord 1939 and within the confines of our own beloved country.

Read verses 7 and 8 and you will note that most of the leaders in this teaching campaign were laymen. The priests were evidently for the most part not interested. This has all too often been so, but let not that deter the layman from going ahead in God's name.

V. A Respected Ruler (vv. 5, 10, 11).

His own people gave him the recognition of love and loyalty (v. 5). The jealous nations around him were afraid of him, for they knew that God was with him (v. 10). This was what would be in our day regarded as a rather unusual means of national defense, but note that it was tremendously effective. Would that America were a nation united in loving obedience to God's law. Then would our enemies be afraid because God's hand would be upon us for good.

Wise in All

I know God is wise in all; wonderful in what we conceive, but far more in what we comprehend not.—Sir Thomas Browne.

Strength for Need

Our strength is proportioned to our need, in God's service, day by day.

HOW TO SEW

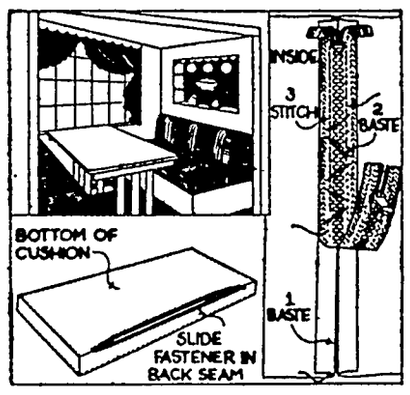
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have both of your books and they certainly have been a help to me. I followed your directions in Book 1 for making all of my slipcovers. Recently I started a wall hanging of crewel work embroidery that required many stitches that were new to me. I found them all clearly diagramed in Book 2, and was certainly glad I had it to turn to.

"I am now interested in covering seat cushions for our dinette. The children have both breakfast and their mid-day meal here. Can you suggest a material that will stand hard wear and that comes in bright colors? G. B."

Green and orange striped awning material would give good service and would be attractive, and this color scheme could be repeated in green curtains and orange paint for the inside of a cupboard. I have suggested slide fasteners for the cushions so that they may be removed easily for laundering.

Notice about book prices: Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator; and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, are now 15 cents each, or both books for 25 cents. Readers who have not secured their copies of these two books should send in their orders immediately, as no more copies will be available, when the present supply is exhausted. Your choice of the QUILT LEAFLET illustrating 36 authentic patchwork stitches or the RAG RUG LEAFLET, will be included with orders for both books for the present, but the offer may be withdrawn at any time. Leaflets are 6 cents each when ordered separately.

Everyone should have copies of these two books containing a total of 96 How to Sew articles by Mrs. Spears, that have not appeared in the paper. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Ask Me Another

A General Quiz

The Questions

1. What is the greatest solvent?
2. Why is an acorn so often seen in carving on Colonial houses?
3. What is meant by "the great American novel"?
4. Who described architecture as frozen music?
5. What does corn mean?
6. Why do birds throw their heads back when drinking?
7. Why does ice become white when scraped?

The Answers

1. Water. It dissolves to a greater or lesser extent almost all substances which it contacts.
2. It was considered a symbol of hospitality.
3. It is a phrase applied to a novel not yet written but dreamed of by all who are interested in American literature.
4. Goethe described architecture as frozen music.
5. To the American, maize; the Chinese, rice; the Scotsman, oats; the North German, rye; the South German, wheat.
6. In order to swallow. The pigeon is the only bird that drinks by suction.
7. Because the scraping leaves a multitude of small irregular surfaces which reflect the light in all directions, giving the white appearance.

Thanks, Jimmie, we hope you go back to Wisconsin again soon and pick more berries.

Eckard Zeidler returned Friday from Brainerd, Minn., where he spent several days the past week fishing with his brothers, Rev. R. J Zeidler of Baldwin City, Kansas, and Rev O W Zeidler of Giard, Kansas. Rev R. J. Zeidler returned home with Eckard while Rev. O W. Zeidler stayed in Minnesota until today. Fishing was only fair, they reported, with the big game fish not hitting, but blue gills and crappies were plentiful.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, Dick Liebendorfer and Mrs. Ed Jacobs and son, Dean, drove to Des Moines, Sunday, where they visited with Ed. Jacobs at the Veterans' Hospital, and also visited Ft. Des Moines. Mr. Jacobs has shown a great deal of improvement in the past week and he expects to be released from the hospital next week. Mr. Jacobs has been a patient at the hospital since the early part of January.

Saved His Mule

Orifice Boyer, colored, drove a mule in the Shuler coal mine near Des Moines. One morning Orifice heard a cracking noise overhead and saw the mine props slipping. Before starting to run, he unhooked his mule from the mine-car The humane act, performed in a dim-lit mine tnunel without benefit of crowds or applause, cost him his life. The mule escaped; Orifice was killed by falling slate

Security

In the heart of every parent lies the hope a secure future for his family A comfortable home, future free from financial worry, adequate provision for education—these are the things desires above all else

To make the necessary provisions for this security is not always the most difficult part such a program. The Assurance that such provision will continue to provide adequate protection, that it will prove dependable and the requirements of his family will always met, has often proved a greater obstacle to the completion of such plans

The difficulties involved in such a program are most often overcome by relying upon the services of a good bank. Successful fulfillment of such ambitions in the past through the services of this bank make it the logical place seek information, to look for assistance in formulating plans, and for advice. We are always happy to serve in such capacity

TOUGH ONE!

SOFTBALL TEAM LOST HARD GAME AT THORNTON

Took Four Extra Innings To Decide Contest

Tuesday night the Klemme softball team journeyed to Thornton for a game under the lights., and came home on the short end of a 10 to 9 count

Thornton took a three-run lead in the first inning and managed to stay ahead until the first of the sixth. Then with the score standing at 5 to 7 against them, the Klemme boys tied it up Thornton failed to score in their half of the frame. In the seventh the Klemme boys pushed in two more runs to put them out in front 9 to 7, but Thornton came right back with two of their own to tie it up as the regular playing time ended

Forced into extra innings both teams played air-tight ball for three innings and then in the last of the eleventh, Thornton scored on an error and a hit to win the game 10 to 9

Joe Blank went the route on the mound for Klemme, while Leo Brown pitched for the Thornton club.

FOUR BLOCKS OF KLEMME STREETS NOW DUST TREATED

Four blocks of Klemme streets were treated to a coat of calcium chloride Monday The chemical attracts moisture and prevents dust from rising Three blocks east from the Co-Op Service Station to the end of Main Street were treated and one block from Herman Paul's residence south was treated. It is expected that a few other blocks may be treated also Property owers along the streets mentioned raised funds for the purchase of the chemical and the Town applied the coating. In a few weeks another coat of chemical will be applied and no more attention will be required for a year.

Parade Starts Program Tuesday Morning 9:30

KLEMME PARK WILL BE SCENE OF CELEBRATION

Festivities Will Begin Monday Evening With All Concessions Running

Next week Monday and Tuesday, August 7th and 8th are red letter days on Klemme's calendar when 50 Years of Progress and the Golden Anniversary of the founding of the town of Klemme will open on Monday night with a band concert in the Park and with a variety of rides and concessions running full blast.

Opens With Parade

Tuesday, August 8th is the big day when old timers will gather for a home coming and the festivities will begin with a parade of both old time and modern floats and displays. The line of parade will be along several blocks, through Main Street and along other vantage points so that everyone will be able to get a good view Dr D P Anderson, in charge of the parade, has announced that prizes will be given to the best float displays He also urges that rural folks should take a part in the parade. Details may be procured by calling Dr. Anderson

Street Sports Galore

A complete line up of races, street sports, contests and stunts has been arranged by Orville Stokesbary. This part of the entertainment will be held after the parade and at about 11:00 a. m. There are races and contests for boys and girls, men and ladies of all ages. Recent addition to races, we understand, will be a horse race and a bicycle race Cash prizes are offered to the winners in each contest, both first and second place

Klemme on the Air!

TUESDAY, AUG. 8, 3:30 P. M.

A 15 minute program will be broadcast from the Klemme Park over KGLO beginning at 3:30 p m on Tuesday, Aug. 8th.

Hank Hook, of KGLO, will be in charge of the broadcast and will arrive with the mobile unit at 2:30 o'clock to arrange the program of music, a brief history of the town, interviews with old residents and give a colorful description of the celebration.

In the evening there will be more amusement in the way of a pillow fight, pie eating contest, ladies nail driving contest, etc. This will take place at the Park stand.

Historical Facts Reviewed

One of the most important features of the two-day entertainment will be the giving of the history of early Hancock County and the history of Klemme. This material has been compiled by Arthur Wellemeyer and will be read over a loud speaking system so that all in the park may easily hear. Old time residents will have seats on the stand and will be given special honor during the program. The afternoon program in the Park will be the high-light of the two-day celebration. All old timers and former residents will register at a place to be provided.

Plenty Of Music

The committee in charge have promised three bands for the day and at least one drum and bugle corps, so there will be ample music for all occasions The music organizations will also take part in the big parade.

Evening Program Planned

A big evening program will also be presented from the Park platform and in general will include band music, contests and stunts. The second section of Klemme's history will be given and business men of today will be introduced

Free Gifts Tuesday Evening

Klemme business men will give away a large number of gifts from the Park platform Tuesday evening The gifts are absolutely free and there is nothing to buy. Watch for this big feature.

Free Dance

Another big attraction will be the free dance on Tuesday night A good orchestra has been obtained and there will be both old time and modern dances Everybody dances Tuesday night.

New School Will Be Open

Special tours through the new school building will be conducted next Tuesday for visitors to the celebration It will be appreciated if people living in town will not add to the traffic through the building that day.

Special Lighting Effects

The Klemme Park will be especially lighted with hundreds of colored lights for the two-day celebration There will be plenty of shade and seats for the daytime, and beautiful lights at night.

The many rides and concessions will surround the Park and there will be plenty of room for an immense crowd.

Come to Klemme, Monday night and Tuesday for the 50th Anniversary and Home Coming. Meet your old friends and neighbors who will be in Klemme those dates

KLEMME SOFTBALL TEAM IN 6 TO 1 WIN OVER BELMOND Visitors Held To One Run As Blank

Turns In Fine Mound Performance

Sunday afternoon saw the Klemme softball club trounce the Belmond softballers 6 to 1 in the first game of two played at the diamond.

Belmond, who came here rated as one of the strong teams in this section, threw a scare into the locals when they brought home a run in the first inning, but that was as far as their scoring went. The locals got the range on Stoltenberg, Belmond pitcher, their first time to bat and before he was taken from the game in the third inning, they scored three runs. Mites, who relieved Stoltenberg, proved harder to hit, and not until the sixth, when they pushed across three more runs, did the locals score again.

Joe Blank turned in a fine performance on the mound for Klemme and had the Belmond batsmen connecting with more air than softballs.

Katter Team In Easy Win

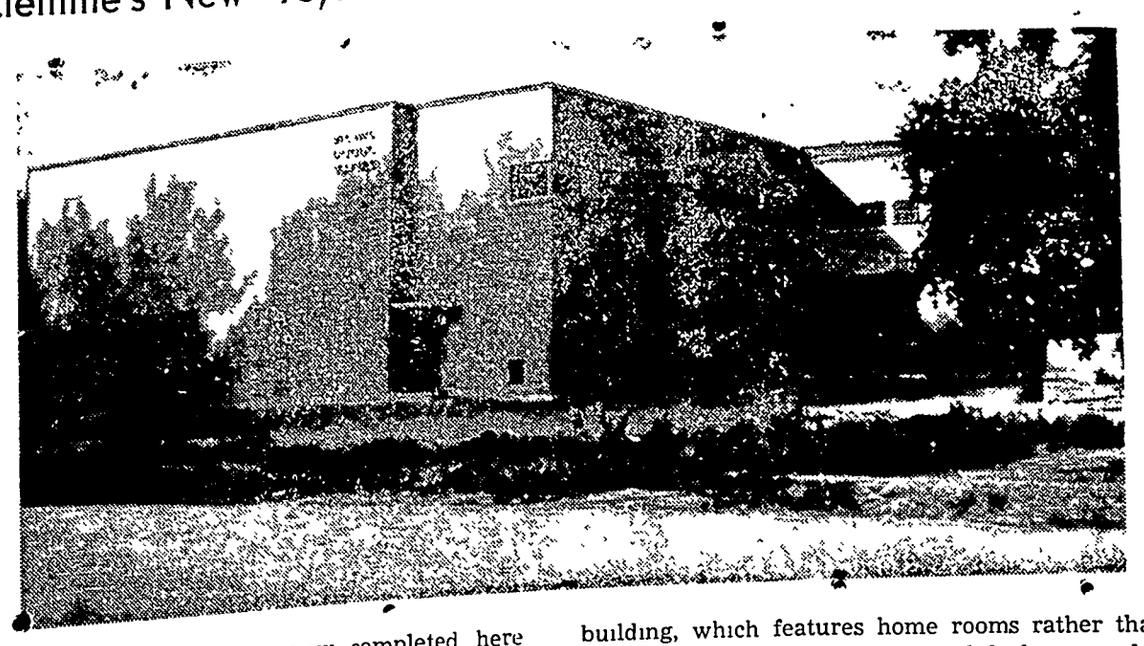
In the second game of the afternoon the Katter team met the Bredlow aggregation and had no difficulty in taking a 15 to 3 decision from them. The game was rather loosely played and errors were quite frequent on the Bredlow team. Katters', however, played "heads-up" ball in taking their win.

Klemme's New $75,000.00 School Open To Visitors Tuesday



A $75,000 schoolhouse is now completed here and will be ready for occupancy when school opens this fall. Assistance in financing the project was privided by a PWA grant of $32,715.

Ernest Andersen, of Clear Lake, was the general contractor for the building, which is of fireproof construction and includes a number of rooms finished with glass blocks

All 12 grades will be housed in the roomy building, which features home rooms rather than an assembly room; built-in steel lockers; and a modern and well-equipped gymnasium and auditorium combination.

It was a year ago that voters of the Klemme Independent school district voted, 206 to 47, in favor of issuing bonds for the project. The new school will be open for inspection when Klemme stages its 50th anniversary celebration August 7th and 8th. (Cut courtesy Des Moines Register.)

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Social Security Amendments Pave Way for 1940 Elections By Wooing Townsend Voters

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

CONGRESS:
Pensions

Many a Republican, and a few Democratic legislators were elected last November on the promise that Dr. Francis E. Townsend's $200-a-month pension plan—to be financed by a 2 per cent transaction tax—would get a hearing. Hearing it got, but little else. Yet Townsendites are potent enough to cause plenty of trouble in next year's election.

DR. TOWNSEND
Beaten, but the ghost still haunts.

To satisfy the pension vote, to provide weapons for next year's Democratic campaign based on "humanitarianism" and to soothe tax-eaten businessmen, the senate passed amendments to the social security act which, if approved by the house, would:

(1) Broaden old age insurance to include 1,100,000 persons like seamen and bank employees, and step up the starting date from 1942 to 1940.

(2) Require states to supply $10 per month for each pension beneficiary, the U. S. to match state funds 2 to 1 up to a total pension of $15 per month; i.e., a total monthly minimum of $25 for each beneficiary.

(3) Freeze the present 1 per cent payroll tax against both employees and employers until 1943, instead of jumping to 1½ per cent next year. Estimated saving to employers and employees: $275,000,000 annually.

(4) Permit downward revision in payroll taxes to finance state unemployment insurance. Estimated annual saving to employers: $80,000,000.

Fly in the ointment was that the plan actually boosted federal-state cost while lowering taxes, a situation which on its face fails to add up. Though a new "contingency" social security reserve of $8,000,000,000 will replace the old plan for an eventual reserve of $47,000,000,000, Michigan's Sen. Arthur Vandenberg figured the senate had added $750,000,000 to the cost (spread over 15 years) without providing any method of paying.

RELIEF:
'Ungrateful'

Old WPA regulations provided union wages for skilled workmen, who thus labored fewer hours for their monthly pay than did unskilled reliefers. Example: Union carpenters might work 53 hours a month and pick up odd jobs on the side; common ditch-diggers might work 121 hours for the same money.

Said WPA Administrator F. C. Harrington to congress: "It is my recommendation that persons employed on . . . WPA be required to work 130 hours a month and that earnings of such persons be on a monthly basis . . ."

Said congress: O. K.

Said more than 100,000 reliefers, going on strike: Congress must restore union wages.

Said President Roosevelt: "You cannot strike against the government."

But strike they did. In Minneapolis two lay dead after riots. Mayor George E. Leach asked Washington to "clean up the mess" and State WPA Administrator Linus Glotzbach shut down all Minneapolis projects.

President Roosevelt found himself on a spot with both A. F. of L. and C. I. O., who have helped elect both him and his friends. But both congress and the White House apparently stuck to their guns despite bellowing by John Lewis and William Green. Commented the Cincinnati Enquirer: "The American people have a great deal of patience with the unfortunate and needy. But they have little patience with the ungrateful . . ."

ASIA:
Exit Britain?

One hot day in Tokyo workers at the British embassy heard a storm brewing outside. Soon a mob that numbered 15,000 began throwing stones and denouncing "British intervention in China," "British imperialism in Asia" and "British support of the murderer, Chiang Kai-shek," who is Chinese generalissimo. The day before two hand grenades had been thrown into the British consulate at Tsingtao. Spreading down the coast, Japan's blockade of British concessions struck awfully close to home when the crown colony of Hongkong found itself threatened by food shortages as Nipponese vessels blocked ports at Changchow, Tungshan and Chaoan. All able-bodied Britons in Hongkong were subsequently conscripted.

In such a tense atmosphere British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie opened his long-touted conversations with Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, knowing full well no settlement would be reached. Japs demand that Britain cease supporting General Chiang and abandon her "anti-Japanese policy in China," which would constitute complete surrender of all her Asiatic interests. Britain, on the other hand, insists that discussions shall deal only with the original conflict over Jap blockade of the British concessions at Tientsin.

When the first day's preliminary confab ended in hopeless deadlock, key Jap officials on the Chinese front issued more threatening statements and precipitated a few more incidents to help make up the harried British mind. First sign of what may become wholesale British withdrawal from China came when missionaries were shipped from Kaifeng, important Honan province railroad city, sharp on the heels of a Jap-inspired ultimatum.

EUROPE:
Visitors to Paris

Mid-July found Europe in pre-dog day doldrums. Adolf Hitler was reported by the Chicago Tribune's Sigrid Schultz as consulting the stars to guide his decisions. Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels fumed over the anti-Nazi letter England's Stephen King-Hall was writing in wholesale lots to "dear German readers." The Reich's toy industry complained that an English-made "Chamberlain-with-an-umbrella" toy was outselling German-made toys in the British isles.

SARAH DELANO ROOSEVELT

Biggest news in Paris, however, was Bastille day, 150th anniversary of the French revolution. Hobnobbing on the reviewing stand with President Albert Lebrun as 30,000 troops filed by were Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, mother of the U. S. President, British War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha and many another English notable.

Keynoted Premier Edouard Daladier: "We menace no one. We dream of no conquest. We desire only peace among all people . . ."

LOUISIANA:
Indictments

Out of its cell at Baton Rouge walked a parish grand jury to plump down the makings of a scandal that started with Louisiana State university's President James Monroe Smith, spread to include two of his aides and finally caught in its net Dr. Clarence A. Lorio who is president of the Louisiana Medical society, state senator, member of LSU's supervisory board and its medical director, physician and surgeon for the state penitentiary and visiting physician for the tubercular hospital. The 29 indictments hit:

Dr. Lorio, for allegedly receiving stolen property and conspiring with 300-pound George Caldwell (ousted LSU construction superintendent) in embezzling $249 in school building materials.

Caldwell, on two counts alleging embezzlement of LSU building materials worth $2,097. He is already under federal charges of diverting WPA materials for private use.

E. N. Jackson, LSU business manager, charged (with Caldwell) with embezzling $480 in school materials, and separately with receiving stolen property.

Dr. Smith, charged on 23 counts, 12 of them with forgery, 11 with altering minutes of the board of supervisors so he could (1) borrow $500,000 from three banks; (2) add $3,600 "bonus" to his yearly $15,000 salary; (3) allow Caldwell 2 per cent commission on all WPA construction at LSU.

PUZZLERS

1. Arrow points to Providence, Ky. Why was it in the news?

2. Of the three crops, corn, tobacco and wheat, which will be larger and which smaller than last year?

(Answers at bottom of column.)

INTERNATIONAL:
Neutrality

Every congressman and senator wants to keep the U. S. out of war. But of ideas on how this shall be done, there are almost as many as there are lawmakers. Late in 1935 congress banned shipment of armaments to warring countries in the first neutrality act. Early the next year it added a provision banning loans to belligerents. In 1937 came a third provision, banning export of goods to embattled nations except on a cash-and-carry basis. The latter provision expired two months ago.

This year, with war hovering over Europe and Asia at the probable expense of Friends Great Britain and France, President Roosevelt wanted new neutrality legislation. His chief aim: Repeal of the arms embargo because it encourages self-sufficing aggressor nations like Germany, Italy and Japan. To replace it he wanted the cash-and-carry provision restored, since Britain and France would nominally control the sea during wartime and could pay for their purchases. Isolationists meanwhile called his attention to the fact that Japan is also a big maritime power.

Upshot was a senate foreign relations committee decision to table neutrality for this session.

While British economists were privately calling wary U. S. isolationists "cowardly," there was good reason to think all neutrality legislation may be wiped from the books and a return made to old international law. Thus the President would be better off, isolationists would be partly satisfied and—politically important—the intra-party Democratic squabble would cease.

NAVY:
Heart Break

Fifty-two days after the submarine Squalus carried 26 men to their deaths, patient salvagers got their giant chains around her (each link 15 inches long, 2½ inches thick, 76 pounds heavy), pumped air into stern and bow pontoons and raised her from a 240-foot grave to 155 feet. From there she was to be towed to shallow water, pontoons readjusted and raised again. As planned, two top stern floats broke the surface, indicating the Squalus lay at even keel. While jubilant salvagers sighed over a job well done, water suddenly began churning around the submerged craft. Up for a moment burst two huge pontoons. Then came the Squalus' bow like a whale's snout, out of the water an instant, then down to her 240-foot grave again to nullify all that had been done. Next two days, with falling barometers and heavy seas around Portsmouth, N. H., Rear Adm. C. W. Cole and his divers could only sit and wait, moaning over the mess below.

Big, but they failed to bind.

Answers to Puzzlers

1. Twenty-nine miners were killed in a soft coal mine explosion there.
2. Larger crops will be corn (2,570,795 bushels, estimated, against 10-year-average of 2,309,674,000 bushels) and tobacco (1,654,622,000 pounds, estimated, against average of 1,360,400,000.) Wheat will be smaller, 716,655,000 bushels against last year's 930,801,000 bushels.
3. False. Mr. McNutt accepted chieftainship of the U. S. security agency but continues his campaigning.
4. Father Divine "bought" a Newport mansion from Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman, socialite.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Within the exploits of men of achievement may—and often does—lie the favoring element of chance, frequently recognizable. But often, too, it is hidden in a vague background of contributory factors.

In Jascha Heifetz's agreement to appear in a forthcoming motion picture, Samuel Goldwyn's powers of persuasion once again excite the envy of his rivals and the admiration of his friends. The eminent violinist's personal aversion to the screen as a medium of expression has long endured in the face of repeated offers. Mistrust of sound track reproduction of the notes of his beloved violin was joined with his repugnance to the elemental music he believed he would be called upon to play and, above all, was his objection to strutting the screen as an actor. So Goldwyn's success in overcoming the great musician's reluctance is now being proclaimed.

Way Smoothed For Success of Sam's Exploit

Yet, lying back of Heifetz's name on the dotted line of a Hollywood contract are various imponderable factors. His wife, for instance, who was Florence Vidor of screen fame, may have been the influence behind his first appearance on any stage in a histrionic capacity. This was last spring when he took the role of a hill-billy fiddler in the annual show of a sophisticated midtown club, of which he is a member. Garbed in overalls, cotton shirt and red wig topped by a broken down straw hat he played "Turkey in the Straw," violin upon his knees, as the time-honored jig tune has never before been played. And for an encore there was "Danny Boy."

So who can say that the siren voice of Sam Goldwyn was not merely the fanning of a flame lighted when, with gusto and amid wild acclaim, he sawed a violin lying across his knee?

Born in Vilna in 1901, Heifetz's American debut came in October, 1917. An American citizen now, he lives in Redding, Conn.

Sam Goldwyn it was who lured Maxine Elliot to the screen back in 1917 and she was but a predecessor to such exalted artists as Geraldine Farrar.

PAUL ROBESON'S magnificent bass voice will have adequate opportunity for expression in his portrayal of the title role of Sam Byrd's forthcoming production of a play adapted by the author from Roark Bradford's John Henry stories. There will be incidental music by Jacques Wolfe.

Bishop's Plight Altered Aim of Paul Robeson

One often marvels at events, apparently casual at time of occurrence, which are found significantly to have affected human lives and so shaped destinies. When Paul was a senior at Rutgers, where he had won high scholastic honors and gained for himself a national reputation as a football end, he was looking toward the cloth as a profession. His father was a clergyman in a small community in New Jersey and, from boyhood, Robeson's idea had been to follow in the paternal steps.

Not long before graduation, the elder Robeson died and among the funeral arrangements was a plan to have the presiding bishop of the church conduct the obsequies. Accordingly, the prelate came to the scene of the funeral from his home in a village in the southern part of the state and after the services he addressed the assembled mourners substantially as follows:

"Brothers and sisters, I had to borrow the money to come to this scene of sorrow and unless you all contribute to defray my journey home, I am afraid I shall have to walk."

Whereupon, of course, the necessary traveling fund was raised. After a while the bereaved son met the late Foster Sanford who was his football coach, his guide, mentor and friend.

"You are still headed for the ministry?" Sanford asked.

"Yes sir," was the reply. "I still am, sir."

"The highest you can ever get to be in your church is a bishop, isn't it?" Sanford asked and when Robeson said that was true, the coach fixed him with his compelling blue eyes. "And so you are going to enter a profession where, even as a bishop, you will have to borrow money to get from north Jersey to south Jersey."

That was all that was said. But next day Robeson came to his friend, confiding his intention to plump for the law and for voice.

BIRTH RATE DROP HURTS MILK PRICE

Need Seen for Increased Use by Adults.

By LELAND SPENCER

The decline in the number of young children is one reason for the reduced use of milk the past few years, according to the New York state college of agriculture.

The declining birth rate calls for special efforts by the milk industry to push the general use of milk as a drink by adults, and especially to break down the tendency of adolescents to switch from milk to other drinks.

Efforts should also be continued to find ways to get fluid milk at less cost to families of low incomes. This is the surest way to ward off the substitution of other forms of milk for fresh milk.

As for dealers' "spreads" on retail milk in nine important markets of the United States, the spreads were reduced during the depression, but are now larger than ever.

The inability of milk dealers to reduce their spread on retail milk is the main reason for the less friendly public attitude toward them the past few years. Those acquainted with the situation, however, know that the chief obstacle to reducing the spread is high wages and the difficulty of using less labor, especially for retail delivery.

As to the outlook for the milk industry during the next two years, the Cornell milk marketing specialists say much depends on the trend of commodity prices.

Green Vegetables Needed For Well-Balanced Diet

Even before the searchlight of food research was turned on leafy, green vegetables their value in human nutrition was pretty generally appreciated. Today they have an important place on the list of "protective foods"—a way nutritionists have of designating foods with a very high dietetic rating.

Leafy, green vegetables merit a place on this list chiefly because they are rich in both iron and vitamin A. Many of them are also very rich sources of calcium. These three nutrients, according to a recent nation-wide survey, are food essentials in which American diets are often low.

Green leaves are also excellent sources of vitamin G. Thrown in for good measure are considerable amounts of vitamin C and Vitamin B1. Leafy vegetables, in addition, contribute bulk or roughage, some of which is usually desirable in the diets of persons in normal health.

Aerial Photos Offer Accurate Farm Record

With the advent of the Agricultural Adjustment act, and the need for accurate field measurement to check compliance with the soil conservation program, aerial photography came into its own as a cheap, quick, indisputable method of land mapping.

Accurate field measurement is important under the AAA because conservation payments are made at a specified rate per acre of land planted. Prior to the use of air photography, a number of methods, ranging from the old measuring wheel to surveying, were used.

Cost of checking performance from the air is about one-third less than the earlier methods of land measurement. Air photography costs about four cents per acre as compared with six cents per acre under older measuring methods. The cost is included as part of the administrative expense deducted from payments to farmers.

Farm Facts

Mushrooms have been cultivated commercially in the United States for less than a half century.

The importance of live stock in Ohio agriculture is shown by the figures for farm income in 1938. Sales of all farm crops brought $63,881,000 but the sales of live stock and live stock products totaled $218,685,000.

Success of artificial insemination in breeding of dairy cattle, tried for the past three months in six southern-tier counties, has led officials of New York state college of agriculture to sanction the method for use by dairymen throughout the state.

Farmers now pay approximately $1,500,000,000 annually for power and power machinery but before the World war they sold power in the form of work animals for several hundred million dollars annually.

One cord of barnyard manure or other well-rotted organic material per 5,000 square feet of garden is recommended as the first fertilizer to apply to the garden. This may be supplemented with superphosphate or with a balance fertilizer as needed.

Vacuum Cleaner With Clean Dust Bag Best

A vacuum cleaner with a clean dust bag does the best cleaning job, studies at Purdue university experiment station show. For best service the bag should be emptied after each daily use. Never wash the bag, as that destroys the finish that keeps it dustproof.

How much dust a machine draws from a rug, the studies indicate depends partly on how fast it is pushed back and forth. Most machines clean best if they are moved at a speed of from one to two feet a second.

Naturally, the machine should not be allowed to pick up pins, tacks, or glass because these sharp objects may poke holes in the bag or chip the fan blades.

It is also desirable to keep the machine in a clean place, protected from dirt and dust.

Many Electric Outlets Important to Kitchen

When electric outlets are being planned in a new house for lamps, clocks and radios, the kitchen is often neglected. It has more uses for plugs than any other room.

Within reasonable limits, there cannot be too many appliance outlets in the kitchen. In this room electricity is used both for lighting and for motivating power.

Consumption of current varies widely with kitchen appliances, and special attention should be given to the load the outlet is expected to carry.

Just Sterilize Containers To Prevent Ropy Bread

"Ropiness" in bread is caused by a bacillus and it makes the bread unfit for use. All containers in which the bread was mixed, baked, and stored should be sterilized by boiling. Ropiness in bread does not develop immediately after the bread has been baked, but announces itself by a disagreeable odor.

To Remove Jar Covers

To remove covers from preserve jars place the jar top downward in a dipper of hot water (not boiling) and allow it to remain five or ten minutes. Remove the jar from the dipper and insert a steel kitchen knife at different points under the rubber. This will let in the air. The cover can then be removed easily.

On Washing Curtains

When washing curtains put dye or tint in the washing machine with the soap flakes. They color more evenly this way.

Add to Your List of "Red Letter Days" in July Birthdays of Two Who Deserve Remembrance For Their Gifts to America's "Folk Literature"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

JULY has its full quota of birthdays of American notables so that we might honor half a dozen distinguished personages on every one of its 31 days without exhausting the possibilities. Included in such a list would be Presidents John Quincy Adams and Calvin Coolidge; Vice Presidents George M. Clinton, George M. Dallas and Elbridge Gerry; Henry Knox, first secretary of war, and Gideon Welles, secretary of the navy in Lincoln's cabinet; Gen. George H. Thomas, the "Rock of Chickamauga," and Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, the "Wizard of the Confederacy"; such naval heroes as John Paul Jones and David Farragut and Richmond Pearson Hobson; John Ericsson, Elias Howe and Samuel Colt, inventors; and such men of millions as John Jacob Astor, John Wanamaker, John D. Rockefeller and George Eastman.

My theme, however, is not of the deeds nor achievements of these statesmen, soldiers and merchant princes. I sing of a humbler kind of folk—those who compose the songs and poems which become the favorite "pieces" of the common people. And in particular, I tell of a woman and a man whose names are but little known to their fellow-Americans (compared to those cited above) but who once set pen to paper and wrote lines which will be repeated long after their authors are forgotten.

MRS. ROSE H. THORPE

If you have ever recited "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight" at school, you should have given it a thought on July 18. For on July 18, 1850, there was born to William Morris and Mary Louisa (Wight) Hartwick near Mishawaka, Ind., a daughter whom they named Rose Alnora. While Rose Alnora was still a pig-tailed, beribboned little girl, the family moved to a farm near Litchfield, Mich. There one day she was at home, supposedly studying her lessons. But her mother noticed that she was busily engaged in writing something on her slate.

"What are you doing?" the mother demanded.

Startled by the question and with a guilty feeling that she should be busy "doing her sums" instead of writing romantic verses, Rose Alnora started to erase them. But her mother stopped her, read what she had written—and didn't scold her! Instead she sent the poem to the Detroit Commercial Advertiser and after it appeared in that paper it was reprinted in dozens of others.

Years later it was included in a book of her poems called "Ringing Ballads" and a Boston Transcript reviewer wrote: "The name of Rose Hartwick Thorpe (she was married to Edmund Carson Thorpe, a writer of German dialect recitations, in 1871) is familiar to every reader through that wonderfully popular ballad, 'Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight.' It requires peculiar genius to write a genuine ballad—something that flows spontaneously from the heart and goes directly to the heart. This gift Mrs. Thorpe possesses to the fullest degree. No poem written by an American author has been so widely copied, nor has achieved so universal a popularity as the one referred to. She has written others as perfect in a literary sense and as full of that indescribable rhythmic swing which characterizes 'Curfew' and the publisher has brought them together in a form which should make both author and public grateful."

Nor was the reviewer exaggerating when he said that "no poem written by an American author has been so widely copied, nor has achieved so universal a popularity." For "Curfew" has been translated into nearly every language of the world and, in the words of another critic, is "universally recognized as a veritable classic." In 1883 Hillsdale college conferred upon its author an honorary M. A. degree because, as the president of the college wrote at the time, "You have written a poem that will never permit the name of its author to die while the English language is spoken."

After the success of "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight" Mrs. Thorpe became a regular contributor of short stories and poems to leading magazines and weeklies and from 1881 to 1904 she published no less than a dozen books of poems and stories for young people. For the last 40 years she has lived in San Diego, Calif., and she is living there today at the age of eighty-eight, still keenly interested in the world and modern conditions, although she has not written any poems for 10 years.

Curiously enough, she does not consider "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight" as her best work. Instead she favors her poem "Remember the Alamo" or possibly "The Station Agent's Story." But in the hearts of thousands of Americans who went to the "little red schoolhouse" and who used to "speak pieces" on Friday afternoons, "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight" holds a place that is secure.

Two days before you put a red circle around July 18 on your calendar in honor of the author of "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight," you might have marked July 16 in the same way. For on July 16, 1848, was born at Johnsburg, Warren county, New York, Eben Eugene Rexford, son of Jabez and Rebecca (Wilcox) Rexford, destined for future fame as the man who wrote "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

When Eben was seven years old his parents moved to Ellington, Wis. At the age of fourteen young Rexford's writing ability began to assert itself when one of his poems appeared in the New York Weekly. Three years later he received his first payment for literary work from Publisher Frank Leslie of New York. Then he entered Lawrence college at Appleton, Wis., and paid his way by writing for the magazines.

It was while he was a student at Lawrence that he wrote the poem which was to make him famous. He sold "Silver Threads Among the Gold" to Frank Leslie's Chimney Corner for $3. After keeping a clipping of the verses in his desk for two years, he showed it to a musician named H. P. Danks, who was suddenly inspired to set it to music. That was in 1878 and it immediately became well known. The invention of the phonograph helped make "Silver Threads Among the Gold" one of our best known "popular ballads" and it reached the height of its fame around 1915 when Richard J. Jose, a leading tenor, insisted on featuring it in many of his programs.

After Rexford's school days were over he settled at Shiocton, Wis., to make literature his profession. He became a contributor of prose and verse to all the leading periodicals of the time and since he was also an authority on flowers he was for 10 years floricultural editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. Among his published books were "Home Floriculture," "A Work About Bulbs," "Flowers: How to Grow Them," "Grandmother's Garden," an illustrated poem; "Brother and Lover," a poem of the Civil war; and a collection of miscellaneous poems.

Besides the song which made him most widely known, Rexford also wrote these songs which were once very popular: "Only a Pansy Blossom," "Sing a Song to Me" and a Latin version of "Jesus Lover of My Soul." He was also a composer of many church hymns. During his lifetime he is said to have written more than 700 poems, many of them for children. Harry Golding, English author, in compiling a collection of what he called the best children's verses in the English language, selected three of Rexford's. The only other American poets thus honored were Eugene Field and James Whitcomb Riley.

Rexford died of typhoid fever in a hospital in Green Bay, Wis., October 16, 1916. Several years ago a large granite memorial was dedicated on the lawn of the Congregational church in Shiocton which he helped build. A bronze tablet on the memorial gives the outstanding events in his career and concludes with the words "To Everyone God Gives a Share of Work, to Do Some Time, Somewhere"—a quotation from one of his poems.

CURFEW MUST NOT RING TONIGHT

SLOWLY England's sun was setting o'er the hilltops far away,
Filling all the land with beauty at the close of one sad day;
And the last rays kissed the forehead of a man and maiden fair,
He with footsteps slow and weary, she with sunny, floating hair;
He with bowed head, sad and thoughtful, she with lips all cold and white,
Struggling to keep back the murmur, "Curfew must not ring tonight!"

"Sexton," Bessie's white lips faltered, pointing to the prison old,
With its turrets tall and gloomy, with its walls dark, damp and cold—
"I've a lover in that prison, doomed this very night to die
At the ringing of the curfew, and no earthly help is nigh.
Cromwell will not come till sunset"; and her face grew strangely white
As she breathed the husky whisper, "Curfew must not ring tonight!"

"Bessie," calmly spoke the sexton—and his accents pierced her heart
Like the piercing of an arrow, like a deadly poisoned dart—
"Long, long years I've rung the curfew from that gloomy shadowed tower;
Every evening, just at sunset, it has told the twilight hour;
I have done my duty ever, tried to do it just and right,
Now I'm old, I still must do it: "Curfew, girl, must ring tonight!"

Wild her eyes and pale her features, stern and white her thoughtful brow,
And within her secret bosom Bessie made a solemn vow.
She had listened while the judges read, without a tear or sigh,
"At the ringing of the curfew, Basil Underwood must die."
And her breath came fast and faster, and her eyes grew large and bright,
As in undertone she murmured, "Curfew must not ring tonight."

With quick step she bounded forward sprang within the old church door,
Left the old man threading slowly paths he'd trod so oft before;
Not one moment paused the maiden, but with eye and cheek aglow
Mounted up the gloomy tower, where the bell swung to and fro;
As she climbed the dusty ladder, on which fell no ray of light,
Up and up, her white lips saying, "Curfew shall not ring tonight!"

She has reached the topmost ladder, o'er her hangs the great dark bell,
Awful is the gloom beneath her like the pathway down to hell;
Lo, the ponderous tongue is swinging, 'tis the hour of curfew now,
And the sight has chilled her bosom, stopped her breath, and paled her brow,
Shall she let it ring? No, never! Flash her eyes with sudden light,
And she springs and grasps it firmly: "Curfew shall not ring tonight!"

Out she swung, far out; the city seemed a speck of light below;
She 'twixt heaven and earth suspended as the bell swung to and fro;
And the sexton at the bell-rope, old and deaf, heard not the bell,
But he thought it still was ringing fair young Basil's funeral knell.
Still the maiden clung more firmly, and, with trembling lips and white,
Said, to hush her heart's wild beating, "Curfew shall not ring tonight!"

It was o'er; the bell ceased swaying, and the maiden stepped once more Firmly on the dark old ladder, where for hundred years before
Human foot had not been planted; but the brave deed she had done
Should be told long ages after:—often as the setting sun
Should illume the sky with beauty, aged sires, with heads of white
Long should tell the little children, "Curfew did not ring that night."

O'er the distant hills came Cromwell; Bessie sees him, and her brow
Full of hope and full of gladness, has no anxious traces now.
At his feet she tells her story, shows her hands all bruised and torn;
And her face so sweet and pleading, yet with sorrow pale and worn,
Touched his heart with sudden pity—lit his eye with misty light;
"Go, your lover lives!" said Cromwell: "Curfew shall not ring tonight!"

—Mrs. Rose Hartwick Thorpe

On a July day 75 years ago there died in New York city the author of another poem which you may have recited on a Friday afternoon in the little red schoolhouse. Or have you forgotten it? It is:

WOODMAN, SPARE THAT TREE

Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough!
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now.
'Twas my forefather's hand
That placed it near his cot;
There, woodman, let it stand,
Thy ax shall harm it not!

That old familiar tree,
Whose glory and renown
Are spread o'er land and sea,
And wouldst thou hew it down?
Woodman, forbear thy stroke!
Cut not its earthbound ties;
O, spare that aged oak,
Now towering to the skies!

When but an idle boy
I sought its graceful shade;
In all their gushing joy
Here, too, my sisters played,
My mother kissed me here;
My father pressed my hand—
Forgive my foolish tear,
But let that old oak stand!

My heart strings round thee cling,
Close as thy bark, old friend!
Here shall the wild birds sing,
And still thy branches bend,
Old tree! the storm still brave!
And, woodman, leave the spot;
While I've a hand to save,
Thy ax shall harm it not!

The man who wrote that poem was George P. Morris, who was born in Philadelphia October 10, 1802. Early in his youth, he moved to New York and at the age of fifteen began contributing to the columns of the New York papers.

One of his acquaintances in New York was a man, 17 years his elder, who was already noted as a poet and editor but who was destined for even greater fame in later years—Samuel Woodworth, who wrote the song "The Old Oaken Bucket." In 1823 Morris and Woodworth established a new magazine, the New York Mirror and Ladies Literary Gazette. Later Morris associated with him in this venture another well-known poet, Nathaniel P. Willis, Hiram Fuller, a journalist, and Theodore S. Fay, a novelist, who continued the magazine until 1842.

Meanwhile, he was establishing a reputation as an author, as well as an editor, for he was a graceful writer of both prose and poetry, many of the latter being set to music. One critic dubbed him "The Song Writer of America" and his colleague, Willis, once declared that at any time he could get $50 for one of Morris' songs, unread, when no other song writer could sell one to the same buyer for a shilling. With Willis he also edited a volume of "American Melodies." Among the songs which he wrote that became very popular in Nineteenth century America were "Near the Lake Where Drooped the Willow," "We Were Boys Together," "Land Ho!", "Long Time Ago," "Where Hudson's Wave," "My Mother's Bible," "Whip-poor-Will!" (Remember how teacher let you whistle the chorus when you sang that song in school?)

But his greatest fame rests upon the poem "Woodman, Spare That Tree," which was later set to music and also became a popular song. The incident which inspired this poem was the following: Morris and a friend were walking through the woods in the neighborhood of Bloomingdale, N. Y., when his friend pointed out an old elm tree, under which he had played when a boy.

While the two men were sitting under the tree, enjoying its shade, a woodchopper came up with his ax and was ready to start cutting the tree down, when Morris' friend offered to pay him $10 if he would spare it. The woodman accepted the money and signed a bond that the tree should not be harmed during the lifetime of Morris' friend.

The poem which Morris wrote, based upon this incident, became immediately popular when it was published and it was even more popular when it was set to music.

Morris' long life of literary activity came to an end on July 6, 1864, in New York city. Most of the things which he wrote are forgotten now—all save one, "Woodman, Spare That Tree." It is still remembered and quoted by thousands of Americans who know most of its lines even though they may never have heard of the George P. Morris, the man who wrote it.

Opinions expressed herein are those of the writer and should not be construed as reflecting the policy of the Republican State Central Committee, any individual or group, or the newspaper in which this column appears.

WISECRACKERS

It is the wisecracker and the political clown whose statements often draw the biggest headlines But underneath all this surface froth and badinage the serious business of official business goes on in Iowa government. Back in 1932, the beginning of those "happy days' of political sprees, there were not nearly enough jobs to satisfy the appetites of political colts on the loose Seemingly the policy of a new deal in state government became one of collect while the pay window was open. Where jobs did not exist they were promptly manufactured. Many lilies of the field grew where none had grown before They toiled not neither did they spin. Yet they drew salaries

DEADWOOD

As personnel and payroll records were scanned during the past six months it became obvious the incumbent Republican administration would have no trouble in redeeming its pledge of a substantial cut in the costs of state government. A great many jobs have been found—born within the past six years—without and justification for their existence They have been promptly abolished and—pressure from the professional patronage dispensers of both parties notwithstanding—the process will go on until every worker earns his salary and every salary buys a full measure of service.

GOAL $300,000

Exact official figures of reductions between January 1 and the end of the fiscal year on June 30, are not yet available but unofficial checks with only major offices and bureaus assures a cut of more than 500 employees Three of the larger state departments, tax commission, highway commission and liquor control commission came under Republican control on July 1. All three had begun to cut away deadwood under administration pressure even before they passed into Republican hands and are at present developing additional consolidation and reorganization plans. C. Fred Porter, state comptroller, believes a fair view of Republican economy accomplishments will be possible by August 1 and agrees that salary reductions of $300,000 annually are likely. The ablest wisecrackers now out of a job can't laugh that into the headlines.

BUDGET ANALYSIS

The Journal-Herald, a progressive community newspaper published in Avoca, recently called its readers' attention to a table apparently obtained from an uninformed source and which purported to compare the 1939 state budget with that of 1937. The comparison was intended, obviously, to create the illusion that the present administration demanded and obtained authorization for expenditures several million dollars in excess of the preceding biennium. What is not explained in this table, and others prepared for the same purpose, is that certain large items are missing from the 1937 totals.

OFFICIAL VIEW

But just to make sure this department requested an official analysis of State Comptroller C Fred Porter who probably knows state financial matters better than any other person Mr. Porter stated definitely that there was "really no great difference between the two budgets." The difference, he pointed out, is that the same items are not contained in two documents. Major items previously paid from other sources, he stated, were $450,000 from sales, income and corporation divisions; $259,350 from motor vehicle dealers license division; $472,540 from three per cent of motor vehicle licenses; $127,320 from receipts of operators and chauffeurs licenses and a trifling item of more than $4,000,000 for primary road purposes which never was considered in former budgets

ITEM $6,332,082

Many additional smaller items bring the total of what Mr. Porter terms "offsets" to $6,332,082. So the "apparent" $21,709,862.48 totaltal of HF 200 is actually $15,377, 780.48; about the total of the 1937 budget Any difference "would be slight and would represent capital investments at state institutions and could not be considered as a part of the running expenses of the state" Mr. Porter said. What the legislature really accomplished this year was to force advance consideration of millions in expenditures which have been in the past more or less out of its control. Five departments which collected huge sums including the motor vehicle licensing divisons, the board which collected sales, income and corporation income taxes, and the highway commission retained portions of their collections for their own operations before remitting to the state treasurer. The legislature simply decided this year to have all funds paid into the state treasury and allocations made only after study of apparent requirements

SALES TAX DIFFICULTY

Only hinted at during the recent session of the state legislature was a serious leak through the sales tax collection system through which large sums were being collected from Iowa citizens but which never reached the state treasury. It was admitted at the time that the present mehod of collecting a one cent tax on purchases between fifteen and sixty four cents; and two cents between sixty four cents and one dollar—and so on up—was really costing purchasers more than the two per cent intended by makers of the law. It was claimed that certain types of business realized a profit under this system while others which had many small sales were penalized since they were required to remit on the gross total. Attempts to correct this by legislation were unsuccessful.

WHAT THE RECORD SHOWS

Since July 1 the State Tax Commission has revealed still another little known circumstance. Despite a staff of field auditors and investigatirs many retail businesses have been permitted o opterate without the permit required by law Not just a few but "probably a great many" Furthermore, the commission believes many of these have been collecting sales taxes from customers but have not been remitting to the state. In such event, both the state and the purchaser are being defrauded This is another leak the present Republican administration intends to plug. Just how serious the leak may be can only be estimated but one official has said it might run "anywhere from a half million to a million dollars annually.

Seeing Snakes

E. E. Grismore, of Corydon, claims he didn't drink anything stronger than water. But he saw snakes, hundreds of them, in the trees, claims the Corydon Times-Republican. This unusual sight was witnessed near Lineville near a limsetone ledge. According to Mr Grismore, this ledge is a hibernating place for the reptiles and they are so thick that they climb the trees and rest on the branches. Anyway, it's his story—not ours.

MANY VARIETIES OF PLUMS NOW RIPE AT GREIMAN FARM

The writer drove out to Ben Greiman's farm Monday evening to see Mr. Greiman's orchard, and, incidentally, to get some liberal samples of the fine fruit found there

Greiman's orchard is one of the show places in this part of the county as far as fruit is concerned. There are several hundred fine fruit trees in the two large orchards where a great variety of plums of every description are now ripening Many of the plums compare favorably with the varieties shipped in from California

Besides the plums, there is a large variety of apples, cherries, grapes and other fruits. A ready sale is found for the fruit grown at Greiman's orchard.

MANY HAWKS ARE NEEDLESSLY SHOT

For every destructive hawk killed in Iowa, probably 18 innocent and beneficial ones are heedlessly shot on mere suspicion, says Ellis Hicks, extension wildlife specialist at Iowa State College.

Only four hawks in the entire United States are considered harmful enough by bird authorities to warrant control, Hicks said All four are found in Iowa, but two in camparatively small numbers They are the sharp-shinned hawk the coopers hawk, goshawk and duck hawk The rest, for all practical purposes, can be classed as beneficial to man

Catch What They Can

"Even these four are not always harmful and, under centain conditions, some of the beneficial species become destructive to game," Hicks explained "Hard winters, for instance, so weaken game birds that they become easy prey of hawks which usually hunt rabbits and rodents."

Ellis stressed the fact that food habits of hawks are not so much a matter of choice as they are ability to catch and kill their prey. Most game species are too clever to be taken except when weak, inexperienced, or in a country where protective cover is lacking

No moth-proof bag can be true to its calling if the clothes it's supposed to protect are nat free from moths or moth eggs when they are put in A moth can have first class fun inside a moth-proof bag once it's there.

art Hand-Crocheted Dress Good Style the Year Round

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

, FOR a dress that is cool to wear on hot sultry days, warm "comfy" to wear on cool days, ss that somehow or other pos- s the magic of fitting into the me of things, whether it be go- places about town during the ac- hours of the day or doing more s of a society stunt at informal e party or tea in the afternoon e club.

e answer? Well, here it is right e your very eyes in the ac- panying illustration — dresses are hand-crocheted of mercer- cotton. Yes'm, a dress like r of the models pictured will e a friend in need and indeed ny time of the year. As to ng the mid-season problem mething to wear that tides over gap between fashions old and ons new, you'll find a hand- eted dress gives the perfect er. Such a gown is correct likable to wear this very min- nd for the girl who will be far- o school in the early autumn e best way of putting to the test e have been saying about the et theme is to make such a for yourself. Just a few lei- moments devoted here and , that would otherwise be wast- o the crocheting thereof and in nbelievably short time you will e exultant possessor of a dress will prove a treasure in your robe, the whole year round. nt to try it? Well, here's how! to your nearest fancy work or department. There you will oodles of mercerized crochet ns in adorable colors. How- ever, that once done, together with the acquiring of exactly the right size crochet hook, not forgetting to ask for a pamphlet of instructions as how to make, which is always available where you buy yarns.

There's good news for crocheters this year in that the idea of styling is being played up for all it is worth. For the first time crochet has been treated like fabric. The result is a collection of crocheted dresses unmatched for smartness, wearability, fit and individuality.

Most important is the way in which the newer crocheted frocks fit and mold the figure. Dressmaker touches are also stressed. Padded shoulders are emphasized, zipper closings are used, skirts swing gracefully, with a view to achieving the young look so much exploited this season.

Typical of the new crochet fashions is the casual, neat-as-a-pin dress as shown to the left in the picture. A decorative zipper down the front, closing at the throat with two pompoms, high-placed pockets and a wide contrasting belt give it the dressmaker touches. Even the belt is crocheted. Worked in lustrous mercerized crochet cotton, the entire outfit is simple to make.

The hand-crocheted dress to the right has the stylish look. Its lines are fluid and soft with the shoulders slightly exaggerated to slenderize the silhouette, making it graceful for the more mature figure as well as for the slim and svelte young woman. The stitch is open and lacy —delightfully cool to wear throughout the summer. Later on you will find this type gown an ideal starter for the fall wardrobe.

★ Spending Money Isn't All

★ Delay Brings New Lead

★ Alec a Top Notcher

By Virginia Vale

WELL, it's happened again; a "B," or low-budget, picture has turned out to be a lot better than many an "A"—or picture on which the studio shoots the works. Every so often somebody does an intelligent bit of work with a "B," and it draws audiences like a magnet, and people who can take the movies or leave them alone—and usually leave them alone—exclaim that, if all movies were as good as this one, they'd go frequently.

The picture in question is "Five Came Back," an RKO product, produced by Robert Sisk. It's probably Mr. Sisk's fault that the picture is so good, though due credit must be given to John Farrow, who directed it, and to the good script and excellent cast.

For Mr. Sisk had ideas about pictures. He thinks that it is more important to have a good story and a group of actors who really can act than it is to spend lots of money on a picture, achieving spectacular effects. If you remember "The Informer" and "A Man to Remember," for which he was responsible, you'll see what he means.

He didn't have stars for "Five Who Came Back"—the budget wouldn't allow it. So instead he engaged Joseph Calleia, Lucille Ball, Wendy Barrie, C. Aubrey Smith and Chester Morris. The plot, dealing with the forced landing of an air liner in a jungle and the effect on the passengers, wasn't new—but it has been well handled, and the dialogue is exceptionally good.

—*—

You may recall that "Northwest Passage" ran into difficulties last fall, just as shooting was about to begin. Payette Lake, Idaho, was the chosen location, and early snows in the mountains made it impossible for the company to work.

The picture finally got started a week or so ago, but the postponement made changes in the cast necessary. So, instead of seeing Robert Taylor in the lead, you'll see Robert Young, and Walter Brennan will replace Wallace Beery.

Paramount, making a film based on the life of Victor Herbert, is so set on getting all details right in this picture version of the famous composer's career that Herbert's daughter has been signed up as technical advisor. Allan Jones and Mary Martin, who couldn't get anywhere in Hollywood until she went off to New York and made a hit on the stage, are the stars.

It looks very much as if autumn would find a new radio star with us. He's Alec Templeton, the blind pianist who has made frequent guest appearances on the air, and now has a regular spot on Tuesday evenings. He plays classical music superbly, and does parodies and musical sketches which are among the most amusing things in modern broadcasting—his recent performance of "Three Little Fishes" as a Handel oratorio, with Templeton singing, in a very good voice, had broadcasting circles predicting a big future for him.

Conrad Nagel, of stage and screen fame, is master of ceremonies on the program, which is one more thing to be grateful for—his diction and voice are good, and he has none of the plushy solemnity which so many announcers seem to think is necessary.

ELIJAH: A LIFE OF COURAGE

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 18:30-39.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is far from the wicked: but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.—Proverbs 15:29.

"Let courage rise with danger." Such is the plea of Webb's great hymn, "Stand Up for Jesus." Christianity in our day calls for courageous men and women.

Courage should be distinguished from such related things as bravery, valor, or bravado. Bravado is an affectation of a reckless bravery which surely has no place in Christian life and activity. Valor is associated with daring and vigorous action, for example, in battle. To be brave means to meet a challenge with confidence and resolution. To be courageous means to steadily meet perils of which one is deeply conscious, doing so because of the call of duty. Courage holds a deeper and nobler meaning than the other words, carrying with it the idea of moral strength and, in the case of the Christian, faith in God as one devoted to His cause.

Elijah was courageous, and he stands before our Christian youth today as an example of that godly courage which

I. Works in the Open (v. 30).

Men whose deeds are evil love the darkness rather than the light. God does not work in the dark. All of His workings are in the open sunlight. Every one is welcome to "come near" and see what is done.

Elijah knew God and he acted like God's man. What a tragedy it is that not all of God's servants have followed his example. If we had the open and above-board dealings of Elijah in the affairs of our churches, we might see more of the fire and power of his ministry. Certain it is that the administration of church affairs which has to be carried out in hidden corners by whispered conversations and by secret manipulations behind the scenes, is not God's work at all, it is the work of man.

II. Asks No Favors (vv. 33-35).

Elijah rebuilt the altar himself. He asked no help of the unbelieving prophets of Baal or of apostate Israel. How old-fashioned he seems in this day when so much stress is laid on a false unity of the faiths, and there is so much solicitation and acceptance by the Church of the help of unbelievers in financing the supposed work of God.

Note also that Elijah invited his enemies to make the answer to his prayer more difficult by pouring water on the sacrifice. This was not an act of bravado, it was for the purpose of demonstrating that there was no fraud. He was willing that the enemies of the truth should make the demonstration more difficult if that would be to God's glory. There is a delightful old-fashioned flavor about that act, too, in these days when men are frequently willing to compromise with unbelief and even with sin in order that the work of the Church may be carried on without too much difficulty. Here again we have an explanation of the lack of spiritual power in our times.

III. Honors God, Not Man (vv. 30-32, 36-37).

A man of bravery wants recognition for himself, while the courageous man asks only that the cause for which he fights shall be successful. Elijah had long since demonstrated that he was absolutely fearless, and sought no favor or glory (read the entire story). Now in the tenseness of this moment, he carefully rebuilds the altar of the true God (v. 30), makes it a testimony of unity to a divided Israel (v. 31), and he does it all in the name of the Lord (v. 32).

His prayer (vv. 36, 37) is a profoundly simple expression of a complete faith in the true God and His power on the part of a man who recognized himself as being only the divine servant. He made no plea that God would vindicate him or his ministry, but he did plead that the name of the Lord should be honored in the midst of an unbelieving people.

IV. Brings Eternal Results (vv. 38, 39).

"The fire of the Lord fell." The lying prophets of heathendom were routed. Many recognized Jehovah as the true God. While Israel did not long remember the lesson learned here, the story has continued as a testimony that will strengthen the people of God as long as time continues.

In God's Treasury

Treat the weakest and the worst with reverence; for, like yourself, they are the temples of the living God.

Abides Forever

The world passes away and the lust of it, but he that doeth the will of God abides forever.—I John 2, 17.

Attractive Holiness

The holiness of Christ did not awe men away from Him, nor repel them. It inspired them with hope.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Two interesting designs for cushions.

"DEAR MRS SPEARS: I like to make interesting cushions —in summer bright cotton covered ones and silk covers in the winter. The cost is nothing as I find that after the waists of dresses are worn out, there are still parts of the skirts that are good enough to give long wear when made into these covers. J. B."

Thanks, Mrs. J. B., for that suggestion, and here are two covers that you might like to try. To make the contrasting edge for the round one, stitch two-inch strips together in points as at A, trim as at B clipping between the points then turn right side out. Pull out smoothly and press, then gather as at C. Stitch to one section of the cover as at D, then stitch the two sections together leaving an opening for the cushion.

To make a pattern for a modernistic patchwork cover, cut a rectangle of paper, then divide it into sections as shown. Use these sections as patterns to cut the fabric adding a seam allowance as at F.

NOTICE: Two books for the price of one. Readers who have not secured their copies of my two books, SEWING, for the Home Decorator; and Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries; should send in their orders at once, before the supply is entirely disposed of. You may also have your choice of the Patchwork Quilt Leaflet or the Rag Rug Leaflet FREE with orders for two books; enclose 25 cents with name and address; directing your order to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill. These two books contain 96 How to Sew articles that have never appeared in the paper.

'Clothed in Gold'

A gold-plated silk fabric is described in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. A silk dress is impregnated with a solution of a gold salt, which is then decomposed chemically, leaving a coating of pure gold upon the fiber, at a cost of about $3 per yard. When the dress is worn out, the gold can be recovered and used again. The garment was recently exhibited in England.

Keep Oils Cool.—Store oils, such as olive or vegetable, in the refrigerator. They are likely to become rancid when opened unless they are kept chilled.

To Inform You.—Read the labels on canned foods. Many tell the number of slices contained in the can. Others give additional useful information about the contents.

* * *

Position of Trellises.—Trellises should be a foot to 18 inches away from a wall. This gives air a chance to circulate and gives you a chance to spray the back of the vine.

* * *

Use for Leftovers.—Leftover rice or macaroni mixed with cooked meat makes a good filling for green peppers or tomatoes. The latter need to be cooked only 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

* * *

Care of Bread Box.—Summer calls for diligent cleaning and airing of bread and cooky boxes, pantry and cupboard shelves and refrigerators. Since bread molds easily in the summer, it is best to buy just enough for each day's needs.

Stains on Ash Trays.—To remove cigarette stains from brass ash trays, rub the trays with a paste of salt and vinegar. Then wash them well in hot water and soap suds.

Cleaning Suede.—Clean soiled suede shoes and belts with sawdust slightly warmed in the oven. Rub it over the surface with a clean, soft rag, and to raise the pile rub gently afterwards with a piece of fine emery paper.

is with an eye to the future women are buying the smart coats now showing in the mid- mer collections, made of rich fabric. A costumé of the hand- e bengalines and such will car- hrough until the "frost is on pumpkin." The appeal of these some suits is not to be with- d by best dressed fashionables.

Red Dots White

Still the rage for polka dots goes on. In the picture it is white silk chiffon with red polka dots that fashions a most captivating evening dress. For country club wear and city roofs under starlit skies with music in the air here is the gown ideal. The halo hat in tones of red matches the kid belt which is tied with a fabric bow. The bracelet is the new-type bubble glass that glitters in prismatic colors.

Since Klemme Was Three Years Old...

. . . this always dependable, always constructive, always forward-looking bank has been an important factor in the development of the community.

Established in the year when Grover A. Cleveland was elected President of the United States, when Klemme was just 3 years old and when the population was less than 50 people, this bank has taken an active part in the development of its community for nearly five decades.

Always under able guidance, always progressive in providing constructive service but conservative in caring for its depositor's funds, the First National has remained through war and peace, through panic and prosperity, a faithful and helpful guardian of the Community's financial welfare.

Today as always we welcome both small individual accounts and the accounts of large business orgnizations. To every customer we offer a service worthy of this bank's distinguished past, fully alive to the needs of the present, and inspired by a firm faith in the future. As we have helped in the building of the Klemme that exists today, so we shall do our full share in the making of the greater Klemme that is yet to be.

MEETINGS FOR CORN SEALERS BEING HELD THIS WEEK

A series of four meetings are being held in Hancock County this week for the purpose of explaining and discussing the important problem of re-sealing and delivering corn that is now under seal

All of the meetings will be held in the evening and will open at 8:00 p. m. Farmers are urged to attend these meetings whether or not they have corn under seal, and the business men are given a most cordial invitation to attend.

It will be pointed out at these meetings whether or not they have corn under seal, and the business men are given a most cordial invitation to attend.

It will be pointed out at these meetings that the delivering of sealed corn will accomplish one thing· the cribs will be emptied On the other hand, the resealing of corn will accomplish several things· first, the borrower will retain title to the corn and be in a position to profit by price increases. Second, if the borrower is a feeder, he'll have the corn handy in case of a short crop Third, if he will build additional cribs or bins, this year's storage payment will take care of approximately half the cost and he will have the extra storage space for the future.

Scheduled below are the four meetings:

Tuesday evening, August 8th:
In the basement of the grade school building at Kannwha.
Wednesday evening, August 9th·
In the Court House at Garner
Thursday evening, August 10th·
In the Memorial Hall at Britt.
Friday evening, August 11th·

Lew Lewis 94 On Day That Klemme Celebrated Anniversary

LEW LEWIS, KLEMME CIVIL WAR VETERAN, REACHES 94

Lew Lewis, one of two Civil War veterans living in Hancock county, observed his 94th birthday anniversary Tuesday while Klemme staged the 50th anniversary celebration of the town's founding. The town made it a three-way celebration b yalso observing erection of a new $75,000 school.

Mr Lewis was born in the state of New York, August 8, 1845

When he was one year old his parents moved to Beaver Dam, Wis., where he attended the public school until the Civil war. He enlisted Oct. 12, 1861, and was mustered into the United States service at Camp Randall, Madison, Wis. He was assigned to company C. 16th Wisconsin volunteers in March. 1862. The regiment was sent to the front.

The first engagement he was in was the battle of Shiloh. After that the regiment was in several minor engagements. Then the group went on the Atlanta campaign where Mr. Lewis saw plenty of fighting and skirmishing He was on the March to the sea.

On the march through the Carolinas he was taken prisoner. He was released from Libby prison the afternoon before Richmond was taken. He received his honorable discharge Aug 25, 1865, and came to Clear Lake in 1867.

He has been married twice and has six children living, five sons and one daughter. He had three boys in the World War—one on the North sea, one in France and one did not go across. He has lived in Klemme the past 39 years.

EGYPTIANS HAVE HEARD THE WONDERS OF KLEMME TRAPS!

The secret is out! The Egyptians have heard about the Runway Mouse Trap manufactured in Klemme!

Believe it or not but Ed. Thompson, manager of the trap factory, received a letter last week from Alfred J. Medawar, importer at Alexandria, Egypt, inquiring about the Runway Mouse Trap.

The letter was postmarked July 20 and reached Klemme just ten days later.

How Mr. Medawar heard about the trap remains a mystery. He may have read about it in Mechanix Illustrated Magazine, which carried an article in one of its issues telling about the trap.

Evidently Egyptians are bothered with the mice, and if anything can bring them relief, the Runway Mouse Trap can!

Beauty Treatment

Iowa's oldest county courthouse is having its face lifted. The Van Buren county headquarters is being renovated and redecorated by a crew of WPA laborers. Built in 1842, it is believed to be the oldest Iowa courthouse now in use.

Klemme Farmers After State Laurels In Corn Contest

THREE KLEMME FARMERS TRY FOR STATE CORN CHAMPIONSHIP

Who will be the best corn grower in Hancock County?

This is a difficult question to answer but one that is sure to arise whenever farmers gather and the talk turns to local farm topics. Perhaps the answer to this important question isn't so far away since more than 30 Hancock County farmers have already entered the 1939 National Corn Growing Contest sponsored by the DeKalb Agricultural Association.

Klemme farmers who are seeking the coveted title of Corn King of Hancock County and who are shooting at state and national titles as well include Wilbur Arnold, V. A. Cook, and A. G. Koerner.

Prizes galore are to be awarded to the best corn growers in the county, state and nation including championship belts, beautiful trophies, and valuable chests of silver

The ability to produce a championship crop of corn actually does indicate to a large extent a farmer's all-around ability in this business of agriculture. With normal weather conditions, a bumper crop generally is the result of a combination of most of the good farm management practices including an efficient crop-rotation, proper seedbed preparation, efficient use of animal manures, balanced soil fertility, scientific cultural methods, and an intelligent selection of seed varieties

The closing date for entry in the 1939 contest will be sometime in September so local farmers who have not yet filed their application for entrance into the competition still have time to do so. A. G. Lau of Garner is handling the registration here.

Largest Crowd Ever On Klemme Streets

Pioneers Honored At Park Program

CELEBRATION BEGAN MONDAY NIGHT WITH LARGE CROWD

Band Concert And All Concessions Operated

Klemme's Fiftieth Anniversary and Home Coming Celebration got off to a good start at the Park Monday evening with a concert played by the Klemme Band and with all concessions operating until a late hour A fairly large crowd was on hand to take in the entertainment on the opening night.

Park Beautifully Lighted

The Park presented a beautiful appearance with thousands of colored lights strung around the band stand and between the trees and with the bright lights of the concessions it was a scene of gay activity

Many of the concessionnaires reported a brisk business on the opening night of the celebration.

Rain Delayed Program Until Noon Tuesday

Overcast skies and a drizzle that turned into a down-pour of rain Tuesday morning delayed the parade and program scheduled for the morning. By noon skies were clearing and the parade was held shortly after noon.

The parade was the biggest and best parade ever held in Klemme There were many beautifully decorated floats, old time displays, both motor drawn and horse drawn floats and comical displays. There was upward of fifty or more displays in the parade.

First place winners in the three divisions of the parade were Klemme Cooperative Grain Company, Larson-Kirkwood, Herman Stromer.

Program At Park

The highlight of the day's activity took place at the Park where the history of Klemme was read over a loud speaking system by Mrs. Ernest Lewis and W. Henry Galbreth. Early residents of Klemme especially honored included Civil War Veteran Lew Lewis, E. P. Dow of Forest City, one of the early business men; Herman Stromer who hauled the first loads of sand to Klemme for constructing a building; Mrs. Amanda Kirkwood of Mason City, the first woman to live in Klemme; Mrs. Vern Stone (Hazel Peitzke) the first child born in Klemme; Clarence Kluckhohn, the first boy born in Klemme; Mrs. George Kluckhohn, mother of the first boy; Tom Blank, an old resident and early railroader. Mr. Henry Wille, Klemme, was unable to be at the speakers' stand. Mr. Wille farmed the present site of Klemme. All were given Anniversary ribbons with their names printed on same and each was presented with a fifty cent silver piece.

Broadcast Program

A fifteen minute program was broadcast direct from the Park over KGLO between 3:30 and 3:45 when a brief history was given by W. C. Keraus, master of ceremonies for the day and at which time the honored guests were interviewed by "Hank" Hook.

Immense Crowd In Afternoon

The immense crowd here for the afternoon was provided with a variety of entertainment including street sports, concerts and musical numbers by the Britt and Klemme Bands and the Garner Drum and Bugle Corps. The final game in the softball tournament drew a large crowd which saw the Klemme team defeat Katter's team by a score of 15 to 4.

The midway attractions around the Park did a brisk business all afternoon and evening and a large crowd was always on hand there.

Evening Draws Large Crowd

The crowd swelled into several thousand people who came for the evening and it was the largest crowd ever seen in Klemme Both the Park and Main Street was one large mass of milling people. The evening program at the Park included a concert by the Britt Band, the second section of the Klemme History, platform stunts and contests and the giving away of several hundreds of dollars worth of merchandise and cash by the business men of Klemme.

The free pavement dance on Main Street provided entertainment for both a large crowd of dancers and a couple of thousand spectators watching on, while another large section of the crowd continued to remain at the Park, the center of amusements and midway attractions.

A Big Success

The many committees who handled the details of the celebration did a good job and they were well pleased with the way the celebration plans were carried out.

History Will Be Printed

A complete history of Klemme will be published and will be illustrated with pictures The material has been compiled by Arthur Wellemeyer and includes the history as read at the Park program Those who registered at the booth and every-one in the community will be notified in time so that they will receive a copy

Celebration Day Pictures Wanted

Anyone who took pictures of the parade and other features of the day's program, are requested to leave a copy at the Wellemeyer Store If you took any pictures, get in touch with Arthur Wellemeyer.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Late-Term Congressional Bolt Looks Like Foretaste of 1940; G.O.P. Expect Victory in House

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONGRESS:
Get Out of Town

As congress neared term's end, Franklin Roosevelt sat at his Hyde Park cottage with Democratic Chairman James Farley, talking and thinking. He could afford to do both, also to wish congress would get out of Washington in a hurry. Reason: The New Deal was being ground underfoot unceremoniously and indiscriminately in a manner that boded ill for any 1940 campaign plans the President might have. Moreover, everything indicated the poisonous Republican upsurge of recent weeks would rise to new heights in 1940. Expecting the 49 additional seats they need for a house majority, hoping for 16 new senate seats to make themselves a formidable minority, Republicans had the makings of a persuasive argument against the President's third-term ambitions. For if this happens, neither Mr. Roosevelt nor any other New Deal President could do much.

MARY NORTON

Equally important was what had already been done, not only by Republicans but conservative Democrats who found strength in coalition. The record of one week's insurgence:

Labor Board. New Jersey's Rep. Mary T. Norton got out of her sick bed to swallow bad medicine. Strongest foe of the bill offered by Virginia's Rep. Howard W. Smith to investigate the national labor relations board, she examined the record and found Mr. Smith had never cast a vote in favor of organized labor. Thus, when the house voted 253 to 135 to probe NLRB and (by custom) to place Representative Smith in charge, she felt justified in charging that he was "the last man in the world to pass on labor legislation or problems." New Deal poison here is that NLRB's alleged shortcomings publicized this summer and next winter will focus attention on the White House.

Hatch Bill. Passed by both senate and house, the "clean politics" measure of New Mexico's Sen. Carl M. Hatch is designed to keep relief out of political hands, and vice versa. Far more significant is that portion which forbids federal office holders from participating in national political conventions. Since 400 jobholders attended the 1932 G. O. P. pow-wow, and considerably more the 1936 Democratic convention, it is obviously the custom for pro-administration wheelhorses to write platforms and make nominations. Thus the New Deal will suffer at next year's Democratic convention because Mr. Roosevelt's best supporters may be absent.

Logan Bill. Passed quietly by the senate, this measure gave federal courts power to review acts of all federal quasi-judicial bureaus (like NLRB), striking the most severe blow at agencies created since 1933. Result: Administration and executive power would be badly crimped. Though last-minute senate reconsideration was possible, the bill was a cinch to pass if it reached the house.

Lending. Labeled by critics the "pump-priming bill of 1939," the President's pet $2,800,000,000 lending program fell to $2,490,000,000 passing through the senate banking committee where Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones became so exuberant in his praise for the bill that his tongue slipped. When he told the committee Reconstruction Finance corporation could handle the program two years with its present borrowing authority, smart Republicans jumped into the breach with a suggestion: Why, then, should congress bother legislating an entire new program when the same purpose could be accomplished by giving RFC a few new loan powers? In a sense this proved a Godsend; such action would put a hasty end to the last major measure still before congress. That done, the President's friends could get out of town until next winter.

DOMESTIC:
Nose Count

On August 15 someone in St. Joseph or Marshall county, Indiana, will hear a knock on his door. The 1940 census will be under way, tested at a cost of $20,000 prior to the most complete statistical inventory of the nation's resources ever attempted. Not until April will the official count be made by 140,000 enumerators working two weeks in urban centers and four weeks in rural areas. But from preliminary Indiana surveys the department of commerce will pick key questions.

No. 1 aim of the 1940 census is to check social trends. Since the depression changed social and economic status of most U. S. citizens, special emphasis will be placed on the following points:

Employment. Status of every citizen over 14 years of age during the week of March 24-30 will be checked, answering queries of many federal agencies.

Fertility. Great changes in reproduction rates among regions and in social classes have taken place since

CENSUS CHECKER AT WORK
She'll record social trends.

1929. The census bureau hopes to verify its hunch that few U. S. cities are reproducing themselves.

Internal Migration. Depression brought big population shifts as people sought new jobs in new places. Not only will the 1940 residence be checked against 1935's, but the bureau will specifically check an away-from-the-farm movement.

Education. Replacing the customary illiteracy question will be one asking the highest grade of school completed, since illiteracy's problem is rapidly disappearing.

MISCELLANY:
Recall Recalled

In Michigan, 80-year-old Gov. Luren D. Dickinson added a radio speech to his earlier warning about sin and high life evils, then took his critics by surprise to endorse heartily a recall petition circulated by Detroit Republican John B. Corliss Jr. The petition was withdrawn.

Japan's Victory

In preliminary discussions at Tokyo, British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie recognized the necessity of extraordinary Japanese defensive measures in China, and abandoned Britain's program of aid to China, marking an about-face of British policy in the Far East that will pave the way for ultimate Jap domination of all China and expulsion of British (and probably other western nations') commercial interests there.

. . . Her Sorrow

Meanwhile Japan's economy—already sorely pressed by the long war in China—suffers from an unprecedented drouth in central and southern areas, threatening the all-important rice crop and causing a shortage of hydroelectric power. The eleotricity shortage is especially serious because Japan needs power for her speedup program of key industries. And funds ordinarily going for war purposes must be used for farm relief.

Trend

How the wind is blowing . . .

REVENUE—U. S. tax collections for fiscal year 1938-39 totaled $5,181,573,952 against $5,658,765,314 the previous year, a decrease of $477,191,361. Biggest drop: Income taxes, which decreased $434,869,356.

FASHION—International Association of Clothing Designers forecasts gaudy clothes for men next spring, with daytime suit hues ranging from taupe to maroon. Trousers are expected to be narrower, showing contours (and defects) of the male leg.

BUSINESS—Retail trade has taken its expected midsummer slump but wholesale buying continues at high level, an indication of good business expectations during the autumn months.

EUROPE:
Wohltat and Dove

Sailing across the English channel one hot July day were Germany's Dr. Helmuth Wohltat and the Spectre of Peace. Headed for conversations with Britain's R. S. Hudson, secretary for overseas trade, the man who cemented Rumania's pact with Germany last spring needed only to wink his eye before European peace rumors began sprouting like wild oats:

'Positive' Plan. First rumor came from a "reliable informant" who said Secretary Hudson would ask Germany to disarm in exchange for a large British loan to transform her industry from a war basis to a peace basis—to hammer her sword into a plow share. Germany's war-lost colonies would either be returned or internationalized. The reported loan: 1,000,000,000 pounds. A few days later London papers discovered Mr. Hudson actually had made unofficial loan proposals to Herr Wohltat. Foreign office, London newspapers and Commons immediately howled for his resignation.

SECRETARY HUDSON

Siren of Berlin. With French-Polish-British solidarity apparently an actuality, there is every indication Germany is "testing the atmosphere" with one thing in mind—further appeasement. One government spokesman said Berlin "rejects a warlike solution" to the Danzig problem, thereby inviting peace conversations. Nothing is definite, only the time-tested "give-us-what-we-want-and-there-will-be-peace" formula which has never failed Der Fuehrer yet.

Philadelphia Plan. From its Washington bureau, the Philadelphia Inquirer published mysterious news of a five-power plan which had leaked from diplomatic circles. The plan: Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Poland would get 25 years of peace by (1) returning Danzig to Germany but leaving it a free port; (2) putting Italy on the Suez canal board; (3) neutralize African territory opposite Gibraltar; (4) guarantee all existing frontiers; (5) limit armies to 300,000. Within 24 hours every nation concerned had denied the rumor and gone back to its mid-summer grumbling.

Denials notwithstanding, rumors would not float with such utter abandon without some inspiration. International observers took them as a good omen of peace conversations, but shook their heads in fear of more British appeasement.

. . . Her Worry

Jap Ambassador to Russia Shigenori Togo (shown with wife), shadow boxes in Moscow with a touchy issue. Jap and Soviet troops are fighting bitterly on the Outer Mongolian - Manchukuoan border, while closer home Tokyo refuses to pay fines assessed against Jap coal and oil concessions operating on the Russ portion of Sakhalin island. Warships and troops stand ready for an emergency. Neither nation will give an inch.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—One day, a long time ago, a 17-year-old girl, Janet Lord, was walking along Hanover street in Boston, a place where you meet seafaring men from all ports of the civilized world. Attracted by a hymn tune, she stopped before a building, listened to the music of a melodeon, the lusty chorus of men's voices, and, at length, drawn by a power greater than her girlish timidity, she mounted the steps and so entered the headquarters of the Boston Seamen's Friends society. Thus destiny took hold of Janet's life and showed her the way to go.

'Mother Roper' To Sailors of The Seven Seas

Now Janet Roper, house mother of the Seamen's Church institute on South street, New York, is observing the fiftieth anniversary of her work among sailors, and there is hardly a forecastle from the Cape of Good Hope to Cairo, from John O'Groats to the Ambrose Light which does not contain at least one shellback beholden to her in any one of an infinite variety of ways.

She is slender, almost frail of physique. There are only a few traces of gray in her hair for all her 66 years, and her eyes snap with intelligence, vitality and kindly humor.

Several years ago Mother Roper devised the idea of publishing lists of missing seamen, copies being sent to seamen's homes throughout the world for display upon bulletin boards. The service has obtained extraordinary results. Sailors out of touch with their families for years have been located and contacts restored, brothers have been reunited in far-flung ports; all sorts of happy things have been effected. In all, to date, 5,327 sailormen supposedly swallowed in the sea or forever merged in the melting pots of alien ports, have been recovered from oblivion.

While in Boston, Mother Roper met and subsequently married a Congregational clergyman, engaged in similar service. They worked together in Gloucester, in Canada and in Oregon until her husband's death in 1915, when she came to the Seamen's institute on South street. She has no illusions about sailormen, holding them to be no better and no worse than other men. Her work, and her three daughters, living with her in Brooklyn, comprise her enthusiasms.

JUDGE MANLEY O. HUDSON of the Permanent Court of International Peace at The Hague, recently arrived here, is, characteristically, spending his vacation at Cambridge, Mass., looking into things of international juridical import. He was once Bemis professor of international law at Harvard, a post he took, somewhat in discouragement, when his career was diverted by the refusal in 1928 of the United States to join the League of Nations.

Sees the World In Terms of Human Species

The world's leading authority on all questions pertaining to comity among nations, this world to him is no abstract thing, no matter of geographical division. Human affairs and relationships are his passion. A Missourian—he was born in St. Peters in 1886—he reverses an attributed reaction of citizens of his commonwealth in that far from asking to be shown, he is at all times willing, nay eager, to demonstrate.

Genial, incurably optimistic, mentally brilliant, he enjoys nothing so much as to stand at bay in intellectual combat, indulging with D'Artagnan's ardor in sword-play, in thrust and riposte, until his opponents are either convinced or, at any rate, silenced. He will plunge into contest, or, if no struggle is waging, he is very likely to start one.

Now 52 years old, Judge Hudson entered the League of Nations secretariat with its origin in 1919, and ever since he has been attached to it. Two years earlier, he was with the inquiry and peace terms commission established by the state department and later, in Paris, was a member of the international law division of the committee to negotiate peace. Work then begun led directly to the World court bench when the league assembly gave him the second highest vote—48 out of 50—ever received by a candidate.

FARMER IMPORTANT IN GAME PROGRAM

Aid Sportsmen With Wild Life Restoration Plan

By JAY N. DARLING

The key figure in any program of wildlife restoration in the United States is the farmer.

The farmer controls that portion of the outdoors sought by the great majority of small-game hunters of the United States. Without a mutually beneficial relationship between farmer and sportsman, all conservation endeavor devoted to the increase of upland game fails of its prime object — the guarantee of sport to the general public.

It is true that the farmer has been the victim of the hoodlum type of hunter, and it is up to organized sportsmen to combat the evil of trespass on cultivated lands.

Excessive clearing and grazing have, at times, worked to the injury of the farmer through cutting down the supply of helpful wildlife. The drainage shark has promoted schemes that have impoverished the soil, lowered the watertable and wrecked the hopes of many a settler as well as destroying vast sources of wealth in fur, fish and wild fowl.

Man's ceaseless war against insect pests would be lost were it not for the help given by birds. Rodent pests are kept down by birds of prey. In certain areas the skunk, a heavy insect feeder and one of the few enemies of burrowing grubs, is highly important to agriculture. Other mammals — at times listed as "vermin" may be vastly more helpful than harmful to the farmers.

The assembling of source-material for education, in schools and colleges, in the basic principles of conservation is the function of a committee established by the National Wildlife federation.

Crop Rotation Kills Many Insect Pests

When one sees the annual loss to crops and property caused by insects, he is inclined to think that crop pests are getting more numerous and destructive from year to year. It is a fortunate farmer who has not experienced a loss from these six-footed animals. The Hessian fly takes a yearly toll of millions from American farmers. The chinch bug has ravaged our corn and wheat the past 50 years to the extent of several hundred millions of dollars. Figures in this state on codling moth, sugar beet web-worm and grasshoppers would be equally staggering. Moreover, several human diseases are carried only by insects. All can testify that gnats, flies, mosquitoes, etc., are an annoyance.

Where large acreages of one kind of crop are grown, one can naturally look for increased insect injury from year to year unless preventive and remedial measures are taken. The number of species that attack one plant is often large. About 200 attack clover, 200 affect corn, and 400 the apple. The first year the crop is grown, a person may assume that a few injurious insects will find their way into the field and do practically no injury. The insects will hibernate or pass the winter near by, and find conditions unusually favorable for development the next year should the same crop remain on the land. Each succeeding year the injury can be expected to increase.

On the other hand, where crops are changed the insects will emerge from winter quarters and find no food at hand. This will necessitate a search for it and only a few of the insects that successfully pass the winter will find their way into the new field. This is especially true of insects that pass the winter in the larval or worm stage and are not able to travel far. Of course all insects cannot be controlled by crop rotation.

Minerals for Cow

The minerals that are used most by the dairy cow and therefore most likely to be lacking in the ration are calcium, phosphorus, and common salt. Legume hays, when grown on soils not deficient in lime, will usually supply sufficient calcium. An adequate supply of phosphorus can be secured from the grain ration if it contains as much as 30 per cent of feeds rich in this material such as wheat bran or cottonseed meal. The salt should be supplied by adding one pound to each 100 pounds of the grain mixture and also allowing the animal free access to it in the pasture or exercise lot.

Perfect Percheron

Twelve leading live stock judges recently collaborated in setting up the Percheron standard, reported The Country Home Magazine. They agreed on medium size, short legs, thick bodies, heavy bones, short, straight backs, deep ribs, long, level croup, heavy muscles, moderately straight hocks, and reasonably long, sloping pasterns. Such a horse has life, action and alertness, and he can turn around without breaking down a dozen hills of corn.

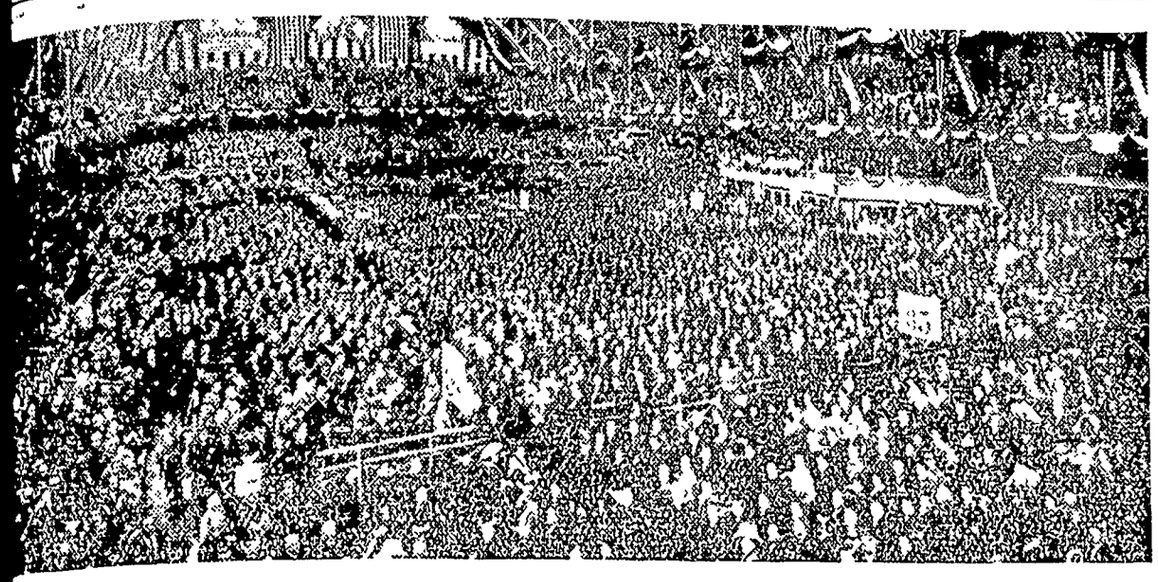
lans for the 1939 American Legion Convention In Chicago's Famed Coliseum Brings to Light a New Chapter in Nation's Presidential History



nterior of the Chicago Coliseum, where the American Legion 1939 national convention will open September The view was taken during the Republican national convention of 1912 when a plan to stampede the delegates the appearance of Theodore Roosevelt, who was later named as the National Progressive candidate, was doned. The plan to smuggle "Teddy" to the speakers' platform is told here for the first time.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

HE work of preparing for the 1939 national convention of the American Legion, which meets for the first time in Chicago's Coliseum, scene of the nomination of three sidents of the United States, has brought to light a new pter in American presidential history. It is the story of a to smuggle "Teddy" Roosevelt into the regular Republ convention back in 1912, which, if it had succeeded, ht well have changed the course of events in this country ing the last 25 years.

he story was told for the time recently by Charles Hall, veteran manager of Coliseum, while he and ip W. Collins, executive president of the Legion vention corporation, were king arrangements for the gathering of thousands of ionnaires from all parts he country in that historic vention hall on September The incident has addial interest because of the that a prominent figure the 1939 session will be ddy's" son, Col. Theodore sevelt, who helped organ- the Legion just 20 years . Bearing his credentials delegate he will walk, unpered, into the very hall ch his father was kept n entering by the use of bed wire!

ut, let Charles R. Hall, was one of the 1912 "plot-," tell the story himself: he Democratic party at Balre already had nominated drow Wilson and Thomas R. shall when the regular Rerican convention opened in the seum on June 18. Although logical thing for the Repubns to do was to renominate liam Howard Taft, who was completing his term as Pres-t, there was an undercurrent issatisfaction with the record h Taft had made in the White se And there was repeated of 'Teddy' Roosevelt—still a ic name for vote-getting. So sessions dragged along while delegates debated in their ds whether or not to renomi- Taft

While the convention marked e, I was approached by the George W. Porter, a Chicago talist, who was a strong sevelt supporter.

'Roosevelt is in Chicago,' he spered to me. 'Could you get into the convention unseen?'

My answer was: 'Of course! put him on the front of the form, right beside the chair- of the convention.'

'What'll you charge?' Porter ted to know.

'Hell's Bells!' I answered, don't think I'd charge for ng those convention delegates thrill of seeing Teddy, do ?'

But the very next day I found that news of our 'plot' had ed out. The sergeant-at-arms he convention ordered me to tch rolls of barbed wire along footlights in front of the aker's platform. I guess they ght we were going to have dy' planted on the floor of convention, start a demontion and then rush him up center aisle and on to the form.

They didn't know that their bed wire wouldn't have ped 'T. R.' if we had gone ugh with our plan. I was go- to admit him through a secret r door, rush him into a tunnel rance a few feet away and then ugh the tunnel and up a short t of steps. When he hit the step, he would have been be- their barbed wire, directly ng every delegate in the ding.

If he had done that, it would stampeded the delegates."

declared Phil Collins, to whom Mr. Hall was relating the incident. "I remember what happened at that convention—a woman delegate mentioned Roosevelt's name and it started a demonstration which lasted for two hours before it could be stopped."

"There's not a doubt about it," agreed Mr. Hall. "I've often wondered why the plan was never carried through. All I know is that George Porter and his friends dropped the matter. I never asked him why and he never volunteered the information. . . . But I wish they had gone ahead. I was ready for my part in it."

As the 73-year-old Coliseum manager fingered an old-fashioned scarf-pin in his tie, he continued: "Maybe if they had gone ahead I wouldn't have had this pin. You see, it was given to me by 'Teddy' himself. But that was six weeks later when the 'Bull Moosof 1893 were under way, a movement was started to purchase Libby prison and move it to the city on the lake as a Civil war museum. Prominent in this movement was the Chicago historian and collector, C. F. Gunther.

The work of moving the prison from Richmond to Chicago began in December, 1888. Each board, beam, timber, and block of stone was numbered and lettered and the task of transporting these and the 800,000 bricks in the main structure required the use of 132 20-ton cars by the Chesapeake & Ohio railway The prison was rebuilt on the site of the present Coliseum and re-opened as a war museum on September 21, 1889 (just 50 years and four days before the opening of this year's Legion convention!) Appropriately enough, its first meeting was a G. A. R. reunion. Meanwhile a massive battlement, which was designed to provide a flashy "front" for the museum, was built along the Wabash avenue side of the transplanted prison from stone that was quarried within the Chicago city limits of that time.

Thousands of visitors, before and during the 1893 World's fair, were attracted to the museum and its historical relics. However, this old prison museum was torn down in 1900 to make way for the present Coliseum but the ers' met in the Coliseum and nominated Roosevelt and Sen. Hiram Johnson of California as their candidates on the Progressive party ticket.

Charles R. Hall, veteran manager of the Coliseum, looks over the official badges of some of the national nominating conventions held in that building. He is wearing a scarfpin presented to him by Theodore Roosevelt after the National Progressive convention in 1912.

In addition to contributing this "now-it-can-be-told" item to American political history, the veteran manager of the Coliseum is also an authority on another story which links this building with another historic structure. That was the famous Libby prison in Richmond, Va., of Civil war days which was moved to Chicago, piece by piece, 50 years ago, and rebuilt on the present site of the Coliseum.

During the Civil war Libby was known as the "Palace Prison of the Confederacy" where 40,000 Union soldiers, most of them officers, were confined. The main prison was originally a tobacco warehouse, made of 13-inch bricks which were brought to this country from England. While plans for the Chicago World's fair stone wall which was its "front" still faces on Wabash avenue. Relics in the museum became scattered, some of them being given to the Chicago Historical society where they are still preserved.

"Bricks of the prison were distributed to G. A. R. posts throughout the country and some of them were sold for a dollar apiece," Mr. Hall recalls. "But even in recent years, when we excavated to provide a pool for the diving horse of a circus or for other purposes, some of those old bricks from Libby prison came to light. The floors and other features of the Coliseum have been altered dozens of times to meet the needs of special events. But one distinctive feature remains unchanged. Our outside walls, with their turrets and observation posts, today are exactly as they were when they surrounded the transplanted historic Libby prison."

This year the American Legion "comes of age"—in more respects than one Not only is it the organization's twenty-first annual convention, but, according to National Commander Stephen F. Chadwick, the 1939 assembly of the veterans will have a more serious tone than ever before. It will be provided by "American Democracy," first convention keynote in Legion history. Moreover, convention program plans call for large-scale participation by the wives, sons and daughters of the Legionnaires who will accompany them to Chicago

The history of the American Legion goes back to the year 1919 and to Paris, France. That story is told by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, one of its founders, thus:

"No one man can claim to be the founder of the American Legion. I got the idea from a wounded sergeant in a hospital. He said we should form an organization of veterans of the war, adding, 'we have stuck together in the bad times, let's stick together in the good ones.'

"After that, I talked with numbers of people, many of whom had been thinking on these lines. The problem was to get the organization under way The Armistice had been declared I asked some regular army friends at G. H. Q if soldiers from each of the American divisions then in France could be ordered to Paris to discuss the idea They told me they could not do that directly, but that they could order such a group of men to meet in Paris and discuss the morale of the American troops.

"We held the meeting on morale. Afterwards, at a dinner, we discussed plans for a veterans' organization. All agreed on certain principles. The first was that no difference should be made between those who had served overseas and those who had not —as the desire to serve was what counted. The second, that the Legion was to be a democratic organization, in which there should be no question of rank, and privates would get a full chance to tell the generals what they thought of them. Third and last, the organization should concern itself with policies, not with partisan politics. Next an organization committee was appointed. Eric Fisher Wood was named secretary, Bennett Clark, today senator from Missouri, vice chairman, and I, chairman.

"We decided to hold two meetings, one in Paris and the other practically simultaneously in the United States. Bennett Clark, Eric Wood and a number of others took the responsibility for the Paris caucus. I had been ordered home, and agreed to arrange the caucus at home.
